EVOLT IN HOUSE VER DROUTH BILL HREATENS G. O. P.

ffort to Hold Amount to $30,000,000 by Preventing Vote on $60,000,000 Fixed by Senate.

ANY REPUBLICANS OPPOSE 'GAG RULE' s Result of Election They Ho_e to Escape Longworth Yoke, but Leader Must Be Found.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—For he first time since 1923, Republic n leaders in the House of Rep esentatives are confronted with he threat of a party revolt. Signs f impending mutiny have been pparent among their followers r since Congress met and the uation may reach a crisis next eek on the question of standing y the House appropriation of 30,000,000 for drouth relief, as gainst the $60,000,000 fund voted y the Senate. Such an event, if resulted in curtailing seriously e autocratic powers now exer ised by the House leaders, would stroy the last bulwark of ad inistration control over Con ress, and would render an extra ession of Congress almost inevita le.

Discontent has been growing gainst the "gag rule" under hich three men composing the iron triumvirate" of Longworth, ilson and Snell, have been able ractically to dictate all the ac ions of the House. It was vastly ncreased by the outcome of the st election, when more than 50 Republican Congressmen lost their eats, and approximately 50 more craped through by majorities of ess than 1000.

Many of these Republican mem ers feel that they owe their de eat or near-defeats to the unpop larity of the Hoover policies, oupled with the fact that they ave been compelled to support hose policies under the whip of arty discipline, as ruthlessly exer ed by Speaker Longworth, ma ority Leader Tilson and Chairman nell of the Rules Committee.

An Excellent Opportunity.

Some of those who were defeat d hope to come back, and nearly ll of those who scraped through y the skin of their teeth wish to e assured of larger majorities ext time. Many of them believe is can be accomplished only if ey have greater freedom to vote nd speak as they please. Such freedom can only be gained by ending, or at least softening, the iron rule to which they are now subjected.

The drouth relief bill will afford them an excellent opportunity to assert their independence. The administration is demanding that the appropriation be limited to the $30,000,000 recommended by the House Committee on Agriculture. President Hoover's heated statement this week denouncing "raids on the treasury" was accepted generally as a protest against the Senate bill doubling the size of the fund.

House leaders apparently are determined on an attempt to force the House bill through Monday, under a motion suspending the rules. This would prevent the offering of amendments, and would limit debate to 20 minutes on each side. A two-thirds majority is required to pass a bill under such conditions, and Representative John McDuffe, of Alabama, the Democratic whip, has issued a call for Democratic members to attend and vote against "this effort to pass legislation under gag rule."

How Procedure Works.

This procedure would offer members a choice only of voting for the $30,000,000 appropriation or against it. On the other hand, if that motion fails, the measure must be submitted under a rule permitting members to make a choice between the $30,000,000 house figure and the $60,000,000 Senate figure, and in this instance a majority vote decided.

Many Republicans who might be expected to stand by their leaders on the House bill, would be compelled by political consideration to vote for the Senate figure if confronted with a choice between the two. So important is this consideration that the Republican leaders apparently think they stand a better chance of getting a two-thirds vote on the first proposal than a simple majority on the second.

Nevertheless, they are alarmed over the possibility that many Republican members may desert them

NORTHWESTERN U. PLANS TO EXTEND CAMPUS INTO LAKE

Development of Land Reclaimed From Waters of Michigan Proposed.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 13.—President Walter Dill Scott is looking half a mile out into Lake Michigan for the answer to the next decade of Northwestern University's development. Extension of the campus on land reclaimed from the adjoining lake is a definite project, he told members of his faculty at a dinner honoring the tenth anniversary of his administration last night. His plans include:

A campus airport, utilization of television, radio, the picture screen, foreign travel in methods of instruction; choosing of instructors for their ability to make human contacts with students rather than achievements in research; new colleges in aviation, criminology, personnel and religion, and a faculty dwelling block of buildings on the campus itself.

'WAVING GIRL' OF THE SEA TO END 25-YEAR VIGIL

Expected to Give Up Post at Savannah When Brother, Keeper of Lights, Is Retired.

By the Associated Press.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Dec. 13.—Sailors who followed the masts of full-riggers to strange places first saw her as their ships glided from Savannah harbor and headed for open sea. She stood on a cottage porch and waved a Godspeed. That was 25 years ago and they called her the "waving girl."

The age of steam and steel relegated most full-riggers to limbo. But the "waving girl" did not change except in years. Every ship that entered or left the harbor received her greeting or farewell.

She is Miss Florence Martus and lives with her brother, George W. Martus, keeper of the lights at the entrance of the harbor. Martus will be retired next May at the age of 70 and his sister is expected to leave the cottage, too.

Sailors in all parts of the world know Miss Martus and have woven many legends around her. One is that a sailor friend was lost at sea and that her greetings and farewells to ships are tributes to him.

BOY SCOUT AND LEADER KILLED

Struck by Train Near Tuxedo Park, N. Y.; Two Injured.

By the Associated Press.

TUXEDO PARK, N. Y., Dec. 13.—A Brooklyn Boy Scout and his Scoutmaster were killed and two Boy Scouts were seriously injured as a Chicago-bound Erie express train plowed through the group on a trestle over the Ramapo River late today.

The dead, all of Brooklyn, were William Foley, 14 years old, and William Lewis, 28 Scoutmaster, in charge of the group. John Shanley, 15, and Charles Furchner, 14, also of Brooklyn, were taken to Tuxedo Memorial Hospital, where one of Shanley's legs was amputated. Furchner was reported to have suffered a fractured skull. The victims were part of a group of about 10 Scouts who arrived here earlier in the day on their way to a Scout camp.

$600,000 RAISED FOR RELIEF WHEN ARMY BEATS NAVY

70,000 Spectators Pay From $5 to $50 a Seat for Salvation Army Fund in Yankee Stadium.

NOTABLE FIGURES AMONG THRONG

Cadets and Middies Parade and Add Great Show to Thrilling Contest on Gridiron.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—The greatest show football has to offer was piled into the Yankee Stadium this afternoon for the relief of the needy, and it earned upwards of $600,000. The Army defeated the Navy 6 to 0 before 70,000 spectators who paid $5 to $50 a seat for the aid of the Salvation Army relief fund.

It was the highest price scale in the annals of the game. And the gate receipts of three-fifths of $1,000,000 approached the record set by the same teams four years ago when they met in the larger Soldier Field in Chicago.

The multitude which braved a bright but bitter December day to see the renewal of the clash between the nation's military and naval academies truly gave twice. They gave a handsome sum for the benefit of the unemployed, which will be augmented by thousands dollars when donations from radio listeners and others are totaled, and they gave themselves a rich thrill of sport and spectacle.

Cadets and Midshipmen Parade.

They pulsed in quick step time to the martial melodies and tread of close upon 3000 Cadets and Midshipmen who paraded into the Stadium just after noon and kept it alive and ringing until dusk with songs and yells and marching and assorted antics.

They craned their necks to see dozens of notable figures out of the pages of statecraft and the social register—chief among them, Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley and Secretary of the Navy Charles Francis Adams, who came from Washington with parties of friends and colleagues to witness the event.

Another honored guest was Evangeline Booth, commander of the Salvation Army, seeing her first football game. She expressed her gratitude to those who enabled the game to be played for the benefit of the Salvation Army, promised that the spending of the fund would be regarded "as a privilege only equalled by its great responsibility," and asked a blessing upon "every hand and heart that has contributed to this unprecedented charity."

Middies and Their Colored Cards.

The student corps from West Point and Annapolis, one in its brass-buttoned gray and the other in dark blue crowned by caps of white, outdid themselves to amuse and amaze the 70,000. The show they put on was climaxed between the halves when the Midshipmen got out colored cards and made the great bleacher rectangle where they sat a succession of gay designs.

First, they made letters with the colored cards spell "Hello, New York." Then the kaleidescopic oblong said, "Ahoy!" picturing a lighthouse beside a sea of blue and under a sky of crimson. They shifted their cards to make a shield of red, white and blue, then sang "Anchors Aweigh" as the ocean of cards became a navy anchor on a field of white. The placards became an army mule, which was made to kick and was followed on the scene by a navy goat, which magically butted the mule out of the picture. Finally the cards became an American flag which waved as the midshipmen swung from side to side in even rhythm.

Hurley and Adams on Radio.

Between the halves Secretary Hurley crossed the field and escorted back to a michrophone Secretary Adams. Both were presented to the air audience by Mayor Walker of New York, and during the last and exciting half of the game Secretary Adams was the guest of Secretary Hurley in the latter's box on the Army side of the field.

The kickoff sent end over end down the field a football autographed by President Hoover, the Secretaries of War and Navy, Mayor Walker and the players on the two teams. This pigskin was withdrawn from competition at once, and was to have been auctioned to the highest bidder between halves. But when $5000 had been raised in the auction, starting with a

ADVISES ORDERING WEBSTER GROVES TO PAY SEWER TAX

$58,644 ADVANCED FOR START OF WORK

Report Calls Payment of Warrants by Tax Levy "Clear Legal Duty"—Supreme Court to Decide.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 13.—A recommendation that the Missouri Supreme Court issue a writ of mandamus sought by the Boatmen's National Bank of St. Louis, to compel the levy and collection of a preliminary tax in Webster Groves general sewer District No. 1, St. Louis County, to pay expenses incurred by the district, was made in a report filed with the court by former Circuit Judge Emil Roehrig of Warrenton, special commissioner in the case.

The bank filed the suit in the Supreme Court several months ago to compel repayment of $58,644 advanced on expense and salary warrants issued by a former board of supervisors of the district, when there were no funds in the district treasury. The warrants held by the bank, with interest, total $63,997.

The special commissioner's findings, if adopted by the court, will hold property owners in the district subject to payment of expenses incurred by the former board, and would make the levy and collection of the tax mandatory. No sewers have been built by the district. The expenses incurred represented preliminary organization, surveys and salaries.

Case to Be Argued.

No action has been taken on the report by the court. The commissioner was appointed to take evidence and make a recommendation. His findings will be considered, together with the evidence, after the case is argued before the court by counsel for both sides.

The special commissioner held that the bank was the lawful owner of the warrants, that the warrants were lawfully issued by the district in payment of debts, and that it was "the clear legal duty" of the board of supervisors of the district to levy the tax, and the duty of the county collector to collect it, for payment of the warrants and interest. He said it was not a discretionary matter for the board.

The Webster Groves general sewer district No. 1 was one of several organized in St. Louis County under the Ralph sewer law. This law has been the cause of considerable protest by groups of taxpayers, who have indicated they will ask the 1931 Legislature to repeal the act.

$58,644 in Warrants.

The former supervisors of the district issued 110 warrants from June 7, 1928, to July 9, 1930, totaling $58,644 for expenses, salaries, organization, surveys and other items. The district never has had any funds in its treasury, according to the evidence.

A written agreement was entered into between the Boatmen's National Bank and the Board of Supervisors, the commissioner stated, by which the bank would purchase the district's warrants for preliminary expenses up to $75,000. The board agreed to deposti any funds in the district treasury in the bank, until the warrants were paid, and that it would levy a preliminary tax on property in the district to pay the warrants.

The board ordered a levy of 10 cents on each 100 square feet of property in the district, on Sept. 26, 1929, but it never was certified to the County Collector and never legally completed. The membership of the board changed later. The new board, on June 6, 1930, ordered the preliminary tax levy set aside, and adopted a resolution that no further obligations be incurred or paid by the district.

Special Commissioner Roehrig held that the action of the board in setting aside the levy ordered by its predecessor, before it was certified or completed, and in resolving that it would not incur or pay any further obligations "amounted merely to an expression of said board's attitude" and did not impair the right of the bank to payment or to the bank's right to demand levying of tax to provide funds for payment.

He held the bank had a clear legal right to issuance of the writ of mandamus and that the Board of Supervisors of the district had legal power to levy the tax necessary for payment of the warrants and interest.

GRANDMOTHER OF MRS. SHEPARD DEFENSE WITNESS

Testifies Wife Army Doctor Is Accused of Poisoning Drank Hard and Wished She Were Dead.

ALCOHOLISM OR SUICIDE SUGGESTED

Trial, Which Goes Into Its Third Week Tomorrow, Has Cost Government $175,000 So Far.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Kan., Dec. 13.—Mrs. Zenana H. Curtis, 86-year-old grandmother of Mrs. Zenana Shepard, took the witness stand for the defense today at the trial of Maj. Shepard who is charged with wife murder. She supported the defense contention that Mrs. Shepard drank excessively and expressed a wish to be dead.

The prosecution alleges Shepard, 59-year-old army surgeon, poisoned his second wife at Fort Riley, Kan., June 15, 1929, in order to be free to marry Miss Grace Brandon, 24, a San Antonio, Tex., stenographer.

Mrs. Curtis was the first of two witnesses for the defense who testified previous to the adjournment of the trial until Monday. The Government rested earlier in the day.

With the testimony of Mrs. Curtis, Shepard's attorneys began to develop suggestions of suicide or alcoholsim as possible explanations of Mrs. Shepard's death.

"Liked Hard Liquor."

The aged woman, whose only apparent infirmity was deafness, replied to questioning in a steady voice. As she left the stand, Mrs. Curtis asked defense counsed: "Did I make you a good witness?" Harry S. Class of Denver replied, "fine."

The grandmother related that Mrs. Shepard had lived with her before Mrs. Shepard's first marriage, and after her divorce, and that she drank a great deal. Asked how much liquor Mrs. Shepard used, she replied: "I could only judge by the number of flasks she hid in the cellar, they were numerous."

Mrs. Curtis testified Mrs. Shepard liked "hard liquor"; that she desired to break the habit, but found it overwhelming and that at one time wrote her she wished she were dead.

Mrs. Curtis was followed on the stand by Mrs. Joseph J. Fraser of Denver, Colo., wife of an army officer, who testified Mrs. Shepard was "a woman of moods."

Judge Hopkins overruled a defense motion for a directed verdict of acquittal.

Government Rests.

Completition of the reading began yesterday of a statement Maj. Shepard is alleged to have made to Government agents at Denver, March 17, 1930, closed the Government's case. Mrs. Jane Leader, stenographer who took the statement, read from her stenographic notes many alleged assertions of the Army officer which conflicted with testimony adduced by the prosecution.

The trial will enter its third week Monday.

Presentation of the Government's case, based on circumstantial evidence, occupied parts of seven days and was given by nearly 50 witnesses drawn from all sections of the nation and from Nicaragua. The defense testimony probably will occupy most of next week, with a possibility the jury may receive the case by Friday or Saturday after Shepard takes the stand.

Court attaches estimated the Government had spent approximately $100,000 preparing the case and between $50,000 and $75,000 since the trial began.

Miss Brandon sat in the District Attorney's office during the trial. She said she was refreshed, following most of Thursday and Friday on the witness stand for the prosecution. "I am glad that terrible ordeal is behind me," she said. "I cannot understand how people can swarm into a courtroom and listen to the lives of others being torn to pieces."

DOCTOR WOUNDED BY NEGRO HOLDING UP DRUG STORE

Dr. William Demko Interrupts Robber in Blank's Pharmacy, 1323 South Broadway, and Is Shot.

Dr. William Demko, 4400 Arsenal street, was shot and wounded seriously last night by a Negro robber when he interrupted a hold-up back of the prescription counter at Blank's drug store, 1323 South Broadway. The bullet entered the right chest and lodged just over his stomach.

As Dr. Demko rounded one end of the counter, which runs across the rear of the store and is surmounted by a glass-shield, he saw the robber with his revolver thrust against the ribs of William Rudolph, manager of the store, at the other end of the counter.

The physician lunged toward the robber. As he did so, the Negro fired one shot and ran from the store, taking $24 which lay on the counter.

"I was alone in the store," Rudolph related, "when the Negro, a young fellow with a black overcoat and gray fedora hat, came in. He asked for some medicine and I stepped back of the prescription counter to get it. He followed me around the counter.

"'We don't allow anyone back here,' I told him, but he pulled out a pistol and said, 'Give me all the dough,' reaching for $25 in bills and change I was about to sort.

"Just as he spoke, Dr. Demko, whose office is two doors north, at 1319 South Broadway, appeared at the other end of the counter. He started toward the man, but the Negro shot at him. The bullet just missed my ear. The man ran out, dropping a quarter as he did so."

Dr. Demko was taken to Lutheran Hospital.

REBELLION IN SPAIN REPORTED PUT DOWN

Revolutionaries Said to Be Fleeing in Disorder After Losing 20 Killed in Encounter Near Placencia.

MARTIAL LAW IN THREE CITIES

Despite Official Communique Telling of Victory for Federal Forces, Reports Persist Situation Continues Grave.

By the Associated Press.

MADRID, Dec. 13.—In and out among the snowdrifts of the northern mountain passes, Federal cavalry today harried retreating rebel forces, fleeing in disorder after a furious clash in the vicinity of Placenia, in which about 20 rebels were killed and many wounded.

Premier Berenguer, with dispatches from the front before him, asserted that the revolt, which began in the garrison at Jaca yesterday, had been ended by the Federal victory, but reports persisted that the trouble was not yet over.

Troops were being concentrated in the revolutionary north near the French border and late this afternoon more than 3000 men were sent to the Huesca sector from the Madrid garrison. The Government was ready to proclaim martial law throughout the kingdom, but the authorities profess to think that this extreme measure will be unnecessary.

While guerrilla warfare continued tonight through the rugged, snow-covered mountain passes of Aragon under the slopes of the Pyrenees, the Government was taking additional steps to crush the rebellion.

14 Army Planes in Action.

Fourteen army planes took off from the army air field at Madrid for the north and new troops are being sent to strategic points.

Life in Madrid was normal tonight as it was in Barcelona, Valencia, and the other large cities. There was some street-fighting at Lerida between police and groups of demonstrators and one suspected revolutionist was killed. Strong forces of civil guards were ordered out and all troops were confined to their barracks.

The Minister of the Interior tonight issued the following communique:

"The insurrectionary movement has been suppressed. The rebels, who were defeated by the Huesca garrison supplemented by reinforcements from Saragossa, were forced to retire after some resistance, abandoning numerous weapons and some lorries. About 100 fugitives were captured. Public order everywhere else in Spain has not been impaired."

100 Prisoners Captured.

More than 100 prisoners were captured and a number of others wounded, according to reports to the Premier, among them several rebel officers who are to be court-martialed. There were unverified reports that a summary court-martial had executed some of the captives on the spot.

Gen. Berenguer said the Federal troops had moved from two points toward Jaca, crushing the rebels in a wedge and putting them to flight. A quantity of ammunition and stores were left behind by the defeated forces.

The Federals opened their attack with field artillery, swept the enemy back and brought the cavalry into play as the rebels broke ranks in a rout.

Another statement said that when the defeated rebels turned back toward Jaca they were met by Loyal troops who had by this time taken over the city and were forced to flee to the mountains and forests.

Advices from Huesca say that leading figures of the Jaca rebellion went before a court-martial at 8 o'clock tonight and probably will be shot Monday.

Among those up for trial are Capt. Salinas, a rebel artillery officer captured after today's battle; Capt. Garcia, Capt. Galan, Lieut. Munis and Pio Diaz, chief of the Republican agitators in Jaca, who was proclaimed its Mayor after the revolt opened.

The father of Capt. Salinas is Gen. Salinas, a loyal officer, who is chief of staff of the Saragossa division. The latter left for Mad-

$300,000 RELIEF BILL FOR JOBLESS SIGNED BY MAYOR

Measure Becomes Effective at Once — $25,000 to Be Turned Over to Citizens' Committee.

ESTIMATE BOARD TO DIRECT USES

Ordinance for $200,000 to Speed Up Regular City Work Is Combined With General Appropriation.

Mayor Miller signed yesterday the ordinance which he introduced in the Board of Aldermen and which was passed unanimously on Friday, appropriating $300,000 for relief of the unemployed. The bill became effective at once, as it had an emergency clause.

The first use of the fund will be to provide the Citizens' Committee on Public Relief with $25,000 for quick use in relieving distress and finding jobs for the idle. This will be the first cash available for the committee, which the Mayor appointed a number of weeks ago under the chairmanship of Birch O. Mahaffey.

Expenditures will be under direction of the Board of Estimate and Apportionment.

The Mayor's ordinance to appropriate immediately $200,000 for various improvements which otherwise the city would not have made before next summer is to be combined with the general supplementary appropriation bill, up for passage early next month. It was introduced with the relief fund bill several weeks ago.

Says St. Louis Business Recovery Awaits Building Revival.

The St. Louis district must depend upon a revival of the building industry to bring about the first ray of hope for a return to normal business conditions, George C. Smith, director of the Industrial Bureau of St. Louis, said yesterday in discussing emergency methods of unemployment relief. Smith has been authorized by the Industrial Club of St. Louis to direct the industrial relations work of the Citizens' Committee for the Relief of Unemployment.

"There is probably no industry, certainly no major industry," Smith said, "which affects unemployment as directly as does the building industry. A dollar spent in building construction goes more completely into wages than does a dollar spent for almost any other thing. It is generally estimated that a construction dollar represents 80 to 85 cents in wages. I do not refer to construction wages alone, but mean to include also wages paid for labor in the production of the building materials and in their transportation from the mine, forest or quarry to the factory and from the factory to the construction job.

Decline Began in 1928.

"St. Louis has experienced an unemployment situation in the building industry of quite a serious nature for a good many months, the present decline in building operations having started about the latter part of 1928. In 1929 the total value of building permits issued locally amounted to only $27,330,623, as compared with $42,819,495 for 1928, a decrease of 36.17 per cent. In 1930 the situation has become even more acute, the permits issued for the first 11 months of this year amounting to only $15,074,399, as compared with $39,898,598 for the corresponding period of 1928, a decrease of 62.22 per cent.

"Ordinarily our country in the past has pulled itself out of more serious depressions through the revival of purchasing by three separate groups: the farmer, the railroads and the builder. We cannot now hope for relief from the first two of these usual sources.

Calls Confidence Necessary.

"We must, then, depend upon the revival of the building industry to bring about the first ray of hope for a return to normal business conditions. This revival cannot occur unless business men have confidence in the fairness and efficiency of labor and in the reasonableness of prices for both labor and material. The extent to which this confidence has been developed is not yet apparent.

"The Industrial Bureau is now completing a partial survey of construction activity scheduled for the St. Louis district during 1931, which may suggest a general quickening of building operations. Any development in this direction is so important in the relief of an unemployment problem that the outcome of this survey may lend encouragement to an ultimate solution of the situation in St. Louis."

Citizens' Group to Avoid Duplication and Waste Effort.

The activities of the Citizens' Public Relief Committee will be carried out, as far as possible, through established agencies to avoid duplication and waste effort, Birch O. Mahaffey, chairman of the committee, announced yesterday.

"The principal objectives of the committee are reattachment of workers to payrolls, stimulation of business, efforts to provide work, and co-ordination of relief agencies," Mahaffey said. "We believe that industry and business will do their part. We will also ask every home owner to help by going ahead with odd jobs, which provide work. Our committee is not a dole organization, yet we realize that the funds and facilities at the disposal of the established relief agencies are not adequate to cope with the demand. We, therefore, shall endeavor to provied the help needed to enable St. Louis to care for its own during the winter.

"All our divisions are now organized, and at work. We intend to leave undone nothing approved by the sound judgment of earnest St. Louisans which offers promise of softening the rigors of winter to those of our citizens willing to work."

A depot for receiving clothing to be distributed through established agencies will be opened tomorrow at 114 North Ninth street.

REVOLT IN HOUSE OVER DROUTH BILL THREATENS G. O. P.

on the first vote, and several conferences were held today to discuss the situation. In the meantime, Republican whips were busily canvassing the majority members in an effort to ascertain whether the necessary two-thirds could be mustered. They admitted the vote would be "close."

Democratic Leader John Garner said tonight that his canvass indicated defeat of the motion to suspend the rules. If that occurs and the two bills are then submitted to the House, there will be a stampede of Republicans, representing drouth-stricken states, to vote for the Senate bill, he declared.

The breakdown of Republican leadership in either case might easily precipitate the general revolt which party leaders fear. The Republican rank and file seem ripe for an insurrection of the sort which deprived "Czar" Cannon of his principal powers as speaker in 1910 and led to the split of 1912.

What the discontented element seems to need most is a leader. The insurgent movement of 1910 was led by Representative George W. Norris of Nebraska, now leader of the Progressive group in the Senate. The man most frequently mentioned for leadership of the potential revolt is Representative C. William Ramseyer of Iowa. He is able, courageous, popular, and enjoys the respect of the House. But he moves with care and caution.

CONFEREES AGREE ON EMPLOYMENT BILL

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Speedy completion of the emergency employment appropriation by Congress is in prospect.

Conferees of the Senate and House reached an agreement today in their difference over the public improvements fund, deciding on $116,000,000. The Senate proposed $118,000,000 and the House $110,000,000.

The conferees at a hurried and informal meeting also agreed to restore the provision in the House bill giving the President a free hand in spending the money. Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader, who obtained elimination of this authority, said he would not fight it further at the cost of delay in getting the appropriation into the hands of unemployed workers.

Another Conflict Likely.

Meanwhile, Senate leaders looked ahead to the prospective contest Monday over the resolution of Senator LaFollette (Rep.), Wisconsin, declaring the Senate in favor of relief, even at the cost of increased taxes for the "wealthy."

The Republican leadership is uneasy lest another blast come from President Hoover on this question. The leaders have asked the President to consult on matters of tactics, pointing to their inability to defend his accusation early in the week that some Congressional relief advocates were playing politics at the expense of human misery. They are trying to reshape a co-operation movement from the wreckage of the harmony program which followed that statement.

Enactment of the $116,000,000 appropriation, which will become available immediately for public improvements in all sections of the land, is expected early in the week.

Thinks It Had Legislation.

In saying he would not press further against the provision giving the President freedom of action in spending the money, Senator Robinson said he still considered it bad legislation. However, he said he had been informed that Houses Democrats had been consulted on this point and had agreed to it in view of the emergency nature of the bill.

The conferees also struck from the bill the Senate provision that contractors use only local labor and pay it the highest wage scale prevailing in the locality.

The amendment of Senator Oddie (Rep.), Nevada, adding $5,000,000 to the bill for construction of roads on unreserved public domain and Indian reservations, was cut to $3,000,000 and that of Senator Hayden (Dem.), Arizona, providing $3,000,000 for highway construction in national forests, was retained.

Einstein Urges Peaceful Policy in Palestine

In Radio Address Advises Jews to Cultivate Relations With Arabs There—Receives Civic Welcome in New York.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—An appeal to Jews of America not to be discouraged "by the difficulties which seem to face us at present in Palestine," was broadcast today in a radio address by Prof. Albert Einstein. "Such experiences," he said, "are the tests of the Jewish people's will to live."

Asserting that "undoubtedly certain statements and measures, taken and pronounced by British officials have been subjects of just criticism," he added, that "we must learn the lesson of what has recently happened."

He urged the Jews to cultivate relations with the Arab people, to avoid for the future "those dangerous tensions which can be exploited for the purpose of provoking hostile action against us."

The address was under the auspices of Avukah, the American student Zionist federation.

Earlier in the day Prof. Einstein received a civic welcome at city hall.

In a brief speech in German, after he had been eulogized by Mayor James J. Walker and Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, he thanked New York for its formal welcome. He said: "I feel this reception is not for me personally, not as man to man, but is a recognition of all the scientific work that is being done by the world over, not only by me, but by others."

To a crowded Aldermanic reception chamber came the little gray-haired professor, who cannot understand why great masses of people, to whom his theories are incomprehensible, insist on making him a popular idol.

Mayor Walker tried to explain it to him. The Mayor assured him New Yorkers "have a very profound appreciation of the contributions you have made to science, even if we don't understand them."

"You have the keys to our hearts," the Mayor said, "and to our imaginations. You have paid New York a great distinction and a great honor, and we appreciate it the more because we know you dislike receptions."

As "a monarch of the mind, who rules over a territory not bounded by widespread seas, by high mountains, or by any conventional line, which separates peoples and divides languages," Prof. Einstein was introduced to the Mayor by Dr. Butler.

Cheers from 15,000 persons greeted Prof. and Mrs. Einstein when they made a brief visit to Madison Square Garden tonight during celebration of the New York Zionist Maccabean festival on the eve of the holiday of Chanukkah. The holiday commemorates the Jewish victories over the Syrians in 200 B. C.

"I am glad of the opportunity to be with you and see you," said Prof. Einstein, "you should not be discouraged by difficulties. If we will have the moral strength, as we shall have, we will undoubtedly succeed." He spoke in German. Mrs. Einstein said: "I greet you and am happy to be here."

Rudy Vallee sang the "Eli Eli."

The New History Society, an organization for world unity, announced today that Prof. Einstein would speak on "war and peace" at its meeting at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel at 9 o'clock tomorrow night.

EX-GOV. MORRISON TO SUCCEED OVERMAN

Appointed U. S. Senator From North Carolina; Supported Smith in 1928.

By the Associated Press.

SALISBURY, N. C., Dec. 13.—Gov. Gardner late today appointed Cameron Morrison of Charlotte, United States Senator from North Carolina to succeed Senator Lee S. Overman, who died early Friday morning.

The Governor announced the appointment here, after attending Senator Overman's funeral.

Cameron Morrison, appointed by Gov. Gardner today to fill out the unexpired term of Senator Overman, was Governor of North Carolina from 1920 to 1924. It was during his term that the State's $150,000,000 good roads program was launched.

He has never held other political office, but has from his youth been active in Democratic campaigns.

In 1928, after the Democratic convention nominated Alfred E. Smith for the presidency, he vigorously supported the nominee, and clashed with Senator F. M. Simmons, whose colleague he will be for the remainder of this session of Congress.

When he was nominated for Governor, Morrison defeated the man who today made him Senator, in the Democratic primary.

Mrs. Inez Weaver, Plattsmouth, Neb., Arraigned; Pleads Not Guilty.

By the Associated Press.

PLATTSMOUTH, Neb., Dec. 13.—Mrs. Inez L. Weaver, 27 years old, was arrested here tonight on a warrant charging her with first degree murder in the death of her husband, George, 30, at his home here Tuesday. Her arrest followed a doctors' report that 15 grains of a strong poison had been found in the stomach.

Mrs. Weaver, calm and collected, was immediately arraigned and pleaded not guilty. She was taken to Omaha for safe keeping.

County officials said they had traced two purchases of poison to Mrs. Weaver, the first made on Monday, the day her husband was stricken at his work in the railroad yards here and the second the next morning.

WELLESLEY COLLEGE GETS 900 MRS. BROWNING LETTERS

New Gift From George H. Palmer Added to Already Notable Collection.

WELLESLEY, Mass., Dec. 13.—A collection of more than 900 original autograph letters of Elizabeth Barrett Browning, wife of Robert Browning, the poet, has been presented to Wellesley College, college authorities announced tonight.

The letters, written on the same kind of tiny note paper that was used by Mrs Browning in penning her love letters, were a gift from George Herbert Palmer, professor emeritus of Harvard University. The gift, added to the recently acquired love letters of Robert Browning and Elizabeth Barrett gives Wellesley College one of the most valuable collections of its kind in the world, the college said.

The collection covers the period from about 1837 to 1857.

The figures are the first returns by classes compiled from the April census. They were taken largely from the less densely populated states, involving about one-third of the nation's population.

The summary said the 29 areas for which the complete figures are presented were not typical of the country as a whole, but included many areas in which unemployment is less serious than in some of the states for which the detailed tabulation is not complete.

KELLOGG IS GUEST IN BERLIN

BERLIN, Dec. 13.—World economic depression is the cause of prevailing political uncertainty in some countries, Frank B. Kellogg, former American Secretary of State, told press correspondents here today. He came here en route from Oslo, Norway, to New York. "Germany," he said, "has no monopoly of an economic crisis. Such a crisis is to be seen everywhere, but it will disappear and with it the factor of uncertainty in many countries."

A busy social schedule for Kellogg, who was presented the Nobel peace prize for 1929 at Oslo includes a dinner tonight at the American Embassy, Julius Curtius, German Foreign Minister, and others are invited, and an invitation to luncheon Monday by Chancellor Bruening.

Body of Harry Sudekum Found Hanging From Light Socket; on Surety Bond.

By the Associated Press.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 13.—The body of Harry Sudekum, said by M. D. Johnson, assistant cashier, to have been a director in the closed Liberty Bank and Trust Co., was found hanging by a cord from a light socket in his home tonight. Ted Vaughan, State investigator, said he had committed suicide.

In a recent statement concerning State funds on deposit in closed banks, Attorney-General L. D. Smith said State deposits in the Liberty Bank were secured by five personal bonds totaling $790,000. On one bond of $50,000 and another of $100,000, the Attorney-General listed Sudekum as among the sureties.

TELLS OF SOVIET'S LABOR SHORTAGE, LACK OF MATERIAL

Dr. Anna L. Strong Says Russia Builds for Next Generation, Lacks Comforts of Life Today.

AUDIENCE QUESTIONS HER FOR AN HOUR

In Discussing 5-Year Program She Stresses Modernizing of Farms—Trade Balance Sought.

A transformation of Russian agriculture, long considered a stubborn obstacle to realization of Soviet aims, was described by Anna Louise Strong yesterday at the Town Club.

Dr. Strong spoke for an hour, and an audience of several hundred men and women held her for nearly a full hour longer with a rapid-fire of questions, ultimately cut short only to spare the physical endurance of the speaker.

It was her third lecture here in four years. She went to Russia in 1921 as a Quaker welfare worker in famine relief, and has resided there for most of nine years. She came to this country last month and will return in January to resume her duties as managing editor of the Moscow News, an English-language newspaper which began publication in October. She is lecturing in the United States as an individual observer, she said, and not as the representative of any organization.

"Exports Only to Import."

In view of some recent fears of Russian competition of this country, it seemed significant that Dr. Strong asserted, in answer to a question, "Russia has no intention of exporting beyond its imports. It exports only to import."

She had been asked why, if Russia had plenty of wages but a shortage of commodities to buy with those wages, it did not import what it needed. She explained that Russia could not import more than it exported without attenuating its already slendor credit, and added, "The small amount which it exports now is causing trouble throughout the world."

Dr. Strong prefaced her discussion of the gigantic "five-year" program with the remark that the country was so large that "almost any story would be true somewhere in Russia," and that a fair estimate could not be formed by American standards, since Russian standards "a few years ago were quite Asiatic."

"The Russian picture today has two contrasting sides," she said. "There is a great shortage of all the goods that make one comfortable. One story could be made of that side. It would be quite true. Another story quite as true but utterly different could be made of the new agriculture in Russia, in some respects more advanced than our own, of the great industries and power plants going up at a rate unparalleled in history.

Under-Production in Russia.

"In Russia the present crisis is precisely the opposite of the crisis in the rest of the world. It consists of a labor shortage and under-production. There is plenty in wages, but poverty in clothing, food and housing. The workers are producing power plants, steel mills, fleets, railroads—things which in the future will make life better for their children, but do not in the present give them things to buy with their wages."

The five-year program, she said, proposed three drastic changes: changing a nation predominantly agricultural into an industrial nation; changing an agriculture which had remained medieval for centuries into the most modern in the world, and "changing the whole mentality of the Russian people so that they will fit into the plans."

She related that Russian industry, brought down to one-fifth normal in four years after the revolution of 1917, regained normal production by 1927 and doubled production in the last three years. All the industries now existing in Russia, she said, amount roughly to $5,000,000,000, while the five-year program has under construction new industries amounting to about $6,000,000,000.

Solved Grain Problem.

"The food shortage began in 1927," she said. "Industry was growing faster than agriculture. The lack of grain was worse in 1928, and much worse in 1929, when the crop was poor. They saw something must be done about it; Sixteenth Century farming would not feed Thirty-First Century agriculture.

"As a result, Russia instituted a type of changed farming that spread over one-fourth of the nation, solved the grain problem, doubled the production of sugar beets and added 50 per cent to the cotton crop in one year."

The change had been wrought, she related, by collective farming wherein several villages pooled land, implements and other means of production. It had left, however, one great shortage, that of meat, milk, butter, eggs and all livestock products. The cause, she explained, was that the original plan of the collectives gave no

LECTURES ON RUSSIA

DR. ANNA LOUISE STRONG

A transformation of Russian agriculture, long considered a stubborn obstacle to realization of Soviet aims, was described by Anna Louise Strong yesterday at the Town Club.

Under-Production in Russia.

"In Russia the present crisis is precisely the opposite of the crisis in the rest of the world. It consists of a labor shortage and under-production. There is plenty in wages, but poverty in clothing, food and housing. The workers are producing power plants, steel mills, fleets, railroads—things which in the future will make life better for their children, but do not in the present give them things to buy with their wages."

"As a result, Russia instituted a type of changed farming that spread over one-fourth of the nation, solved the grain problem, doubled the production of sugar beets and added 50 per cent to the cotton crop in one year."

The change had been wrought, she related, by collective farming wherein several villages pooled land, implements and other means of production. It had left, however, one great shortage, that of meat, milk, butter, eggs and all livestock products. The cause, she explained, was that the original plan of the collectives gave no credit for livestock, so that individuals were inclined to dispose of it before they entered. The situation was being cured by crediting individuals with the value of livestock as part of their share in the capital of the collectives.

"This revolution in agriculture is the greatest revolution that's happened in Russia," she declared. "Agriculture has been brought out of chaos and the danger of anarchy.

Soviet Orders in Advance.

"The Government now is virtually able to order in advance what it wants in farming. Instead of helplessly facing a shortage one year and a surplus the next, the Department of Agriculture can say, as it said this year, 'We have enough wheat now. This section should be devoted to higher-priced crops, and the wheat crop shifted to another section.'

"And the Government can shift production in one year by means of credits. It can say, 'We will lend you money on these crops, but not on these others.'

"A striking phase of the new farming is that communities now are able to plan with regard to the new machinery and how much land it will cover, without regard to the individual ownership of any part of that land. Land rights, are as fluid as air rights or water rights."

She traced the development of collective units through tractor stations, at first dispensing machinery and thereby releasing labor, then handling credit for the utilization of that labor, and ultimately becoming "a center unifying the industry and culture of a section 10 miles in radius."

Like a Man Starting Out.

Russia, she said, was in the state of a man starting out in business, or beginning the development of a farm—willing, with wife and children, to forego comforts and even necessaries for the sake of the future. Much of the shortage, however, she attributed to demands increased by new standards of living.

She had overheard a group of workers gazing at a great new plant with grim pride. "There's my butter for this year," said one. "There's my new pair of pants," said another, and a third said, "There's the shoes I haven't got yet."

An aged road worker, a smile of pride crinkling his yellow face, had boasted to her in sparse Russian, "This will be an automobile road as far as China under the five-year program." She had asked a worker on a great power dam how he liked his job, but he misunderstood her question in eagerness to assert, "You know—she's going to be finished in 1932."

"That," she commented, "was the spirit of an ordinary blacksmith. It can be duplicated all through Russia, in people who have charged themselves with seeing that this thing goes through.

"However bewildering is this great experiment, you can say this: In Russia one has a very definite sense that these people know where they're going, and they're on their way."

$1000 bid by Bud Fisher, cartoonist—the sale was called off and Commander Booth asked that the ball be given to Grover Whalen, former New York Police Commissioner and chairman of the Citizens' Committee which arranged the game. Whalen got the football, but the bidders gave their collective $5000 to the Salvation Army to swell its relief fund.

Gold Medallion Auctioned.

A gold medallion, with a mule on one side and a goat on the other was used in the toss at the outset of the game, and it was auctioned off tonight at a charity ball for the relief fund's benefit.

Long after the last crisp echo of the Army's "slum and Gravy" song and the Navy's battle yell, had died in the far tiers of the Stadium, the merriment in charity's name and for its benefit continued at downtown hotels. The Cadets and Midshipmen themselves joined in these festivities. The Army lads had leaves until midnight when they returned to West Point. The midshipmen had the night off, and will be taken back by train tomorrow morning to the banks of the Severn.

SAYS WIFE'S APRIL FOOL "JOKE" WAS A BILL FOR $2700

E. S. Strauss Asserts He Paid, but Never Saw Vanity Case for Which Account Was Rendered.

The bill for a $2700 vanity case which his wife, Mrs. Morton K. Strauss, had purchased, was presented to him as an "April fool joke," Emil S. Strauss, wealthy retired president of the Strauss Bros. Mercantile Co., testified yesterday afternooon in depositions before Forrest C. Donnell, special Commissioner. The hearing was held as a preliminary to trial of Strauss' suit for divorce on grounds of general indignities.

Strauss said that the vanity case was bought in Florida during their visit there last March, and that the bill was not presented to him until two months later.

Wanted Peaceful Birthday.

"Some women, friends of hers at the Westwood Country Club one evening asked me if I had received my April fool joke yet, and told me that she had said she was going to give me the bill for that purpose," Strauss said. "She gave it to me two days before my birthday in May, and I, at the time hoping to have a peaceful birthday, said nothing about it. Two days after my birthday I took the bill back to my wife to discuss it with her."

Robert Burnett, attorney for Mrs. Strauss, who is contesting the suit, got the admission from Strauss that the bill had been paid, but Strauss declared he had not yet seen the vanity case.

What Strauss termed the "worst since I have ever known" occurred one night in October, 1929, he testified, when Mrs. Strauss was preparing to take a 16-year-old daughter by a previous marriage to Europe to school.

An All-Night Quarrel.

From 8 o'clock at night to 4 o'clock in the morning, he said, Mrs. Strauss' grown son and daughter and son-in-law were in continual dispute with her about the advisability of the trip.

"I didn't say a word expect when I was asked a question," Strauss testified. "I spent my time dodging through doorways to keep out of it. When they asked me to talk to her, I told them that I had begged her on my knees not to go." Rosemary, (her daughter), was opposed to going to school over there, but I don't remember that she participated in the quarrel that evening."

Mrs. Strauss and her daughter left for Europe the next evening, Strauss testified, with passage paid and $5000 in letters of credit. A week later, he said, he paid passage to Europe for the married daughter and son, in order to smooth over the family relations.

"Didn't you give them instructions to watch Mrs. Strauss continually so she could not see any other man?" Burnett asked. "No," Strauss answered. "They were only to try to persuade her to return home."

Examined in regard to his gifts of jewelry to his wife, which have figured in previous depositions as the principal items under his charges of extravagance, Strauss said that an emerald and diamond watch which he had given her had not been originally intended as a gift:

"A year before our marriage in 1927," he said, "I was showing her the watch and she asked me if she might wear it. I permitted her to take it, but after a time sent her a note by my chauffeur to return it. She sent word back that she could not return it. The question never came up again."

Refused to Buy $68,000 Necklace.

Although he admitted a number of expensive gifts, Strauss testified to refusal on his part to purchase a $68,000 necklace in Florida for his wife, and to refusing to buy a pair of earrings and chalice in Budapest, Hungary, shortly after their marriage in Vienna, in August, 1927. Concerning the latter refusal, he attempted to tell of a "terrible moment" which followed, but was forbidden by the Commissioner to tell of conversations between him and his wife unless a third person had been present at the time.

He said he bought a $16,000 Minerva car because his wife said she was "tired of these American cars."

"Did she say that out of a clear sky?" Burnett asked, inquiring into the circumstances of the incident.

"Mrs. Strauss' complaints and requests always came out of a clear sky," Strauss answered.

Mrs. Strauss, the former Mrs. Edward G. Rolwing, was not present at the hearing. She lives at the Park Plaza Hotel.

"Just to Make Her Husband Mad."

A deposition taken in Montreal for Strauss was filed yesterday, the witness being Miss Edith B. Hurley, a member of the faculty of the University of Montreal. She testified that while on a Canadian "dude ranch" last summer she met Mrs. Strauss, also a guest there.

Mrs. Strauss, the witness related, told of buying a $2500 vanity case in Florida, "just to make her husband mad, because he had not given her some things she had wanted," and of sending the bill to him. Miss Hurley said Mrs. Strauss used an exceedingly uncomplimentary term in speaking of Strauss.

The witness related that Mrs. Strauss and another woman guest took sun baths near a dam, and that a locomotive engineer waved at them as his train passed. A "Miss Laurent of Missouri," also a guest there, pointed out "the bathing beauties, or sun babies," to Miss Hurley and her mother.

Mrs. Strauss, the witness said, regaled the others at the ranch with a description of sun baths on the roof of a Florida hotel, where aviators "used to fly around low as they passed by," and where one woman guest was ordered out of the hotel for taking motion pictures of the sun bathers.

Mrs. Strauss' counsel, by questioning, indicated he thought "Miss Laurent" a private detective employed to watch Mrs. Strauss while she was at the Canadian ranch.

"CAMPAIGN OF MEANNESS" ROUTS HELEN OF RUMANIA

Hopeless of Reconciliation to King, It Is Said She Will Retire to Paris.

Copyright, 1930, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos. (New York World and Post-Dispatch.)

PARIS, Dec. 13.—Princess Helen of Rumania, it is reported, will be in Paris before Christmas. Her divorce from King Carol will be definite, and their son, Michael, will remain behind with his father and enter a military school.

Helen decided finally to give up hope of a reconciliation after she found herself deprived of virtually all her royal privileges. Even the automobiles placed at her disposal were withdrawn or replaced by inferior ones, it is said. She was subjected to what her friends called a "campaign of meanness," until she consented to leave Rumania.

She did not know how to go about winning Carol back if that was her purpose, her friends declare. She showed too obviously, it was said, that she was not interested in Carol, the man, but in a seat on the throne beside him. The differences in the character of the rayol pair is explained in the following story:

Once, before her original break with Carol, he was in an automobile accident and had Helen's two favorite dogs with him. After the accident he telegraphed her: "Don't worry; the dogs are safe." Far from appreciating Carol's light touch, Helen's only comment was: "I'll never trust my dogs to him again."

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Dec. 13.—Jack Weeks Lake, 38 years old, shot and killed Mrs. Anna Lasco Daley, 27, at her Wappingers Falls home early this morning when she refused to marry him and then sent a bullet through his own head. Mrs. Daley was killed outright. Lake died several hours later. Mrs. Daley was separated from her husband.

BOY RIDING BICYCLE IS KILLED BY TRUCK

Marvin Kirk, Drug Store Messenger, Dies After Collision at Laclede and Taylor.

Marvin Kirk, 15-year-old delivery boy for the Gasen's drug store at 228 South Euclid avenue, was killed at 6:30 o'clock last night when his bicycle collided with a coal truck at Laclede and Taylor avenues.

The truck, owned by the Seidel Coal Co., 3915 Duncan avenue, and driven by Elmer Jones, Negro, of 3039A Lawton avenue, was turning left into Laclede and the boy was turning right into Taylor when the collision occurred. Jones said he did not se the boy until after the accident.

Kirk died of skull fracture on the way to St. Louis Children's Hospital. He lived at 1103 Morrison avenue with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Kirk. Jones furnished bond pending an inquest.

Maplewood Man Arrested After Leaving Scene of Accident.

A head-on collision between two automobiles on North and South road near Eager road last night resulted in the arrest of Harold Stapf of 7133 Drury Lane, Maplewood, on police charges of driving while intoxicated, leaving the scene of an accident and transporting liquor.

Stapf left his machine and fled for about two blocks on foot, but was overtaken by Chief of Police Lucas of Brentwood who pursued in an automobile.

Arthur Hostetter of Manchester and Warson roads, driver of the other car, was cut and bruised, and his wife, Ruby, suffered a skull injury. Their son, Arthur, 7, and J. L. Marlow, 1443 Mary avenue, Brentwood, Stapf's companion, also were cut and bruised. A bottle containing whisky was found in Stapf's car.

ALLOWS $92,000 FEES IN KERENS' CONTEST

Court Lops $10,000 From Bill of Lawyers Representing Trust Co. in Litigation.

An additional fee of $67,186 for the St. Louis Union Trust Co. for handling Vincent Kerens' $1,900,000 share of his father's estate and a fee of $25,000 for three attorneys who represented the company in recent litigation, were allowed by Federal Judge Faris yesterday.

The lawyers—P. Taylor Bryan, Samuel B. McPheeters and Henry Davis—asked for $35,000, but Judge Faris reduced the allowance on the ground that part of the work should have been done in the regular administration of the estate and did not represent work in opposing the efforts of Kerens' two sisters to keep the trust intact.

The trust company's fees represented 5 per cent of the fund created by the late Richard C. Kerens, former Ambassador to Austria-Hungary, for his son. During the life of the trust, the Court was told, income totaled $570,000 and the company charged an annual fee of 5 per cent against income. Recently Judge Faris dissolved the trust, holding Kerens had completed five years of sobriety as provided in his father's will.

ROAST LIZARD SERVED BY ZOO EXECUTIVE HERE TO GUESTS

Iguana, Central American Reptile, Arrived Here With Injury and Was Killed.

A roast iguana, large Central American lizard, was served at a dinner party at the home of Moody J. R. Lentz, assistant herpetologist at the zoo, last night. The reptiles, frequently used for food by natives in Central America, seldom are available as meat in temperate countries.

The iguana arrived at the zoo yesterday with a broken jaw, an injury which it was feared would not heal. The iguana was killed, dressed and baked with onions, salt and pepper, serving four persons amply. Most of the meat is white although the legs resemble the dark meat of chicken after cooking. Meat along the back and tail is white and extremely tender. It tasted like a cross between frog-legs and squirrel, the diners said.

R. Marlin Perkins, chief herpetologist, and Henry Kennon, ornithologist at the zoo, were among Lentz' guests.

WOMAN, 86, DAUGHTER, 40, SERVING YEAR UNDER DRY LAW

Attorneys Reported to Be Seeking Pardon for Them From Virginia Governor.

By the Associated Press.

RICHMOND, Va., Dec. 13.—Mrs. Martha Napier, 86 years old, and her daughter, Mrs. Mary Manly, 40, were in the Henrico County Jail today to begin serving one year for violation of the prohibition laws. Meanwhile, attorneys were reported to be seeking a pardon from the Governor.

Mrs. Napier said a man promised her a dollar if she would "keep everyone away from his still until he returned." After waiting an hour, she said, she called her daughter. The daughter said officers arrived before she could explain to her mother that she was "doing wrong." Neither of the women had anything to do with the still, Mrs. Manly said.

MOTHER SAYS BOY, 10, NEEDS $12,000 A YEAR

Former Mrs. A. B. Baer Testifies in Claim for Increased Allowance.

A hearing on the motion of Mrs. Lucille C. Baer, divorced wife of Arthur B. Baer, vice president and secretary of the Stix, Baer & Fuller Dry Goods Co., for an increase from $16,000 to $27,000 a year in the allowance for the maintenance of herself and her 10-year-old son, was held in Circuit Judge Hamilton's court yesterday.

Mrs. Baer, who receives $12,000 a year for her own support and $3000 for traveling and vacation expenses, seeks to have the yearly allowance for the son, Arthur J. Baer, which is now $1000, increased to $12,000. She asks also for the Court's permission to move to New York. Baer, who remarried recently, seeks custody of the boy.

"I am not a gold-digger," Mrs. Baer told the Court. "I only want to see that my boy's future is provided for." She testified that Baer had been "extremely indulgent" with money since their divorce three years ago, so that the boy was accustomed to a high plane of living.

Asked why she wanted to move to New York, she said: "Judge Hamilton, it is a bitter pill to stand on a corner waiting for a bus and see your child picked up by his stepmother in a gorgeous automobile. I want to fade out of the picture.

"I think it would be better for my boy if he has just one home at a time. I know that many people get along on less than we have, but my boy cannot live the way Mr. Baer wants him to on $1000 a year."

Character witnesses testified to Mrs. Baer's qualifications as a mother, one declaring she "devoted too much time to her boy." For Baer two former governesses testified the boy behaved better when with his father than when with his mother. The hearing was continued until next Saturday for further testimony.

LEWIS PAYS TRIBUTE TO DR. LANDSTEINER

Praises "Master of Death" at Stockholm Banquet—Throws Out Photographer.

By the Associated Press.

STOCKHOLM, Dec. 13.—Sinclair Lewis, who once wrote of the medical profession in his novel "Arrowsmith," tonight paid tribute to Dr. Karl Landsteiner of New York, who won the 1930 Nobel prize in medicine.

Lewis, who won the year's prize in literature, and Dr. Landsteiner attended a banquet and reception at which high Swedish dignitaries and members of the American colony were present.

Dr. B. Brillioth, chairman of the Swedish-American Society, in a speech lavished praise on both Americans. Dr. Landsteiner replied with only a few words, saying he would leave it to Lewis, "the master of words," to speak in his behalf.

The author rose and remarked it was a heavy responsibility for him to address the gathering on behalf of a man of such importance to humanity as Dr. Landsteiner, whom he called his dear friend. Then he added:

"You may call me a master of words, but what is he? He has been in a thousand cases the master of death. When I sit in my private room to write and to try to create something you may find is beautiful, he has been for years studying in his laboratory to find something that is good—something that can preserve life and bring back happiness to hundreds of thousands.

"Now as for myself, I might be able to write another book which would suit your tastes or would not. May I say that I shall be happy on that day I can write a book the hero of which should be of the ethical and material value to humanity of Dr. Landsteiner. What more could I say?"

As he concluded all present rose to their feet in homage to the physician. Then Lewis translated his speech from English into German, and the ovation which followed lasted seven minutes.

Lewis started the day by throwing a photographer out of his room in a hotel.

This occurred this morning, when the American winner of the Nobel prize for literature and his wife were offered their coffee in bed by two girls. The girls wore crowns of lighted candles on their heads in compliance with an old Swedish custom of Dec. 13. With the girls, however, a photographer slipped into the room. When Lewis detected this he jumped out of bed and threw the man out.

the Associated Press.

PARIS, Dec. 13.—Frenchmen of ery shade of political belief were king themselves tonight how long e Steeg Government, completed day, would last.

After struggling with what seemed to be almost insoluble difficulties, Senator Theodore Steeg presented to the country a ministry to succeed the defeated one headed by Andre Tardieu. But there were plenty of political observers who doubted if the real rouble confronting the country had been solved.

The new Government rests solely on the Left and is in nowise a concentration or republican Government, which most politicians say would be the only kind with a chance of long life.

Friends of former Premier Tardieu lost little time in declaring war on the new Cabinet, and tonight two demands for interpellation on its policies had been addressed to the President of the Chamber of Deputies.

The press of the Center and Right appeared almost unanimously opposed to Steeg. Leon Bailby, director of the newspaper Intransigeant, wrote this afternoon: "The Government will fall on its first important debate in the chamber as a castle of cards falls in a breeze. The crisis continues."

This opinion was accorded importance in parliamentary circles because in such matters Bailby is considered independent.

The newspapers of the Right, such as the Journal des Debats and the Temps, were more severe. The Journal said: "This ministry is to be reprimanded and thrown out as soon as possible."

The Temps found the ministry "characterized by an abandonment of the formula of republican concord present the last two years and based on anti-Poincarist principles." The editorial continued: "Senator Louis Barthou tried for the collaboration of moderates and radicals, while Steeg has accepted the radicals and left out the moderates. It is a Cabinet of personalities more than one of real conciliation."

The most favored opinion was that Steeg might have a feeble majority in the chamber. In all events, the country will have a government until Thursday, the date of the new ministry's first appearance before Parliament.

$5000 FOR ALIENATING EX-POLICEMAN'S LOVE

Award Against Mrs. Marie Kny, Divorcee, for Mrs. Valece M. Wells.

An award of $5000 for alienation of affections was made to Mrs. Valece M. Wells, an employe of Barnes Hospital, against Mrs. Marie Kny, 3362 Oxford avenue, Maplewood, by a jury in Circuit Judge Mulloy's court at Clayton yesterday.

The suit, for $25,000, was based on charges that Mrs. Kny had taken the regard of Otto Wells, a former St. Louis policeman, away from his wife.

During the three days of the trial, Mrs. Wells' counsel brought out that Mrs. Kny had paid the expenses of Wells' uncontested divorce suit last January. Further evidence tended to show that Mrs. Kny had given him the use of her automobile, had bought him jewelry and clothing, and had visited him on his beat.

Both Mrs. Kny, a divorcee, and Wells, who was discharged from the force in 1929, denied Mrs. Wells' charges. The award is divided into $3000 actual and $2000 punitive damages.

TWO-YEAR SUSPENSION OF IMMIGRATION APPROVED

House Committee Makes Exception of Relatives Until Half of Quota Is Filled.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—A two-year suspension of all immigration, except relatives who may enter until half of the existing quota is filled, was tentatively approved today by the House Immigration Committee.

The final committee vote on the suspension bill, sponsored by Chairman Johnson, was set for Tuesday.

The bill devised by the committee applies to all immigration from the Philippine Islands. Resident Commissioner Pedro Guevara today protested this exclusion, but the committee voted to apply the restriction.

Where no quota applies, as in the case of the Western Hemisphere and the Philippines, there would be no limit on the relatives allowed entry.

The 50 per cent quota limitation of relatives is designed to hold down immigration in countries where relatives now seeking entry equal the quota.

Spanish Rebels Reported Fleeing in Disorder

rid tonight in an attempt to obtain clemency for his son, who probably will go before the firing squad unless the Government intervenes.

From Jaca tonight came word that a civilian already had been court-martialed and executed. He was said to have been one of the leaders in the agitation which led to the revolt and was shot in the public square after a brief trial.

Planes Drop Promise of Clemency.

Following upon the defeat of their army this morning as it was marching southward toward Huesca, the Rebels still in Jaca surrendered after military airplanes had dropped pamphlets promising clemency if the movement ceased immediately.

A few attempted to escape, but the Loyal authorities soon overtook them and tonight are holding 72 prisoners.

Three hundred other Rebels, who at first took to the hills after their movement was broken up, surrendered tonight without an attempt at fighting. They were commanded by Capt. Aymaca, an infantry officer.

At Saragossa police arrested the executive committee of the Radical and Socialist Labor organizations, charging them with fomenting disorder, and the Captain General ordered the reopening of all shops. He also issued a decree that all public service employes who quit work should be taken into court.

Cabinet Discusses Situation.

The Cabinet discussed the political situation at length tonight and said conditions were practically normal now in the Jaca-Huesca region, with the movement completely crushed and communications being rapidly re-established.

Government sources, while describing the Rebel loss as heavy, said that only five Federals had been killed in the entire movement so far. These were civil guards, killed as the movement began yesterday. A statement issued as the Cabinet concluded its session said nothing about its losses in today's battle.

In the meantime, ambulances and surgeons are going over the region and still picking up wounded. Some of these have been placed in hospitals at Huesca and others at Saragossa.

Dispatches from Huesca say a rebel captain and two lieutenants are the first prisoners to be condemned in the courts-martial to be conducted in that city. It is thought these men will be shot tomorrow morning, although the authorities refuse to give definite information and some suspect that the officers already have been shot.

Extraordinary precautions were taken at Saragossa, between Madrid and Jaca, where a large number of troops are garrisoned. Martial law was declared there, but labor unions nevertheless called a general strike in sympathy with the rebellion and there was rioting in the streets. Martial law also was declared in Lerida, 50 miles southwest of Huesca, and in Guadalajara, 84 miles northwest of Madrid.

In Madrid a number of well known Republicans were arrested and at Jaca there were reports that Communists had incited the artillery to revolt.

At the Cabinet meeting tonight Premier Berenguer rejected all suggestions that martial law be declared throughout the Province of Aragon, but at the same time it was announced this would be done speedily should the situation warrant it. Apparently the Premier believed the worst of the trouble was over, although the plot appears to have been widespread.

It was learned that members of the Cabinet severely criticised Police Director Mola, saying his department should have known of the Jaca plot. It was reported his resignation might be requested.

The name of Maj. Ramon Franco, Spain's foremost aviator, continued to crop up as one of the leaders in the rebellion, but there was nothing to connect him directly with the uprising. On the contrary, the apparent defeat of the movement was attributed to the absence of any outstanding national figure among the rebels.

The labor unions at Saragossa called a strike this morning in sympathy with the rebels, but Barcelona, usually a hotbed of such disturbances, remained quiet.

Among the rebel forces, it was reported, were students from universities in the North.

Among other unverified rumors was one that Col. Mangada, commander of the rebel forces, had shot himself.

Additional reports of the clashes at Saragossa indicated that, while the police were forced to charge crowds there and fire over their heads, there were no casualties.

Many Catholic students throughout Spain volunteered to do any sort of work to help break the sporadic strikes which have started.

Only Small Part of Jaca Garrison Said to Have Revolted.

By the Associated Press.

HENDAYE, Franco - Spanish Frontier, Dec. 13.—Spanish Federal troops routed a detachment of rebellious soldiers of the Jaca garrison in a clash between Jaca and Huesca today, capturing more than 100 prisoners and seizing guns and equipment left on the field by the enemy.

Word reaching here indicated that only a comparatively small part of the Jaca garrison actually had revolted and that their numbers were increased by civilian forces, among them numbers of university students. The uprising, the report said, had been confined to a section of Huesca Province, in the vicinity of Placencia.

A Sergeant of the Civil Guard, at least two of the rebels and five of the Federals were killed in action, the report said, and although the Federal forces appeared to be in control, heavy reinforcements were on the way from the South. Artillery was coming up and a squadron of planes already was in operation.

The opposing forces met five miles from Huesca, both opening fire with rifles and machine guns, with the loyal troops having the added and important advantage of their field pieces. The Government troops planned to spend the night at Ayerbe and continue their march on Jaca tomorrow. In the meantime, reinforcements were on the way from the South.

Gen. Gay has been appointed military governor of Huesca province to replace Gen. Las Heras, who was captured by the rebels. Commander Nieto was named head of the court-martial to try the captured rebels. It is understood the leading revolters will be executed tomorrow, although some reports were heard that they already had been shot.

Police Summoned to Jaca Abandon Autos and Flee to Fields.

By the Associated Press.

PAU, France, Dec. 13.—A correspondent of the newspaper, Independent, in the Spanish town of Canfranc, which is 12 miles north of Jaca, reported tonight the first victims of the Spanish military revolt at Jaca were a sergeant of Carabineers, one infantryman and two customs officers who refused either to join the rebels or to disarm.

Spanish police at the Canfranc frontier stations were summoned to Jaca by telephone and hastened there in automobiles. They found the road near the town barred and were received with rifle fire. They abandoned their cars and fled to the fields.

Refugees Say Rebels Shot All Who Opposed Uprising at Jaca.

SARAGOSSA, Spain, Dec. 13.—Refugees arriving from Jaca, which was taken over yesterday by a rebellion of the garrison, tonight described the uprising as a Republican outbreak.

The Rebels were said to have shot all authorities who attempted to suppress the movement. Then they imprisoned local offici hoisted the Republican flag o the City Hall, and appointed Diaz, chief of the Republican the town, as Mayor. An execu committee of three, with Pio D as the head and Capt. Garcia Capt. Galan as his assistants, named to rule the town.

The refugees said the revo tionists had organized an army 2000, made up of the local garri and civilians who were threate with death if they refused to j Many of these were said to h deserted at the first opportunity.

STATE'S ORDER CLOSES CONNECTICUT BANK

Commercial Trust of New Britain Directed to Cease Paying Out Deposits.

By the Associated Press.

HARTFORD, Conn., Dec. 13. — The Commercial Trust Co. of New Britain, capitalized at $500,000, was restrained from paying out deposits this afternoon by the State Bank Commissioner. The bank already has closed for the week end when the order was posted. The Commissioner said the bank's cash position had been weakened by withdrawals of the last few weeks and the suspension was ordered to conserve the interest of general depositors.

The Commissioner said every effort would be made to reorganize the bank. It has liabilities of $6,000,000 and surplus of $125,000. Of the liabilities, savings deposits are nearly $2,000,000 and commercial deposits are more than $2,000,000.

The bank is the third in Connecticut to be closed by the Bank Commissioner within a fortnight. The others are the Citizens' Bank & Trust Co. of New Haven and the Central Fairfield Trust Co. of Norwalk.

John C. Loomis, president of the Connecticut Bankers' Association, tonight said depositors would suffer no loss and expressed the opinion the bank would reopen in about a week. He described the bank as "absolutely sound" and said its suspension was due to "malicious and vicious rumors."

Bridgeman, Mich., Bank Closes; Deposits Total $500,000.

By the Associated Press.

BRIDGEMAN, Mich., Dec. 13.—The Bridgeman State Bank, one of the largest rural banks in Derrien County, failed to open its doors today. A notice posted on the door stated the bank had been closed on orders of the State Banking Commission. "Frozen assets" were given by R. I. Hudson, State bank examiner, as the cause of the closing. The bank, 15 years old, had deposits of about $500,000 and was capitalized at $20,000.

DEAD 12 DAYS IN LIGHTHOUSE

Tender in Ontario Wilderness Finally Able to Call Help.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Dec. 13.—An aged man lay dead 12 days in Otter Head lighthouse while Gilbert MacLachlan of Toronto, the tender, called in vain to the outside world for aid.

John Moore, 68 years old, fell from the lonely signal tower Dec. 1, and was killed. MacLachlan found his mate's body near the beach, 40 feet below, late that day, half buried in the snow. Placing the body in the little house near the tower, MacLachlan alternately watched over his dead mate and signaled with the station foghorn, but no ship came near the stark headland. Twelve miles down shore Jack Mills, at Pucksaw, heard the distress calls and set out for the lighthouse, a three days' journey. Mills went back with a telegram to the Government authorities, but was blocked by the weather and MacLachlan, to keep the house cold, lived on soda biscuits until Dec. 11, when the Government lighthouse tender Murray Stewart hove in sight and ended his lonely vigil.

KATRINA M'CORMICK'S DEBUT

Mark Hanna's Granddaughters Formally Introduced in Washington.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—Katrina McCormick, Mark Hanna's granddaughter, made her debut today at a party given by her mother, Representative Ruth Hanna McCormick of Illinois.

Miss McCormick wore a long-lined gown of gray-green chiffon, and her mother gray-and-gold brocade. Giant gold pompom chrysanthemums were the background in the receiving nook, and the party went on and on, through four flower-filled rooms, flanked with tables long and laden, with two orchestras playing behind palms.

SHOT IN AIR STOPS AUTO THIEF AT SEVENTH AND LOCUST

Brother-in-Law of Owner of Car Thrown from Running Board by Collision.

An automobile thief was captured at Seventh and Locust streets shortly after noon yesterday following a chase over crowded streets during which a pursuing policeman fired one shot in the air.

At Police Headquarters the prisoner identified himself as John Wilson. He said that a man who had accompanied him and escaped was known to him only as "Rob."

Traffic Patrolman Meyers, who fired the shot that resulted in Wilson's arrest, had chased the man from Eighth and St. Charles streets, where the stolen automobile in which Wilson and another man were riding, crashed into another car.

The stolen car was the property of Dan J. Wulfson, 314 Clara avenue. Wulfson's brother-in-law, S. R. Reiss, 1946 Hodiamont avenue, who saw Wilson in the car, jumped on the running board, but was thrown off in the collision.

HAMILTON-BROWN PAYS 50 PCT. TO CREDITORS

Approved Claims to Be Met in Full in Reasonable Time, Gentry Says.

A 50 per cent disbursement on the approved claims of creditors of the Hamilton-Brown Shoe Co. will be made this week, "as fast as the cashier can write and mail the checks," Receiver William R. Gentry announced yesterday. The amount to be paid out is $1,083,016. Federal Judge Davis authorized the disbursement, which is the first made since the receivership was instituted last May.

The undisputed claims, which correspond with the company's books, are stated by Gentry as amounting to $2,166,125. There are other claims, he said, which "can never be allowed in any sum whatever." A few stockholders, he said, have filed claims for reimbursement for the decline in value of their shares. Such a claim, the receiver holds, "could not possibly be allowed." There are other claims which have some merit, but will have to be cut down. Only the holders of unquestioned claims are to be paid at present.

Gentry reported to the court that operation of the company's Boston plant had been abandoned, and the plant and furnishings closed out, with his approval, by the receivers appointed in Boston. Claims of creditors of the Boston plant to the amount of $220,000 have been approved, and there is money on hand there to pay them in full, but to conform with the order here, only one-half will be paid there, and the rest as fast as payments are made here. Here as well as in Boston, Gentry said, "there is not the slightest doubt that within a reasonable time all just claims will be fully paid."

The receiver anticipates that a balance of more than $250,000 will remain on the Boston end, after full payment of all claims, and that this sum will be turned over to the St. Louis management.

Telling of the work done under the receivership, Gentry said that cash on hand at the beginning of the receivership was a little more than $70,000, and a large payroll had to be met, while drouth conditions were causing a time of exceptionally dull business. He said that, without borrowing, he had paid cost of operation promptly, discounted most of the current bills, and accumulated sufficient surplus to make the present payment and to furnish an ample amount for operation. He declared the future outlook good.

An additional issue of 100,000 shares of the company's common stock was authorized by vote of the stockholders Dec. 4. Harry L. Tomes, as general manager, heads the new organization which hopes to bring the company out of the receivership by next spring.

COUNTESS DE SABRAN BUST BY HOUDON SOLD FOR $80,000

Art Work Among Effects of Countess de la Beraudiere That Bring $277,455.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—Houdon's marble bust of the Countess de Sabran brought $80,000 today at the sale of the art effects of the Countess de la Beraudiere, held at the American-Anderson Galleries. McClure Halley, the successful bidder, said he bought the bust for a well known private collector, whose identity he would not disclose, and that the bust would remain in New York.

The bidding started at $25,000. A second bidder, also a collector's buyer, dropped out at $75,000. Total proceeds of the auction were $277,455 for 467 objects.

The Sabran bust is the second by Houdon to bring a large price here. Two years ago the marble bust of the sculptor's infant daughter was bought for $245,000 by Mrs. Edward S. Harkness at a sale of the art collection of the late Elbert H. Gary. The unsuccessful bidder then was Sir Joseph Duveen, who offfered as high as $240,000.

Eleanor de Sabran, the subject of today's offering, was married to Count Elezar de Sabran in 1769, when she was 20 and he 69. He died six years later. She was a friend of Marie Antoinette and the French revolution drove her to Switzerland. In 1797 the Countess married Marquis de Bouffiers. She returned to France and lived until 1827.

TWO WOMEN IN AUTO HELD UP BY NEGROES

Mrs. Pearl Oxenhandler and Mrs. Rose Gold Lose $1170 in Valuables.

Mrs. Pearl Oxenhandler, 1614 Burd avenue, and Mrs. Rose Gold, 1523 Burd avenue, were riding in the latter's automobile in the 4100 block of West Belle place at 9:30 o'clock last night when two Negroes in another car crowded them to the curb, robbed them of their jewelry, and took Mrs. Oxenhandler's fur coat.

The coat was valued at $675. The robbers also took a diamond ring valued at $300 and a purse containing $35 from Mrs. Oxenhandler and from Mrs. Gold a diamond ring valued at $150 and a purse containing $10.

Mrs. Sofia Hammer was held up in her grocery store at 2701 Lucas avenue by an armed Negro who took her purse containing $200 from behind a counter and fled. A woman customer was not molested.

Virgil Patrick, driver of a delivery truck for Stix, Baer & Fuller Dry Goods Co., was robbed of $98 last night by an armed man who boarded the truck in the 4100 block of Minnesota avenue. The robber took $100, asked if all of it belonged to the company, and returned $2 when Patrick said that amount was his.

Peter Zes was held up in his millinery shop at 26 South Euclid avenue by an armed Negro who took $100 from the cash register and fled.

Henry Huelsmann, proprietor of a shoe store at 3628 North Fourteenth street, was held up by a robber who took $40 from the cash register after forcing Huelsmann and his brothers, Frederick and Edward, to lie on the floor in the rear room.

As Bernard Ritter, 935 Beach avenue, was walking on Garrison avenue near Franklin avenue, a Negro with a pistol forced him into an alley and robbed him of $35.

Thomas Conley, 1635 North Eighteenth street, was robbed of $2.80 by three men who drove up to him in an automobile on Wilmington avenue near Grand boulevard at 7:40 o'clock.

About 20 minutes later three men in a car, evidently the same ones, robbed Elmer Alfred of $11 as he stepped from his home at 2622 Lafayette avennue.

Other holdups: Fred Moetie, grocery store, 2100 Ann avenue, $25; William Finney, filling station, Olive street and Compton avenue, $12; Herman Brand, filling station, Sidney street, and Texas avenue, $10; Henry Baumgartner, shoe repair shop, 2715 North Elliot avenue, $10; Henry Acton, filling station, 4101 Kossuth avenue, $11.

DEMOCRATS NOT UNIT ON BARRING FRANK R. M'NINCH

Robinson, Arkansas, Objects to Power Commission Nominee Who Backed Hoover in 1928.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Opposition to the confirmation of Frank R. McNinch of North Carolina, as a Democratic member of the power commission was voiced today by Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader

The Interstate Commerce Committee will vote Monday on the five nominees selected by President Hoover for the reorganized commission and the issue then will be up to the Senate.

Robinson indicated it was his position that the appointment of McNinch, who voted for President Hoover in 1928, violates the spirit of the law requiring that not more than three of the five members shall be from the same party.

McNinch is one of the first Hoover Democrats to become involved in a controversy over appointment. However, the Democrats are not united on the issue.

Senator Wheeler (Dem.), Montana, a member of the Interstate Commerce Committee, announced he was inclined to support the nominee.

"The only question, to my mind," said Wheeler, "is whether the nominee will be on the side of the people or of the power interests. My impression, gained from his testimony, is that McNinch is more favorable to the people than any of the other nominees. I certainly am not going to punish him because he did not support the party in 1928 notwithstanding the fact that I was an ardent supporter of Gov. Smith."

Opposition also has been expressed before the committee to Marcel Garsaud of Louisiana, in behalf of Gov. Long, Senator-elect from that State. A showdown on the Power Commission nominees, together wtih the six Tariff Commission appointees, who have received approval of the Senate Finance Committee, will be sought next week by Senate leaders.

ANOTHER 'PUBLIC ENEMY' HELD

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 13.—Joe "Pepe" Genaro, "public enemy," was arrested today in Calumet City by Pat Roche, chief investigator for the State's Attorney's office.

The South Side alcohol peddler was taken to the Detective Bureau on a vagrancy charge. He was lounging in a Calumet City gambling house when accosted by Roche. Genaro's arrest leaves only 10 of the original 26 "public enemies" who have not been arrested on vagrancy warrants issued by Judge John H. Lyle.

37 Treated Against Rabies.

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Dec. 13.—Thirty-seven persons, inhabitants of the village of Csakberany, were brought to the Budapest Pasteur Institute today and treated against rabies. They had eaten the flesh of cattle which had died of hydrophobia after being bitten by rabid dogs. To allay the panic in the village the authorities brought the whole population here for treatment. An ignorant butcher had sold the meat.

LINDBERGH BOULEVARD IN COUNTY DEDICATED

Newly Paved Road Runs From Pattonville to Lemay Ferry.

Lindbergh boulevard, new St. Louis County belt highway extending from Le May Ferry road to St. Charles road, was formally dedicated yesterday afternoon with ceremonies at the Kirkwood High School.

About 2000 persons attended the ceremonies which consisted of the breaking of a tape across the road and speeches by county and State officials. The highway, newly paved with concrete, is officially known as State Highway No. 77. Denny road, which no longer exists, formed a part of the route.

Ceremonies began with a luncheon at the Bridle Spur Hunt Club in Huntleigh Village. At 2 p. m. processions of automobiles started simultaneously from Lemay Ferry road and from Pattonville, on St. Charles road, meeting at Kirkwood High School.

Speakers included State Senator Richard F. Ralph, State Representative George F. Heege, Mayor Ed Wilson of Webster Groves, Presiding Judge Albert Wehmeyer of the County Court, and City Attorney J. C. Hoester Jr. of Kirkwood. A. P. Greensfelder acted as chairman.

After the exercises a football game between alumni of Kirkwood and Webster Groves high schools was played on the Kirkwood High School athletic fiedl.

Lindbergh boulevard extends about 20 miles over a 100-foot right-of-way with pavement 20 feet wide, except for wider sections at intersections and gaps for the construction of overhead crossings. Ultimately the boulevard will be extended from St. Charles road to Riverview drive so that it will completely encircle the city of St. Louis.

Speakers at the dedication pointed out that the total cost of the completed part was $906,384, including $40,000 borne by railroad companies as their share of grade separations.

Youths, Held Up, Turn Robbers.

CHICKASHA, Ok., Dec. 13. — John Novak, of Hornell, Ill., and Angelo Gengi, of Chicago, who came to Oklahoma to join the Army, pleaded guilty today to charges of highway robbery and were sentenced to five years each in the state reformatory. The two youths were captured at Cement a few hours after robbing Billy Sells and Nadyne Grimes of a small amount of money and a watch. They fled from their car as officers fired, but later surrendered. They said they had been robbed of $100 on their way to Fort Sill and were seeking to replenish their funds.

YOUTH ADMITS KILLING FAMILY OF 6 ON FARM

North Dakota Prisoner Says Murders Last February Followed Quarrel.

By the Associated Press.

WILLISTON, N. D., Dec. 13.—Yielding to importunities of his mother, and a minister, Charles Bannon, 22-year-old farmer, confessed today, his attorney said, that he killed an entire family of six last February, after a quarrel starting over farm chores.

Bannon's alleged admissions to his attorney, A. J. Knox, came after two days of questioning by officers investigating the disappearance of the Albert E. Haven family from their farm near here, and the insistence of his mother, the attorney and a minister that he "tell the truth."

Bannon, according to Knox, declared he shot Daniel Haven, 19, after a quarrel over chores on the Haven farm, killed Leland, 16, in another quarrel, and then shot Mr. and Mrs. Haven when they came to the barn to investigate the absence of their sons. A 3-year-old child was the next victim and finally a 3-month-old girl was clubbed to death with a rifle.

State's Attorney J. S. Taylor and other officials planned to obtain a signed statement from Bannon and to file charges of first degree murder.

The story said Bannon buried the bodies in the barn on the Haven farm, but later exhumed those of Mr. and Mrs. Haven and the 3-year-old child. Mrs. Haven's body, he said, was hauled to a cave on his mother's farm nearby, where searchers found parts of it late today. The bodies of Haven, his two sons and the infant were recovered Thursday, but only parts of the 3-year-old child's body were found.

The Haven family had been missing since Feb. 10, when Bannon, with his father, James F. Bannon, took possession of the farm and represented themselves as tenants. The Havens, Bannon said, had moved to Oregon, but close friends of the family became apprehensive through failure to receive any word from them and started an inquiry.

Arrested on a charge of illegally disposing of property from the Haven farm, Bannon made conflicting statements and changed his story repeatedly, but was firm in declaring he knew nothing of the family's whereabouts. Later, however, he declared Mrs. Haven had slain the family in a fit of insanity, and that he helped bury their bodies.

Although young Bannon, in his alleged confession, declared he alone was responsible for the murders, officers ordered the arrest of his father who disappeared six weeks ago.

Slayer's Father Reported Caught in Oregon Tourist Camp.

By the Associated Press.

TOLEDO, Ore., Dec. 13.—Sheriff G. H. Horsefall, announced tonight his deputies, at Waldport, Ore., had captured James F. Bannon, said to be the father of Charles Bannon, who is reported to have confessed at Williston, N. D., the murder of the entire Albert E. Haven family.

Sheriff Horsefall said Bannon drove into an automobile camp near Waldport. E. S. Cameron, operator of the camp, checked the motorist's description and that of his car with newspaper accounts and notified Portland authorities, who in turn called Sheriff Horsefall. The deputies reported their prisoner's description tallied with that of the man wanted in North Dakota and that the automobile carried the license number issued to Bannon.

RECEIVERSHIP SUIT FOR LEA PAPERS SENT TO U. S. COURT

Applicants, Unsuccessfully Resisting Transfer, Charge "Plundering" of Memphis Company.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Dec. 13.—Chancellor Newman directed today that a suit, asking the appointment of a receiver for the Southern Publishers, Inc., holding company for stock of the Memphis Commercial Appeal, Inc., and the Knoxville Journal and Tribune Co., be transferred to the Federal District Court in Nashville.

The Chancellor said the suit was primarily between the Nashville Trust Co., a resident of Nashville, and the Southern Publishers, Inc., chartered in Delaware, and, because of the diversity of citizenship, properly should be heard in Federal Court.

Holding that Col. Luke Lea, ex-Senator and president of the Southern Publishers, Inc., and Rogers Caldwell, a director, were properly parties to the litigation, attorneys for the Nashville Trust Co., the Minnesota & Ontario Paper Co. of Minneapolis, and the receiver for the Bank of Tennessee, who had asked the receivership, resisted the removal of the suit to the Federal Court.

Charles C. Trabue, attorney, in resisting removal, said the immediate appointment of a receiver was imperative to prevent further "plundering of the assets" of the Memphis Commercial-Appeal, Inc., a subsidiary company from which he asserts more than $1,200,000 in cash was withdrawn during "the latter part of October."

The Nashville Trust Co. is trustee, holding all stock of the Memphis Commercial-Appeal, Inc., to secure a $1,500,000 bond issue of the Southern Publishers, Inc., purchased by the Minnesota & Ontario Paper Co.

COMMUNISTS SUBDUED BY NEW YORK POLICE

Break Up Attempt of Hundreds to Carry Banners Assailing French Past Consulate.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—Uptown Fifth avenue, with its Christmas shoppers was the scene of riot and struggle, jeers and cheers, for nearly an hour today as several hundred Communists attempted to carry banners of denunciation past the French Consulate in East Fortieth street.

The demonstration was an outgrowth of the recent treason trials in Soviet Russia at which it was charged other Powers were plotting against Russia. The Call, printed in the Daily Worker, Communist organ, declared it would be "the workers' answer to the imperialists of France in the United States."

Banners, pulled from beneath coats as the Communists began their march into Fortieth street, denounced alleged imperialism of France, Great Britain and the United States.

The Red column reached a point between Fifth avenue and the Consulate when a handful of police charged, using clubs and fists and tearing down the signs.

Driven back to Fifth avenue, the demonstrators again lifted their banners and broke into song. Traffic clogged as the street filled with crowds of curious. Fights between bystanders and Communists broke out.

Augmented squads of police charged again and divided the Communists into two groups. But the Communists united again and were attacked again. Each time they fell back into the crowd, only to emerge, holding their tattered banners aloft.

Reserve police swung into the avenue and for the next 20 minutes the Communists were driven back and forth across the street. Here and there a woman attacked a policeman. Somebody threw an egg, which splattered against the wall of a department store.

Locating the main body of the Communists in the large crowd, the officers changed their tactics and drove them to Forty-first street by forming a line and using no violence. Gradually the radicals dispersed into the shopping crowd and the disturbance was over.

Several arrests were made.

Hungarian Count Turns Thief.

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Dec. 13.—Count Nikolas Nyary, a young Hungarian aristocrat who lost his patrimony through the partitioning of Hungary and was forced to live on the small salary of a clerk was sentenced today to eight months' penal servitude for stealing his landlady's carpets and furs.

TWO HELD IN BANK ROBBERY

Suspected in $45,000 Theft at Kansas City.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 13.—Police said today two men under arrest have been identified, one tentatively and the other positively, by bank employes as participants in the $45,000 robbery of the Interstate National Bank in the Livestock Exchange Building here last Wednesday.

Bert Ray Davis is held in jail here and Frank Alton is in custody at Garden City, Kan., awaiting arrival of Kansas City detectives. The identification was made by L. R. Taylor, paying teller, and J. B. Stonebreaker, bookkeeper, who with other bank employes were held captives by the robbers until the time lock on the bank vault opened.

"Gee,
it's good!"

● age 9 years

GREAT FOR GROWN-UPS, TOO!
Wards against and shakes off colds

● Read it! Here's actual proof that children like this emulsified cod-liver oil

If there is a way to make children take cod-liver oil—and take it willingly—you'd certainly want to know about it, wouldn't you?

So did Mrs. F. L. Jones, who is charmingly pictured above with her son, "Bub." And when we called at her home at 1420 Lenox Ave., Philadelphia, Pa., and asked if she'd let her youngster try Scott's Emulsion of Cod-Liver Oil, she agreed heartily. "'Bub' has no use for plain cod-liver oil," she smilingly confessed, "but I'm curious to see how he takes to Scott's Emulsion." ©

"Bub" swallowed a spoonful. Instantly his fears gave way to a big, broad grin. "Gee, it's good. I like it," he said.

Pleasanter to take—
but that isn't all

Pale, thin, run-down children—they need cod-liver oil. Give it to them the pleasantest way—give them Scott's Emulsion.

Scott's Emulsion hasn't that strong "fishy" taste. It doesn't upset even delicate stomachs. It brings you purest, Norwegian cod-liver oil in its pleasantest form—a perfect emulsion. A form that makes it easier to take—easier to digest. Almost immediately, the body absorbs the health-giving vitamins—and the assimilation is complete. You get more good out of Scott's Emulsion and you feel the benefits quicker.

Scott's Emulsion is rich in vitamin A, the growth-promoting vitamin that helps guard against disease. It is rich in vitamin D, the sunshine vitamin that prevents rickets. It also contains vital mineral elements that aid in forming sound bones and teeth. This gives Scott's Emulsion a special advantage for growing children, infants, nursing and expectant mothers. Get Scott's Emulsion at your nearest druggist. Watch cheeks grow rosy. See youngsters gain new weight and vigor.

DILL AND CAPPER IN RADIO DEBATE ON WORLD COURT

Washington Senator Says Likelihood of War Will Be Heightened by Adherence of U. S.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Without waiting for the Senate to reach the World Court issue, friend and foe of the protocols of American adherence took to the air tonight their arguments for and against ratification.

Senator Dill (Dem.) Washington, said the likelihood of war would be heightened rather than lessened if the United States became a Court member. He predicted more than one-third of the Senate would support the Swanson reservation to protect American rights "rather than the Root surrender."

Senator Capper (Rep.) Kansas, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, told his radio audience he would vote for American adherence because he believed it would be another step toward world peace.

Says There are No Obligations.

"Let it be understood," he said, "that under no circumstances do we bind ourselves to send an army or navy to foreign shores; that we make no political alliance nor assume any obligations to protect Europe's territorial boundaries; that on no account shall this Government's war loans to Europe be canceled."

Both sides in the World Court struggle to come are seeking an understanding as to when the Senate shall consider the protocol sent to it last week by President Hoover. Proponents concede it cannot be voted on this session. Opponents however, are unwilling to postpone action unless an agreement is reached that the Senate is not to be called into special session in the spring.

The Foreign Relations Committee will take up the Court next Wednesday. Court advocates want Secretary of State Stimson and Elihu Root called for questioning. Chairman Borah, a foe of the Court, however, is opposed to hearings.

Dill Alleges League Control.

Dill said the Court was controlled by the League of Nations and when the latter refused to accept the Senate's fifth reservation that the Court renders no advisory opinions against the wishes of the United States, former President Coolidge announced he would not ask the Senate to modify its position.

"The American people approved that statement," Dill continued. "No member of the Senate expressed disagreement. It remained for Mr. Hoover to propose surrender. He excuses this proposed surrender in the name of peace.

"Millions of the American people and many Senators and Congressmen are willing to close their eyes to all objections and dangers because of their hope that the Court will maintain peace. League of Nations propagandists and followers of the international bankers have made them believe this League of Nations Court will prevent war."

Dill said at least 35 Senators were opposed to adherence under the Root formula.

Capper said if he believed that by joining the Court the United States would be even remotely committed to the League of Nations he would vote against adherence.

The protocol now in committee, he said, meets the "spirit, as well as the letter, of the Senate reservations adopted four years ago." He would oppose adherence, he added, if it were shown it did not meet the reservations.

"The United States cannot be haled before the World Court on any question," he added. "We must give our consent in each and every instance before the Court is empowered to consider a case which directly affects us or in which we believe we have an interest."

"The Court will have no jurisdiction over our immigration laws unless we should ask it to take jurisdiction," he continued. . . . "The same holds true of our World War debts. . . . The Monroe Doctrine is the same whether we are in the Court or out of it."

Protest Over Official Paintings.

By the Associated Press.

SHARTEL TOLD TO AID IN AVA BANK INQUIRY

Governor Asks Attorney-General to Assist Douglas County Prosecutor.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 13.—Gov. Caulfield today directed Attorney-General Stratton Shartel to assist Prosecuting Attorney John M. Bragg of Douglas County, in an investigation of the failure of the Bank of Ava last October, and in the prosecution of any persons found to have violated the State banking laws in operation of the bank. The order was issued on a request from Bragg and petitions signed by 535 residents of Douglas County, of which Ava is the county seat.

The Bank of Ava, with resources of $541,506 and deposits of $366,637, closed last Oct. 24. State bank examiners found that about $200,000 of the bank's funds was lent to members of the families of Mrs. Sallie J. Adams of Ava, bank president, and cashier J. A. G. Reynolds, some on unsecured notes. Several days after closing of the bank the cashier, J. A. G. Reynolds, hanged himself.

Shartel said Assistant Attorney-General Edward G. Robison and Ray Weightman would be assigned to the inquiry and that he would participate in it.

Puxico, Mo., Bank Cashier Arrested After Depository Closes.

By the Associated Press.

BLOOMFIELD, Mo., Dec. 13.—Bryan Cookson, 32 years old, cashier of the defunct Citizens State Bank of Puxico, Mo., was taken into custody last night by the Stoddard County sheriff on charges growing out of the closing of the bank.

Cookson is charged, in warrants issued by Prosecuting Attorney C. A. Powell, with having made false entries and with embezzlement. A shortage, reported around $27,000, is said to have been found by C. E. Estes, State bank examiner.

A warrant for the arrest of Lynn Varble, assistant cashier, on similar charges, also is in the hands of the sheriff. Varble is reported to be visiting in Arkansas.

The bank closed about 10 days ago. Puxico had another bank failure about 7 years ago when the Bank of Puxico closed. Depositors realized only two cents on the dollar when the liquidation was completed a short time ago.

NOLTE BARS PLAN OF TRAFFIC RELIEF ON KINGSHIGHWAY

Insists on Fixing of Damages in Advance Before Using Portland and Westmoreland Places.

UPON THIS, BROOKS DROPS ARRANGEMENT

Lindell - Union Cut - Off, Closing of Which Caused Congestion, to Be Opened Jan. 15.

Relief for the traffic congestion in the vicinity of Kingshighway and Union boulevard at Lindell drive, caused by the construction of the Lindell-Union viaduct over the Wabash railway tracks, cannot be obtained by use of Westmoreland and Portland places because of objections raised by Comptroller Nolte and the Police Department.

The trustees of thse two privately-owned residential places, which parallel Lindell on the north between Kingshighway and Union, had acceded to the request of Director of Streets and Sewers Brooks for the temporary opening of their thoroughfares, to relieve the rush-hour jams of automobiles for blocks around. Yesterday morning, as a result of their agreement, the west gates, which have been locked for several years — ever since St. Louis automobile traffic became heavy — were opened. However, Brooks had to notify the trustees that the city could not comply with their "perfectly reasonable conditions."

One of these conditions was that the city pay for repairs to the telford macadam pavements of the places after the detour is abolished. The surfacings are built for light traffic and doubtless would be damaged by the steady stream of cars. Brooks estimated repairs would cost from $2000 to $6000, depending on the volume of traffic and the time required, and said an accurate appraisal could not be made in advance.

Nolte Bars the Way.

Comptroller Nolte insisted that he would oppose the arrangement unless a definite figure was specified, for fear the bill might be more than was anticipated. The Westmoreland place trustees had reserved the right to employ their own contractor to make repairs. Nolte agreed that the idea of providing traffic relief was good. Mayor Miller, questioned by a reporter, said the two places should be used during the emergency and the city should pay for the damage, but he thought a definite amount should be stipulated.

This congested district is on the direct route of the Mayor's homeward drive from city hall to his West End apartment. Nolte resides in North St. Louis.

Brooks concluded, in view of the attitude of the Comptroller, the Mayor and the police, to let the situation alone, using signs and policemen to try to iron out the tangles in every rush-hour period. He feared the possibility of a disagreement if some new arrangement were made with the trustees.

Congestion Is Terrific.

It would be difficult to exclude trucks and other business vehicles from the two places, and there would be a traffic tangle at Kingshighway and Maryland avenue, at the east end of Westmoreland place, if the places were opened, Capt. John Y. Goodin of the Police Traffice Bureau, told Brooks.

It is necessary now to station several policemen in the vicinity in the rush hours morning and evening. For several days, since the cutoff between Lindell and Union has been closed, as well as the main intersection, there has been extreme congestion in Kingshighway, Lindell, Waterman and Washington boulevards, and other streets. Frequently it takes motorists going home for dinner 15 minutes to traverse the three blocks between Kingshighway and Union.

Terms Offered by Trustees.

The city has no control over Westmoreland and Portland places, and no part in their maintenance. Edward A. Faust, chairman of the Portland Park & Place Trustees, and Samuel H. Allen, chairman of the Westmoreland Park & Place Trustees, had told Brooks the places would be opened between 7 a. m. and 9 p. m. under the following conditions:

Payment by the city for repairs; enforcement by the city of the regulations; prohibition of trucks and other business vehicles; prohibition of parking; the right to cancel if the arrangement became bothersome to residents of the places, and recognition of the fact that the concession did not affect the private character of the thoroughfares.

Faust suggested that the city place signs at the gates to keep out commercial traffic and warn of a 15-mile speed limit, and that police be stationed at the gates all day, or at least at the busy ends in rush hours. He added that the arrangement might be changed to cover rush hours only, if trucks could not be kept out the rest of the day.

Roadway Open by Jan. 15.

Brooks announced that it was hoped to provide a temporary roadway over the new viaduct to carry Lindell traffic across Union by Jan. 15, and that about the same time a temporary connection between Lindell and Union could be made. Material from the abandoned Wabash Railway right-of-way will be used for the surfacing. The viaduct is expected to be finished by April.

Grand drive in Forest Park is closed also and at present traffic must detour north to Waterman boulevard, or south to a drive emerging from the park at Kingshighway, opposite Barnes Hospital, or at Oakland avenue.

EXAMINER CALLS MISSING $8,000,000 ITEM 'OVERSIGHT'

Complaints Against State Supervision After Los Angeles Disclosure.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Dec. 13.—The crash of the Guaranty Building & Loan Association, through the alleged $8,000,000 peculations of Gilbert H. Beesemyer, brought to light today an asserted embezzlement from another small association accompanied by complaints against the State's supervisory system.

The District Attorney's office, center of the investigation in Beesemyer's confessed defalcation, disclosed that Manley M. Johnson, former president of the Franklin Building & Loan Association, had been sought on grand theft warrants since September.

Complaints charged Johnson with grand theft and misappropriation of $95,000. O. V. Bailey, who said he bought the association for $10,000 after Johnson disappeared, caused the disclosures. He went to the investigators to give evidence of what he termed the "inadequacy" of the Building and Loan Commission's examinations.

Meanwhile C. C. Barnes, Commissioner's examiner, was questioned by the District Attorney. "It was an oversight," the official quoted Barnes' explanation for not finding the alleged peculations. "If they were there on the books," Barnes was officially quoted, "I did not see them."

TO URGE AID FOR NEGROES EVICTED FROM THEIR HOMES

Layman to Seek Storage Place for Victims' Furniture at Church Services.

The Negro congregation of Wayman's chapel, Twenty-third and Wash street, will be urged at services today to appoint a committee to call on Mayor Miller with a request that the city provide a public storage place for the household effects of persons evicted for nonpayment of rent. Alfred Burk, 1223 Market street, negro layman, will make the appeal at the regular morning services.

Burk told a reporter yesterday that the distress of many evicted Negro families has been made more acute by the city's practice of hauling away their possessions to the city dump before the owners could find other quarters or storage places. The possessions usually are most simple, he pointed out, but such as they are they comprise all these evicted families own. Usually, he said, the city allows the ejected tenants two days in which to get their furniture out of the street.

Evictions of tenants, chiefly Negroes, he said, were becoming more numerous daily. Burk said he would also protest against the city's negligence in allowing St. Louis to become a haven for professional hoboes.

YOUTH WHO ADMITTED 20 BURGLARIES IN CLAYTON JAIL

William M. Martin, 20-year-old Kansas farmer, arrested in Alton recently when a truck load of clothing and other articles stolen in burglaries, was found in his home, is held in jail at Clayton in default of $5000 bond, following issuance of a warrant charging burglary and second-degree larceny. Martin has confessed about 20 burglaries in St. Louis County and on the East Side.

The complaining witness in the case upon which he is held is Frank H. Stratman, 611 Newport avenue, Webster Groves. Stratman's home was robbed Nov. 8, and an electric sewing machine, rugs and clothing, the total valued at $300, were taken.

MISSING MAN FOUND WITH GIRL

J. E. Sapp of Rockford, Ill., Arrested in Minneapolis.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 13.—J. Everett Sapp, missing from his home in Rockford, Ill., for a week and at first thought to have been slain, is under arrest here with Miss Helen Shaner, former Freeport (Ill.) waitress, who disappeared with him. Sapp, 32 years old, was arrested at the request of Rockford police and agreed to waive extradition to Illinois, where he is charged with larceny. No charges have been filed again his companion.

Police said they arrested Sapp and the girl in a lodging house where they were registered as "Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Smith." They were found yesterday after a week's search during which Sapp's bullet-marked automobile was discovered at South Beloit.

CARICATURE BIG MEN AT GRIDIRON DINNER

Newspaper Correspondents Crash Crockery as 'Voter Vindicating Hoover at Polls.'

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Broad humor joined song and satire at the annual December dinner of the Gridiron Club tonight as newspaper men painted prominent persons and big events on the canvas of caricature.

President Hoover and the club's other distinguished guests were called upon to banish the cares of state and look lightly on the problems of public affairs.

The fun-making was started with a terrific crash of falling crockery echoing through the banquet hall. A member rushed forward and explained to President Charles S. Groves of the Boston Globe that the noise was "only the American voter vindicating Mr. Hoover at the polls Nov. 4."

The President had his opportunity to speak his mind freely before the evening was over, but only those present know what he said. An old established rule is: "Reporters never are present at Gridiron Club dinners." Senator Robinson, the Democratic floor leader, was the only other speaker.

"Never Surrenders the Payroll."

Senator Fess, chairman of the Republican National Committee, was portrayed on the field of Waterloo in the guise of Napoleon Bonaparte, astride a restive horse, "Volstead," riding to the front just in time to receive returns of the November elections. With a farewell to his army, he promised to get what were termed his beaten followers jobs as Ambassadors and Judges. He assured them that the "Old Guard dies, but never surrenders—the payroll."

Chairman Raskob of the Democratic National Committee, portrayed as a fairy godmother, touched a bedraggled Cinderella with a magic wand to have her doff rags and step forth royally clad as a symbol of "rejuvenated democracy." The wand was topped with a huge dollar sign.

Prohibition drew attention in a parody entitled, "Out Where the Wets Begins," and in a travesty, "Fireman, Save Me Che-ild." "Dr. 'Liquorsham' and Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, with her grape concentrate tonic, were presented as offering to save the "child," but the Anti-Saloon League and the W. C. T. U., obviously suspected their intentions.

Unemployed Lame Ducks.

An offer by Miss Prosperity to sing for a benefit performance for the "unemployed lame ducks" of Congress was rejected when it was discovered that the young lady had a lisp which caused her to pronounce her name "Myth Prosperity."

Charles Michaelson, publicity director of the Democratic National Committee, in a brilliant coronation extravaganza, was crowned "king bunko, the bombardier of blah, originator and grand deviser of the synthetic interview, and the maharajah of mimeograph."

A musical spectacle delineated the revolutionary activity in many parts of the world. The chief spokesman of the "revolutionists," who assembled from Latin-America, Germany, Russia, China and the United States, warmly thanked the member portraying Congressman Hamilton Fish Jr., chairman of the Congressional committee investigating communistic activities, for his services "in behalf of the cause."

Coolidge in His Workshop.

Former President Coolidge, in his column workshop, was represented as adding three more words to his already 397 to make his column "an even four hundred dollars."

However, the "columnist" soon was recognized as Marke Foote, Washington correspondent of the Grand Rapids Press and other Michigan newspapers. He was formally welcomed into the club as a new member.

Jay G. Hayden of the Detroit News was elected president of the club for the coming year; Walker S. Buel of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, vice president; J. Hardy Cunningham of Washington, secretary, and J. Fred Essary of the Baltimore Sun, treasurer.

$5000 Bank Holdup in Pittsburg.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, Dec. 13.—The Perry State Bank on the North Side, was robbed today after customers and employes had been herded into a vault by six robbers who escaped with $5000. Last Saturday, one robber shot and killed the cashier of a bank at Verona, a suburb, and made away with $1000. Four of the Perry bank robbers were reported to have escaped in the automobile of F. J. Chesterman, Bell Telephone Co. vice president, whose chauffeur was kidnaped shortly before the robbery.

BOY SCOUT ACTIVITIES

5-DAY WINTER CAMP AT IRONDALE, DEC. 27-31

Virtually Entire Program for Boy Scouts of St. Louis Council in Open Air.

A five-day winter camp for St. Louis Council Boy Scouts will be held at the Irondale Reservation, official summer camp of the scout organization, Dec. 27 to 31, according to M. D. Shippey, camp director of the council. Planned primarily for experienced scout campers, it will be held regardless of weather conditions.

Virtually the entire program of the winter camp will be carried out in the open air. Even sleeping will be done in open-front, three-sided shelters, the "Adirondack shacks" of the Ranger Camp. These shelters, raised only a few inches off the ground, and just large enough to accommodate two campers, are heated by reflector fires built in front of their open sides, the heat from the fires being sufficient to keep the shacks warm.

Part of the five days will be devoted to scouting activities and merit badge work, but most of the time will be spent in outdoor sports and games, such as treasure hunts, capture the flag, hiking and tracking. If it snows, skiing, skating and tobogganning will be taken up, while the climax of the camp will be a snow fight for the capture of a fort.

All meals, however, will be eaten indoors, in the Ranger mess hall, which has been boarded up and equipped with a heating stove. Some indoor activities also will be held in this hall.

Reservations for the winter camp are now being taken at scout headquarters, 505 Chemical Building. The cost for the entire trip, including transportation, will be $10 a scout. Without transportation, the cost will be $6.50.

Troop Notes

Central District.

Sixty merit badges, seven first-class pins, five second-class pins and one Tenderfoot badge were awarded at a troop Court of Honor, held by Troop 32 at its hall, 3939 Magnolia avenue, last Friday evening. The ceremony took place on Parents' night. The scouts gave an exhibition of their work, while Robert L. Spelbrink showed motion pictures taken at Camp Irondale and at the recent Catholic scout rally. The Court of Honor was composed of Chairman George L. Dyer, Judge Claude O. Pearcy, the Rev. Charles P. Maxwell, Robert L. Spelbrink, John Griffin, William Chard and E. A. Kleykamp. Field Executive Lambert Case was guest of honor.

Two new Central district troops received charters last week: Troop 72, with headquarters at the Rock Springs School, and Troop 238, meeting at the Caroline Mission. Carl Bauman is scoutmaster of Troop 72, while Henry Rinken scoutmaster of Troop 238.

Troop 74 of Sherman School set a record by conducting two troop Courts of Honor in three weeks. Commissioner G. A. Stamm presided at the last court, held last Friday evening. The scouts who received awards at this court had passed the recent board of review.

Troop 112, at the Olympic Athletic Club, has a new scoutmaster, Bill Hartnett, a former scout.

Troop 81, under Scoutmaster H. B. Crucknell, is preparing for a civic good turn. They will distribute baskets of food and gifts of clothing, toys and fuel to needy families during the holidays.

The scouts of Troop 106 of the Second United Presbyterian Church held three meetings last week to practice a Christmas program they will present of the Old People's Home and similar institutions Christmas day.

Troop 164 of the Elias, Michael School for Crippled Children has been reorganized and has resumed active work. The troop is now headed by Roy Berghaus and Bill Tubbs.

Troop 167 held its first troop Court of Honor last Thursday evening. Several awards were presented.

The committee of Troop 242 has presented enough wallboard to the troop to line the five cabins on its camp grounds. The committee will also donate supplies enough to enable the troop to hold at least one over night hike a month.

South District.

Nine troops in the South District had registered for the coming year by Dec. 10. They were: Troops 35, 39, 123, 157, 168, 181, 188, 224 and 234. re-registration of these troops on time enabled the district to advance another step toward its yearly objective.

Twenty South District scoutmasters and assistant scoutmasters held an overnight camp at Mueller Lodge, the new scoutmasters' cabin near Fenton, last week end, as the first of a series of camps planned by the leaders. A program of handicraft subjects under "Skipper" Thompson, and a number of general scouting activities occupied most om the time. The camp was headed by M. D. Shippey, formerly field executive of the district, and now camp director of the St. Louis Boy Scout Council. Shippey was presented with an American flag by the group Sunday morning.

The leaders voted to hold another meeting the last week-end in January, at which time the group will participate in some specialty training course program.

Eight scouts received second class badges, and five others were presented with first class badges, at a troop court of honor held by Troop 180, of the Rose Fanning School, a week ago Friday evening. A number of merit badges also were awarded. The court was part of an open house held by the troop for their parents and friends. H. P. Mueller, chairman of the South District, gave the principal talk of the evening.

The Sioux patrol is leading in an inter-patrol contest started by Troop 200 a week ago Friday. Both the scoutmaster and junior assistant scoutmaster attended the district leaders' meeting at Mueller Lodge last week-end. The troop visited the troop court of honor held by Troop 180 last week. Troop 200 has issued a challenge to any troop in the 13 to 16 year-old class for a basketball game. Arrangements for the game should be made with Herman Schnitzmeyer, 3811A Humphrey street.

West District.

Scout Leroy Petri of Troop 59 of Eden Immanuel Church performed a "good turn" by helping a man who had fallen on the sidewalk. It was later learned that the man had broken his leg.

Scout Elliot Fagerberg received his first class badge, Scouts Courtland Carrier and William Hecker their second class badges and Scout Roy Ellers a woodworking merit badge, at the first troop Court of Honor conducted by Troop 2 of the Pilgrim Congregational Church, a week ago last Friday evening. SCHEDULE OF REVIEWS TO BE HELD THIS WEEK

West District Meeting Tuesday Night Changed to the West Presbyterian Church.

The West District Board of Review, scheduled to meet at the Church of the Ascension Tuesday evening, will be held instead at the West Presbyterian Church, 5872 Maple avenue, that night, according to William Puffer, educational director of the St. Louis Boy Scout Council. The board is one of a series of six that will be conducted by the Council this week to examine candidates for advancement in Scout rank.

The reviews this week will be the last examination held by the districts this year, although a special Board of Review, for Scouts unable to attend the district boards, will be conducted at Third Baptist Church the afternoon of Dec. 27.

The reviews are scheduled to meet as follows: North District, Farragut School, tomorrow night; Inter-racial, Banneker School, also tomorrow; Suburban District, Webster Groves High School, Tuesday; West District, West Presbyterian Church, Tuesday; Central, Galludet School, Wednesday; South District, Fanning School, Thursday evening. All reviews will start at 7:30 o'clock.

Scouts may attend any board, although review by their own district board is preferable. In any case, however, the applicant must have a statement showing he is a registered Scout, and that he has passed all the tests required for the rank sought. The statement must be signed by his Scoutmaster.

ORDER OF ARROW CAMP

To Be Held at Scoutmasters' Cabin Next Saturday and Sunday.

An overnight camp at the Scoutmasters' Cabin on the Meramec River near Fenton, will be held by members of the Irondale Lodge of the Order of the Arrow, national Boy Scout honor camping fraternity, Saturday and Sunday. The Irondale lodge is composed of St. Louis city and county scouts who were elected to the fraternity for achievement at Camp Irondale last summer.

The camp next week will be the first conducted by the organization this winter. Directions on how to reach the cabin may be obtained from M. D. Shippey, camp director of the Boy Scout Council, at scout headquarters, 505 Chemical Building.

thur Sherwood of the City Court of Honor presented the awards, and gave a talk. Two weeks ago the troop committee held a banquet for the scouts. Several tests were passed after the banquet, and games were played.

By winning a mystery contest at the troop meeting last week, the second place Beaver patrol of Troop 30 of the Y. M. H. A. gained on the Bears, who are leading the troop in an interpatrol contest. The Eagles took second in the contest. The Elephants won a flag contest; inspection went to the Bears; while the Ravens won a review. Three new members have been added to the troop: Scouts Leonard Buckstein, Saul Rosen and Norman Schnurr. All passed their Tenderfoot tests last week.

A joint hike t othe Chain of Rocks Park was taken by Troops 246 of B'Nai Amoona and Troop 176 last Sunday. The day was spent in test-passing and in a football game. The scouts of Troop 246 are working toward winning their share of the awards at the December Court of Honor. Plans are being formulated for the third annual Parents' Night. Rabbi Halpern, a member of the Troop Committee, visited the troop at the last meeting.

ITALY-BRAZIL FLIGHT TO BEGIN TOMORROW

Twelve Planes to Attempt 6470-Mile Trans-Atlantic Trip in Seven Stages.

ORBETELLO, Italy, Dec. 13.—Twelve seaplanes were tuned up tonight in preparation for the start Monday morning on the first stage of a 6470-mile flight to Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

Air Minister Italo Balbo, who will lead the journey, flew to Rome today to say good-by to Premier Mussolini, received the Premier's best wishes and returned.

Forty-eight men will participate—four to each plane. The flight will redeem Signor Balbo's promise, made when Capt. Lewis Yancey and Roger Q. Williams flew to Rome in 1929, that he would personally lead an air cruise to America.

The planes will depart in squadrons of three machines each. Balbo will command the first squadron. His chief of staff, Gen. Valle and Col. Maddelena, holder of the world's distance and endurance record over a closed circuit, will be in charge of the other squadrons.

The cruisers are Savoia-Marchetti two-pontoon monoplanes, each with tandem Fiat motors developing a total of 1120 horsepower. Propellers of the forward motors are two-bladed, those in the rear four-bladed.

All the planes carry radio telegraph and radio telephone capable of operating at any wave length.

The first stage of the flight from Orbetello to Cartagena, Spain, is 750 miles; the second, to Kunitra, Morocco, 437; the third, Kunitra to Villa de Cisneros, Rio de Oro, 1000, the fourth, to Bolama, Portuguese Guinea, 938; the fifth from Bolama to Port Natal, Brazil, 1875 miles of ocean; the sixth, Port Natal to Bahia, 625; the seventh from Bahia to Rio de Janeiro, 844.

It is estimated the flight will require about 65 flying hours, with the planes averaging about 100 miles an hour. During the flight across the South Atlantic from Bolama to Uort Natal the Italian Navy has ordered eight scout cruisers posted at equal intervals along the route to lend assistance if it should be necessary.

SERVICE IN SUPREME COURT HONORS TAFT

Root Discusses Career of Chief Justice, Eulogies for Sanford, Too.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—In the historic room where for nine years he presided as Chief Justice of the United States, a distinguished audience gathered today to honor the memory of William Howard Taft.

The meeting, called by the bar of the court and presided over by George W. Wickersham, Attorney-General under President Taft, was addressed by Elihu Root, who was Secretary of State in the Taft cabinet; Circuit Judge Arthur C. Denison of Grand Rapids, Mich., who had been closely associated with the late Chief Justice in cleaning up the dockets of the Federal Courts; former Senator W. Cabell Bruce of Maryland; Andrew Squire of Cleveland, O., and William Marshall Bullitt of Louisville, Ky.

Immediately following the ceremonies, Associate Justice Edward Terry Sanford, who died within a few hours of his distinguished chief, was eulogized by Chauncey G. Parker of the United States Shipping Board, William L. Frierson of Chattanooga, Tenn., formerly Solicitor-General and Charles N. Burch of Memphis, Tenn.

Mrs. Taft was present as were members of the family of the late Justice Sanford. In the audience were Secretary Stimson, Attorney-General Mitchell, Solicitor-General Thacher, a number of Federal Judges and many members of the bar.

Root ascribed Mr. Taft's failure politically to the fact that he essentially was a Judge, swayed by his deep sense of responsibility, insisting on all occasions on carefully considering all problems confronting him, and reaching his decisions without political considerations. In his defeat for re-election, Mr. Taft presented the extraordinary spectable, Root said, of deep relief in escaping from the White House and its duties as President.

"He really loved the people," the distinguished jurist continued, "and his heart was warm towards every man, woman and child. One could not know him without being his friend and loving him."

Japanese Drinking Less.

TOKIO, Dec. 13.—Sobriety is increasing in Japan—but it's attributed to hard times and not to temperance campaigns. Japanese are drinking 27 per cent less sakeh, the national rice wine, than they did five years ago. The pressure of competition for jobs is called the major reason for the decrease.

INCREASED PHONE RATES O K'D

Higher Charges Permitted in De Kalb and Daviess Counties.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 13.—The State Public Service Commission today issued an order approving a new rate schedule for the Inter-County Telephone Co., operating in De Kalb and Daviess counties, slightly increasing the charges. The towns affected are Altamont, Gallatin, Pattonsburg, Coffey, Jameson, Amity, Clarksdale, Fairport, Maysville, Osborn, Santa Rosa, Stewartsville and Weatherby.

The commission also approved the application to abandon free inter-exchange communication between a number of the towns which were divided into districts. Commissioner Fred Hull wrote the opinion in the case, with Commissioner John Porter dissenting in a separate opinion.

Theater Robbed of $3500 Payroll.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 13.—Three men, armed with revolvers, invaded the office of the manager of the Majestic Theater, in the Loop, just before the matinee performance today and escaped with $3500, money that was to have been used to pay the cast of "Lysistrata."

TALES OF DISTRESS IN APPEALS FOR CHRISTMAS CHEER

Letters Asking for Baskets Describe Sickness, Unemployment and Children Waiting for Santa Claus.

IN a basement room in the 3000 block on North Ninth street lives one of the thousands of destitute families which has applied to the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival for a Christmas basket.

The husband is out of work and food is a luxury. The 16-year-old wife has a baby two weeks old. The baby was born in a hospital and the mother, having no carfare, walked home, some 40 blocks, carrying the baby in her arms.

From Bremen avenue comes this pathetic plea: "I am a widow and have five in the family with no one working. A Christmas basket would mean everything to us."

For these two families there will be no Christmas on Dec. 25 unless it is provided for them.

Read the following letters sent by the city's destitute to the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival office and then remember that every cent contributed to the fund will go to spreading Christmas good-will and happiness to all.

Here are a few of the appeals, selected at random:

My daddy and brother have been out of work for the past 11 months. Mother and I try so hard to do housework, but the people all say they cannot afford to have work done. Our furniture is mortgaged and we cannot pay our rent. Hope you can give us a basket.

I am not able to work, and won't be for some time as I was just operated on for appendicitis and it will be quite a while before I can resume work. If you will please send us a basket for the children I will appreciate it very much. We have four children and the ages range from 15 months old to 8 years old.

My husband has not worked for five months, we can't pay our rent and we owe four months now. Will you please send us a basket for Christmas. We won't be able to buy anything. I have a baby 17 months old. This is the first time we have ever had to ask for help.

Please send us a basket for Christmas. I have a little girl 6 and a boy 9 years old. I can't give them anything this year. I go out every day trying to get work and I shall continue trying.

I am a deserted wife with five babies and would appreciate a Christmas basket very much. My children are between the ages of 4 months and 6 years.

Please send to this family a basket. The husband is not working and they have nine children. The oldest is 12 years. Most of the children have no shoes or stockings. The family would appreciate a basket of food as the children are hungry. The wife is not able to go out as she has a young baby.

We are a family of four. My husband is a laborer and works when he can find anything to do. We have my mother who is 64 years old and my 11-year-old nephew who is a crippled orphan. If you can help us in any way we would certainly appreciate it.

Please send us a Christmas basket. I am out of work, my wife is sick and we have two children. We certainly would appreciate it.

Please give me a Christmas basket and tell me where I can get two tickets for my children to go to the Christmas tree in the Coliseum. My husband has just worked two weeks in six months and they are going to take our furniture away. I have three children. They won't get anything for Christmas. This is the first time I have ever asked anyone for help. Please help me have a bit of Christmas for the children.

I see in the paper you are going to give away baskets to the poor. I hope you will not forget me. I need one. My husband was sick for a year and he died the first of October with cancer. I have three children.

I am not working and haven't had a job for 12 months. Please send us a Christmas basket.

This is the first time I have to appeal for help. There are five of us and no one working. We surely would appreciate a basket for Christmas.

If you will please send us a basket for the children I will appreciate it very much. We have four children and the ages range from 15 months old to 8 years old.

My husband has not worked for five months, we can't pay our rent and we owe four months now. Will you please send us a basket for Christmas. We won't be able to buy anything. I have a baby 17 months old. This is the first time we have ever had to ask for help.

Please send us a basket for Christmas. I have a little girl 6 and a boy 9 years old. I can't give them anything this year. I go out every day trying to get work and I shall continue trying.

I am a deserted wife with five babies and would appreciate a Christmas basket very much. My children are between the ages of 4 months and 6 years.

Please send to this family a basket. The husband is not working and they have nine children. The oldest is 12 years. Most of the children have no shoes or stockings. The family would appreciate a basket of food as the children are hungry. The wife is not able to go out as she has a young baby.

We are a family of four. My husband is a laborer and works when he can find anything to do. We have my mother who is 64 years old and my 11-year-old nephew who is a crippled orphan. If you can help us in any way we would certainly appreciate it.

Please send us a Christmas basket. I am out of work, my wife is sick and we have two children. We certainly would appreciate it.

Please give me a Christmas basket and tell me where I can get two tickets for my children to go to the Christmas tree in the Coliseum. My husband has just worked two weeks in six months and they are going to take our furniture away. I have three children. They won't get anything for Christmas. This is the first time I have ever asked anyone for help. Please help me have a bit of Christmas for the children.

I see in the paper you are going to give away baskets to the poor. I hope you will not forget me. I need one. My husband was sick for a year and he died the first of October with cancer. I have three children.

I am not working and haven't had a job for 12 months. Please send us a Christmas basket.

This is the first time I have to appeal for help. There are five of us and no one working. We surely would appreciate a basket for Christmas.

HOW TO CONTRIBUTE TO THE POST-DISPATCH FUND; NO SOLICITORS EMPLOYED

SOLICITORS are not employed for the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival Fund.

Contributions may be mailed to the cashier of the Post-Dispatch, or, if it is preferred, an authorized representative of the fund will call at the contributor's request. For a representative, phone CHestnut 1173.

Every penny contributed goes to the purchase of food for the baskets and provision of the treat and entertainment for the children in the Coliseum.

The Post-Dispatch pays the cost of administration and the Festival Committee members gladly give their time to make sure that boys and girls of the less fortunate families may know the joy of Christmas.

Christmas Dinners for 5000 of the Neediest Families

VOLUNTEER workers busy packing baskets at the headquarters during preparations for one of the past Christmas festivals. This scene will be re-enacted this week at 901-3 Franklin avenue where 80 women will turn stacks of supplies into potential Christmas dinners for the most destitute families in St. Louis. The baskets will be distributed on Christmas eve. Contributors to the Festival fund are assured that what they give will be applied to either the baskets or the entertainment and presentation of gifts to 10,000 children in the Coliseum Christmas morning.

WEDNESDAY, DEC. 17, LAST DAY FOR APPLICATIONS FOR CHRISTMAS BASKETS

WEDNESDAY, Dec. 17, is the last day for receiving applications for Christmas baskets.

Applications of white families for baskets are received by mail at the Christmas Festival office in the Post-Dispatch building.

Beginning Tuesday morning, personal applications will be received at 901-03 Franklin avenue. Those who have applied by mail are instructed not to apply in person.

Applications by Negroes should be made in person at the Pine Street Branch of the Y. M. C. A., Pine street and Ewing avenue.

Owing to limited seating space in the Coliseum, only those children holding tickets will be admitted to the Christmas Festival. There will be coupons on the tickets good for transportation on street cars to and from the Coliseum.

Ticket distribution centers at playgrounds will be announced later.

GIFTS TO FESTIVAL FUND TOTAL $1468, $25,000 IS NEEDED

Need Greatest in 31-Year History of Christmas Parties—10,000 Children to Be Entertained.

CONTRIBUTIONS acknowledged today bring the fund for the thirty-first annual Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival to $1468.60. The lists have been out a week. This sum is a good start, but it is only that.

Many times that amount must come in. The appeals printed on this page speak for themselves. The aim of the Christmas Festival is to see that none of them go unanswered. To that end the committee of prominent citizens, headed by A. M. Roth, has been hard at work for weeks.

Plans call for a festival worth $25,000 in money and many times that amount in the spread of Christmas cheer and hospitality. Five thousand baskets are to be filled with food and distributed to the neediest families for their Christmas dinners.

Ten thousand destitute children will be entertained in the Coliseum Christmas morning with a celebration. They will be presented with toys and useful gifts. An opportunity to enjoy Christmas as do the children of the more fortunate families will be theirs.

The need is greater this year than ever before in the history of the Festival. Chairman Roth says so and he ought to know, for he has been working on the Festival for 31 years. What is needed is a generous outpouring of nickels, dimes and quarters and larger donations when they can be spared to meet the Festival's bills.

Contributions of every size will be gratefully acknowledged in the columns of the Post-Dispatch. Among the donations accounted for today is $1 sent by Charles Kober of Denver, Colo. Three dollars were sent by Mrs. E. M. A. of Wright City, Mo.

A number of donations have come from Illinois points. Surely if people outside of St. Louis are moved by the need within the city, St. Louisans themselves will open their hearts and pocketbooks to extend Christmas hospitality to their own.

The tree, which will gladden the hearts of boys and girls at the Festival, has been selected from a group of fine evergreens at Dittmar, Mo., near Cedar Hill on Gravois road.

Tomorrow afternoon, Nelson Cunliff, chairman of the tree and decorations committee; Fred W. Pape, chairman of the entertainment committee; Henry J. Bube, chairman of the hall committee; George S. Johns, associate editor of the Post-Dispatch, and several others will go to Dittmar and cut down the tree.

Mrs. A. H. Sippy, chairman of the basket packing committee, has sent letters to volunteer women workers who have helped her in the packing of baskets in past years asking them to assist again this year.

Owing to changes in address it is likely some of them will not be reached by mail, so she hopes that all of those who have done the work before will notify her that they will be able to do so again.

Basket packing will begin at 9:30 o'clock Wednesday morning in the headquarters at 901-3 Franklin avenue.

3600 TOY AIRSHIPS AMONG GIFTS TO BE DISTRIBUTED

One of the biggest orders on Santa Claus' toy list each year is that of presents for the 10,000 children who pack the Coliseum as guests of the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival.

While nearly all of the toys and other gifts are purchased with money donated to the fund, each year there are several lots of Christmas toys presented to the committee. The first donation this year was that of 3600 toy airships from the American Toy Airship Co., Mansfield, O.

Local express authorities were directed by the Ohio manufacturers to turn over the shipment, 25 gross in all, to some agency in St. Louis engaged in providing Christmas cheer for those who cannot provide it for themselves.

The result was that the balloons were delivered to the Post-Dispatch and will be among the thousands of dolls, balls, caps, horns, story books and other toys which will be distributed Christmas morning in the Coliseum.

For a North Missouri State Park.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

THE people of North Missouri are asking for a State park. If established, it should be centrally located and on the most attractive spot available.

There are several thousand acres of non-resident woodland where U. S. Highway 36 crosses the Linn and Macon County line. This land is not a trading proposition and does not belong to speculators. It can be purchased directly from the owners, and the State will not be asked to pay a bonus or commission to anyone. Highway 36 runs across this land for a distance of three miles and for scenic beauty it is not surpassed anywhere in the State, not even in the Ozark region with its million smiles. The Burlington Railroad crosses this tract of land, also the Bell Telephone long distance, local telephone and electric lines. These conveniences are already established and would cost the State nothing. The mussel fork of the Chariton River runs through this land for a mile or more, fed by springs, and is open water every day of the year, making it an ideal place for a game refuge. There are, besides this stream, many springs in the hills no doubt having medicinal and health-giving qualities. With small expense an artificial lake can be built that would cover 40 acres or more and be from 30 to 50 feet deep and filled with pure spring water, an ideal place for fishing, boating and for wild fowl.

This land is centrally located, being approximately half way between Hannibal and St. Joseph, half way between New York and Los Angeles, and half way from the Gulf to the Lakes. There is not a foot of waste land on this tract and it is covered with wild flowers from early spring until frost, and people come for many miles to gather violets, wild pansies, ferns and many other kinds of native flowers.

It is an ideal place for a State and national park. It would be a great advertisement for the State as everyone driving over Highway 36 would drive directly through this park. Why do not the State and nation join hands and give to the Central West, the richest farm producing district of the world, a game refuge and playground that would be worth while?

Mother Jones in Colorado.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

DURING the great Colorado strike, when 13 women and children lost their lives at the hands of thugs and outlaws, Mother Jones stood facing the machine guns and suffered physical pain and violence for the welfare of those good people, and those murders would have gone unpunished had it not been for the works of Mother Jones. She was thrown into prison and there kept for some time before she was released because of her defense of these good men, women and children. Later Rockefeller realized that he was wrong and that he had perpetrated a great crime upon Mother Jones and these working people and made this fact known to Mother Jones and thereafter became her friend.

The memory of Mother Jones will live through generations to come and she will be praised for the wonderful work which she did.

Suggestion in the Egg Crisis.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I SEE from the papers there has been a big drop in the price of eggs, due to overproduction. Isn't it time the Honorable Secretary of Agriculture, Mr. Hyde, spoke to the hens about this?

A SUBSCRIBER.

Repeal the Hawley-Smoot Act.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

IT SEEMS almost incredible that Congress has convened and has been in session nearly two weeks and no member of either house has shown common, ordinary horse sense enough to move the rescinding of the Hawley-Smoot tariff act. The business depression is steadily getting worse, unemployment is on the increase, millions are suffering. The panaceas which now engage Congress' attention will be about as successful in ameliorating conditions as Dr. Fess is in the role of political generalissimo, and their chief result will be to increase taxes.

When, following Mr. Hoover's inauguration, Congress began fooling with the tariff, the country was prosperously riding on the crest of the "Hoover boom." When Congress finished, the business goose that lays the golden eggs was a very sick fowl. Even the intelligence of a Congressman ought to be able to see that the one best way out of our troubles is to get back where we were before Messrs. Hawley and Smoot put over their raid. Gentlemen of the Congress: rescind the Hawley-Smoot tariff bill at once and without debate—there are limits to the country's patience.

THE WORLD COURT PROTOCOLS.

To get evidence of popular opinion on the ratification of the World Court protocols, which have been submitted by the President to the United States Senate, the American Foundation questioned 2036 newspaper editors or publishers of daily newspapers throughout the country. Out of these 2036 newspapers, 342 did not reply. Fifty-eight answered "No stand"—a striking reflection on their intelligence or courage—and the answers of 14 were so worded that they could not be classified as for or against. The vote in favor of ratification was overwhelming—1357 newspapers, with a circulation of 26,993,906, voted for it, and only 265, with a circulation of 10,557,317, voted against it.

Newspaper opinion is not necessarily public opinion, but this result may be taken as a clear indication of public opinion, because as a rule newspapers do reflect to a large extent the opinion of a majority of their readers. Some, of course, have the courage at times to advocate opinions that are not in accord with those of many of their readers. The referendum is valuable. The question was clear and to the point: "Do you or do you not favor the ratification of the World Court protocols?" Those enumerated that answered the question gave unequivocal replies. The returns show that in 36 states there is a preponderance of newspapers favoring ratification. The majority opposing were mainly in two states—Illinois and New Hampshire—and in the District of Columbia. The large circulation of the comparatively few newspapers opposing ratification is due to several publications with unusually large circulations, such as the Hearst group, the Chicago Tribune, two New York tabloids and five dailies in large cities. In nine states not a single paper is registered as opposed. In 10 other states only one paper is opposed.

The verdict therefore is conclusive as to the large preponderance of newspaper dailies favoring our participation in the World Court. We believe it can be accepted as a fair cross-section of popular opinion. The Senate, in considering the protocols, need have little doubt as to the favorable attitude of a majority of the American people.

We believe the result is in accord with the better thought of America on international co-operation and peace. We believe it is in harmony with the American spirit and the American tradition in favor of reason and law as substitutes for the sword in international disputes. We believe it will mark progress in the fight against war and for peaceful methods in settling international differences.

The United States has led the van in the movement toward arbitration. We have favored the creation and codification of international law. The World Court, therefore, is an embodiment of the American ideal. Its mission is not only to settle disputes but to strengthen and codify international law; to work steadily toward the goal so devoutly desired by all peace-loving people, the settlement of all judiciable disputes between nations in court, as civilized individuals do, instead of on the field of battle. That is a great goal to be attained. It would mark a higher and more orderly civilization, just as the establishment of courts and definite processes of law for the settlement of disputes marked a higher civilization within nations.

The Senate objected to the original protocols because they provided that the League of Nations might ask the court for advisory opinions, and adopted a reservation against the court rendering advisory opinions except after notice to all states adhering to the court and all interested states with public hearing, and forbade it to entertain any requests for advisory opinions touching any dispute or question in which the United States has or claims an interest, without the consent of the United States. Of course, the League of Nations could not accept the conditions of this Senate reservation because it gave the United States practically unlimited power to veto any requests for advisory opinions from the court. But Elihu Root translated the reservation into a form which made it acceptable to other nations and to the United States. It freed us from any obligation to accept any action of the court to which we had objections, unless an agreement could be reached with regard to it, and left the door open for withdrawal. It provides every reasonable safeguard. The objection urged by opponents of ratification that it puts us into the League is far-fetched. It uses the League of Nations as a bugaboo to keep us from any action toward setting up an international court or joining in movements of peace, order and law among nations.

We believe that our participation in the World Court would strengthen the reign of law among nations, and would go far toward abolishing dangerous friction and war. If we are to carry out the Kellogg pact of renouncing war, it is necessary that substitutes be provided. The ratification of the protocols would reflect the wisdom and the spirit of progress on the part of the Senate.

ADVICE FOR ILLINOIS INVESTORS.

The Illinois Secretary of State's office has begun a commendable program of educating the State's securities investors. Part of the campaign will consist of monthly bulletins, the first of which has just appeared. It is important that investors should have full knowledge of the stocks and bonds into which they put their money, for it is largely on ignorance and gullibility that fraudulent brokerage concerns thrive. The first bulletin is devoted to the end of such enlightenment. It urges prospective purchasers to take plenty of time for investigation before buying. The importance of dealing with firms of good repute is emphasized. "Don't judge the broker by the furniture in his office or by the size of his office," the bulletin warns. American investors annually throw away $500,000,000, it is estimated, on securities that seem first-class, but prove worthless. Such educational efforts as that in Illinois should result in reducing this economic waste. It is not quite so educational as the case of the Young Bros. in Missouri, but the lesson will last longer.

N'EST-CE-PAS?

Almost 300 years ago the French Academy began work on its standard grammar of the French language. Now comes word from Paris that the great work will be published within a short time. This is too important an announcement to lose sight of, even in the bustle of Christmas preparations and the lame duck session of Congress. For thousands, the volume's disclosures may be little short of matters of life and death. Should the grammarians, for instance, banish double gender nouns to St. Helena many a distracted son and daughter away at college would take a new lease on life. Elimination of the preterit indicative and the imperfect subjunctive from the speech of Moliere and Villon would save at least another semester for numberless others. There is no use dreaming of outright emancipation from the terror of irregular verbs, but what a great forward step in the world's civilization it would be if a program were laid out for dropping the defectives of the successive conjugations at four five-year intervals. Or, since it costs no more to aim high, a plan for eliminating the conjugations themselves. We leave it to the class. N'est-ce-pas?

CAPE GIRARDEAU'S FRANCHISE ELECTION.

Cape Girardeau has a great opportunity to regain home rule over its water and electric utilities by defeating at next Tuesday's special election the application of the Missouri Utilities Co. for a 20-year renewal of its franchises. Moreover, as explained at a mass meeting last Thursday night by Daniel C. Rogers, City Attorney of Fayette, Mo., there is no other way by which home rule is possible.

In the matter of franchises, Mr. Rogers is a competent advisor. He defeated in his own town an attempt to railroad a natural gas franchise through the City Council, and he participated in a successful campaign against a natural gas franchise in Boonville. Mr. Rogers, who is not subsidized by anyone and has volunteered his time and services to a cause which interests him, rendered Cape Girardeau a public service in expounding the dangers and disadvantages to municipalities that lie in franchise grants.

If Cape Girardeau votes for the franchises, it is handing over to the utility a vested property right that every court in the land must respect. Rate schedules embodied in franchises, as Mr. Rogers said, are absolutely of no consequence. "The promise of a utility," he added, "that its rates will not be increased is not worth the snap of one's fingers." He proved that statement by citing the case of Kansas City, which gave its street car company a franchise whose terms called for a 7-cent fare. A little later, the company applied for a 10-cent fare, which was granted by the State Public Service Commission. Kansas City vainly appealed to the Missouri Supreme Court, which held that the commission had the power to set aside any rate schedule placed in a franchise contract; that cities and utilities could not make binding franchise contracts as to rates.

Water and electric services in Cape Girardeau are not dependent upon franchise grants. All that it is necessary to do is to grant the Missouri Utilities Co. a permit to operate, this permit not to be issued by the city's legislative body for it then would be tantamount to a franchise. Such a permit would save for Cape Girardeau control over the utility.

We urge Cape Girardeau not to put the franchise noose around its neck for the next 20 years. By defeating the proposal, thus following the lead of Fayette, Boonville and other towns which have learned the franchise lesson, it will only be acting in its own best interests.

COOK OF COOKS AND JUDGE OF JUDGES.

Not all the world's brave deeds are done at the passes of Thermopylae and on the slopes of the Bunker Hills. Peace hath her valor no less renowned than war. For pure, unadulterated bravery consider the names of Mrs. M. L. Friese of Redwood Falls, Minn., and Sam H. Thompson of Quincy, Ill., president of the American Farm Bureau Federation. Mrs. Friese, be it known, is the cook of cooks in this land of rocks and rills and templed hills. Hers is the honor to possess the title of "culinary champion of all farm women cooks of America." Acceptance of the cooking crown was an act of bravery unrestrained, and defending it will call for courage more courageous than that of Kipling's captains; but Mr. Thompson's fortitude reaches far greater heights. He was the judge. Five hundred of the nation's best were his to choose from. He tasted Mrs. Friese's roast turkey, parsley stuffing, giblet sauce, glazed sweet potatoes, cranberry ice and mince pie, and said they were the best of all. Beside that the deeds of derring-do when knighthood was in flower become as childhood's quiet hours on the sandpile.

PRINCIPIA AND THE PIASA BLUFFS.

The Piasa bluffs are considered the most beautiful stretch upon the Mississippi River. From Lake Itaska to the Gulf of Mexico there is nothing else like the white limestone Piasa bluffs, fantastically sculptured by erosion, hollowed by caves, and standing like palisades over the Father of Waters.

For many years the Ames family has preserved the Piasa bluffs from Elsah down to Bird Hollow in a state of nature. No quarries have defaced that lovely scene, and throughout those approximately three miles of river frontage there is not one confirmation of the poet's lament that "every prospect pleases and only man is vile." Now the obligation of the Ames family to posterity has been assumed by Principia. Principia, a Christian Science educational institution in St. Louis, is to build its college on the Piasa hills.

So that the white and picturesque limestone bluffs, which the early explorers likened to the palisades of the Hudson, are to be preserved just as they were when they excited the admiration of Marquette, Joliet, La Salle and Joutel.

THE FELLOW WHO WANTED THE EARTH.

Argentina Now Leading Beef Exporter

This country, former leader in meat exports, has lost supremacy to Argentina; industry has grown tremendously there, and beef can be produced more cheaply than here; U. S. farmers now sell only on local market; South American shipments made possible by refrigeration; U. S. packing concerns are important in Argentina.

Written for the Post-Dispatch by Chester Lloyd Jones, Director School of Commerce, University of Wisconsin.

TIME was, and not so very long ago, when the United States was not only able to supply its own needs for meat but also to export a greater surplus than was shipped out of any other country in the world. Great quantities of preserved meats found their way abroad and later, as shipping facilities improved, a profitable business developed in shipping from our eastern seaboard large quantities of live cattle. Later the export of live cattle on the hoof declined as modern methods of refrigeration and the great packing plants of the Middle West came into existence.

The newer methods of shipment increased slowly in acceptance at first, but by 1901 the United States had an export trade in fresh beef totaling 351,000,000 pounds. The form of our beef exports was changing. Live shipments were rapidly being replaced by consignments of frozen and later chilled beef. But we were the world's greatest exporters of beef products. In fact, other countries shipped so little that there could hardly be said to be real competition. But in 1929 we sent abroad less than $3,000,000 worth of fresh beef and veal. We were practically out of the market, although the export of beef and beef products in the world at large now reaches over 3,000,000,000 pounds.

There are a number of causes for our loss of leadership in the international beef trade. We are still, with the exception of Russia, the greatest beef raiser of the world, but our surplus available for export—at current prices—has disappeared. We could raise more cattle, but not at the prices at which meat can be produced in countries which we are accustomed to consider less strong economically. The rise of our domestic population and the encroachment of farms on the ranges are among the chief reasons we no longer play an important role in the international trade, but more important has been the fact that South American countries have had a tremendous growth in the cattle business and can now beat us on price and almost if not quite equal us in quality.

When cattle were shipped alive we still had a decided advantage, for the sea voyage to market was shorter than from South America and the losses less. But in international beef sales, refrigeration has been a cause of our undoing. Frozen and chilled beef travels long distances in smaller space and with no deterioration because of long voyages.

Many disappointments met the first adventurers in their efforts to supply fresh meats from the Southern Hemisphere to northern markets. The first shipment to come through in satisfactory condition dates from 1877, but only a few tons went northward each year and by 1899 the total from Argentina was only 9100 tons.

Cattle were still predominantly of the old "criollo" type, which had for generations been slaughtered chiefly for their hides, tallow and bones. Once the practicability of refrigeration was demonstrated the Argentine farmers lost no time in transforming the character of their livestock. The local packers demanded cattle that would dress well. Fancy prices were paid by the "estancieros" for the best beef stock the market afforded. Shorthorns and Herefords were the favorites. So great were the imports of fancy breeding stock, in fact, that Argentina has now some of the finest in the world. Purchases abroad are now at an end and less than 1 per cent of the thoroughbreds now in the country were born outside of Argentina.

As shipping conditions improved and the grade of cattle became better, modern packing houses made their appearance. At first the business was in British hands, but in 1908 one of the largest American packers bought out and enlarged one of the then important establishments. Others followed until today the list of interests in Argentina business reads very much like the register of the big packing houses in a city in the United States. American firms now ship two-thirds of all the meat products exported from Argentina. Thus United States interests have recouped the loss of their export trade from this country by winning a dominating position in the packing business of what is now the world's greatest beef exporter.

The world's beef market is now in South America, with Argentina shipping in her best years not far below 2,000,000,000 pounds. The United States in a good year ships about 150,000,000 pounds. In 1927 the United States shipped about one-fourteenth as much as Argentina. Indeed, not only has Argentina far outstripped us, but even little Uruguay, with a population and area about comparable to those of Kansas, ships over two and a half times as much beef to foreign ports as we do.

The world's source of supply for surplus beef has patently passed to the Southern Hemisphere. Together Argentina and Uruguay furnish in current years 73 per cent of the total. American farmers now sell their meats in all but a negligible proportion in domestic markets. They sold to other countries almost a tenth at the beginning of the century. Only about 2½ per cent now finds its way abroad.

Europeans have turned to South America for their beef, not through the influence of tariffs adopted to regulate their imports or in resentment against tariffs enforced in the United States. Our shipments enter their ports under "most favored nation" rates, and if we could meet world market rates we could sell, but unfortunately we cannot. We have lost the market in a fair competition in a free field, and have no prospect of regaining it because our costs of production are too high to allow us to compete.

Indeed, even in the home market Argentine and Uruguayan meats have made their appearance—not in large quantities in the fresh classes as yet, but in quantities sufficient to indicate that the competition which took away the world market does not stop at the border of the former chief supplier of the world. Last year we bought Argentine and Uruguayan meat for our tables totaling over 100,000,000 pounds. The day has indeed gone when the United States was the leading meat exporter of the world.

WASHINGTON DAY BY DAY

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.

THERE are interesting stories back of the squibs seen so often in the newspapers that so-and-so had fallen afoul of the immigration law and was in Washington to try to straighten things out. They are many. And the technical cases involved are about as numerous as the persons. Rarely are the conditions duplicated.

Generally speaking, the difficulty these persons find themselves in is the same old story—failure either willfully or thoughtlessly to attend to a bit of red tape at some previous time.

Take movie stars, for example. Their woes are plentiful. Because actors are within the preferred class of "artists," they are admitted to this country for temporary stay and employment without regard to quota limitations.

SIX months is the life of an original entry permit of this character. It can be extended indefinitely, but only for six months each time.

A young Englishman, whose name is familiar to movie fans everywhere, not long ago stayed in the United States for more than a year. He decided to visit his home, but when he returned to this country he found the door ready to be slammed in his face. He came within an inch of being shipped back home. Only his eloquence saved him and won for him an additional six months' grace.

He had won a movie contract and liked America so he decided to seek citizenship. But his efforts were in vain. You can't apply for citizenship unless you enter under a quota visa. He was in a quandary. To return to England for a quota visa would require months and perhaps years.

FRANTICALLY he sped to Mexico. He went to every American Consulate there trying to get quota status. It was of no use. Finally he gave it up as a hopeless task. Re-entering the country under his artist's permit, he quit his highly profitable movie job with two months of his legal stay under that extension still to run, and set sail for London.

He went home to file an application for a quota visa and to wait for it in England. He could do nothing else, for his eligibility for an artist's entry permit terminated the moment he applied for quota immigration status.

The last heard of him he was still waiting. Instead of doing movie work at a big salary, he was forced to make a living doing skits in London music halls.

A MODERN PROPHETESS.

Oscar Ameringer in the American Miner.

MOTHER JONES knew as well as Father Abraham Lincoln that this country cannot endure divided into masters and slaves. She saw in the struggle of labor but a continuation of the age-long war for equality. She never was fooled by the old falsehood that words, laws, proclamations, declamations and constitutions suffice to lift toolless and propertyless workers on a level with property owners who rule because they own what others must use to live. And she threw herself into the struggle of the submerged with all her body and soul—with all the burning hate and love of a prophetess of Israel.

MORE STRESS ON CITY HISTORY IN SCHOOLS

Pamphlet Distributed in Grades Volume to Be Ready Next Year.

Instruction in the history of St. Louis in the public grade schools is to receive greater emphasis hereafter, Superintendent Gerling has announced. A pamphlet containing the city's history from its founding in 1764 to 1820, when Missouri was admitted to the union, is being distributed as a starter.

A volume to be issued early next year will contain the story of the community for the 110 years subsequent to 1820. The pamphlet, which is a special issue of the Public School Messenger, and the book are by Miss Dena Lange, a teacher of English and economics at Cleveland High School.

It is the intention to include this instruction in the social science course of the fourth to eighth grades, inclusive, but how the subject is to be divided among the grades has not been determined. The pamphlet was written for the understanding of fourth grade pupils.

Helping Future Citizens.

Gerling said it was hoped that future adult citizens would be helped by this knowledge to a better appreciation of their home city. He added:

"That it is an educational duty of the public schools to teach the history of St. Louis is a fact widely recognized, not only by men and women engaged in the work of education, but by laymen. Public-spirited citizens frequently have urged that children be taught to know St. Louis and to appreciate the city's history and traditions. The school curriculum includes the teaching of St. Louis history among its definite objectives. There has been, however, a lack of sufficient materials, well organized in form and graded in difficulty, for the adequate presentation of this work as outlined."

The pamphlet tells about the founding of St. Louis, its early progress, the naming of streets and cultivation of land, Indian visits, the Indian mounds, the transfer from Spanish to French to American rule and other developments. Pictures of old houses and historical markers are shown.

Some Early Ordinances.

Some of the early city ordinances are recounted. They included provisions for the return of runaway slaves, the patrol of streets at night, a $2 tax on every dog to a family above a single exempted one, formation of fire companies by all men over 18 and monthly chimney sweeping to prevent fires.

Every householder had to keep two leather buckets for fire-fighting and a ladder high enough to reach his roof. Any men who did not run to a fire had to throw their buckets into the street for others to seize, and everybody at a fire was expected to help fight the flames rather than look on.

A town Marshal was picked in 1808 and an old fort was the first jail, the book relates. Four men patrolled the city nightly and any male citizens over 18 who did not stand watch were fined $1. The first brick sidewalk was laid on Second street in 1821, eight years after William C. Carr erected the first brick house.

The first school, a French one, opened in 1774 and it was not until 1808 that the first English school opened.

MO. PAC. DENIED VENUE CHANGE IN $195,000 DAMAGE SUIT

Judge Killoren Overrules Plea on Ground of Prejudice in Case of Former Employe.

Circuit Judge Killoren yesterday overruled the plea of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Co. for a change of venue in the $195,000 damage suit brought against it by Joseph Hayden of Chicago for personal injuries alleged to have been suffered in a tank car accident in Kansas City, Aug. 22, 1929, when he was assistant yardmaster for the railroad there.

Testimony of attorneys for other railroads, citing instances where large verdicts were returned against railroads here by jurymen of "less than average intelligence," was introduced by the defendant in support of its contention that it could not obtain an impartial jury in St. Louis. Hayden's attorney offered testimony by business men who expressed the opinion that the Missouri Pacific Railroad stands high in the esteem of St. Louisans because of its large investments here. The Court ruled that no evidence had been introduced to substantiate the charge of prejudice.

Hayden alleged that he suffered fractures of both feet, internal injuries and injuries to his spine.

CUBA IS REPORTED QUIET

By the Associated Press.

HAVANA, Dec. 13.—No disorders were reported in Cuba today, the third day through which the republic has lived without constitutional rights due to the suspension of guarantees ordered by President Machado when the Government was threatened by political unrest.

Troops have been called out only at two points—Cienfuegos and Guantanamo. There are 57 days remaining until Machado's specially invested authority for a 60-day suspension of guarantees expires. During this time the Government hopes to see political difficulties ironed out, particularly in reference to the student situation, which at the present moment is the most important under consideration.

ALMOST HALF OF TAX ON GRAVOIS JOB PAID

Officials Think This Indicates Absence of General Opposition to Benefit District.

In the seven weeks since the numerous special tax bills assessing property owners for the widening of Gravois avenue were issued, almost half of the bills, representing almost half of the total benefits, have been paid.

City officials believe this to be an indication that the protest against the benefit district is not so general as opponents of the improvement have said it is, and that the people of the district are not so hard up as has been represented.

There were 23,470 bills for $1,531,930 issued on Oct. 23 against the property in a wide area, which Circuit Court commissioners had held to be benefited by the Gravois widening between Russell and Grand boulevards and the connection with Twelfth street. Up to yesterday, collections at the Comptroller's office were $727,812, paid on about 11,000 bills.

The persons who paid did so on their own initiative. The benefits have been discounted with the Greater St. Louis Corporation, a firm created to provide ready cash to carry out public improvements where land is condemned.

Officials think it is unlikely persons who intended to fight the assessment would pay their tax first. The Gravois Benefit District Protest Association, which plans to sue to set aside the benefits, claims a membership of about 18,000, with a constant increase. A spokesman for the association explained that some of the members were not in the Gravois benefit district, but have been taxed for other improvements.

Interest on the assessments was charged at the rate of 1 per cent a year up to Nov. 22, representing negligible amounts on many bills. Since Nov. 22 the interest has been at the rate of 6 per cent a year. After Oct. 23, 1935, it will be at the annual rate of 8 per cent.

GAIN IN NEW LIBRARY CARDS BECAUSE OF UNEMPLOYMENT

Of 6882 Permits Issued in November 4136 Go to First Time Borrowers.

The effect of unemployment on reading is noted by the Public Library in its November report, issued yesterday. It is stated that during the month 6882 new borrowers' cards were issues, 4136 of them going to persons who had never before had library cards. As compared to the corresponding month last year the gain is 518.

The library issued 341,764 books during the month, 181,201 going to children and 160,563 to adults. Chief points of circulation among the branch libraries were the Carpenter Branch, Grand boulevard and Utah place, which issued 25,760 books and the Gravois Branch, 5008 Morganford road, which circulated 14,125 volumes.

More than 4000 new books were added to the library during the month, to including 53 Braille volumes.

30 HURT IN DEMONSTRATION BY NATIONALISTS IN BOMBAY

Immense Procession at Funeral of Man Killed Trying to Stop Hauling of Foreign Cloth.

By the Associated Press.

BOMBAY, India, Dec. 13.—Several hundred thousand Indian Nationalists marched today in one of the most impressive processions Bombay has ever witnessed at the funeral of a man who was killed by a motor truck whose progress with a load of foreign cloth he was attempting to obstruct.

Police were obliged to charge the mob with staves and 30 of the Nationalists were injured.

Soldiers with fixed bayonets were stationed on the great open beach known as Chowpathy Sands, where the Congress leaders intended to burn the body with spectacular ceremonies. What might have been a grave situation there was avoided when the leaders were induced to transfer the cremation to a more secluded place.

HOOVER'S OIL POLICY UPHELD

Court Denies Plea to Prospect for Oil on U. S. Domain.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13. — The application of Roy G. Barton of Las Cruces, N. M., for a rehearing of his petition involving President Hoover's oil conservation policy was denied today by the District of Columbia Court of Appeals. The Court made provision to afford counsel opportunity to present to the Supreme Court an application for a writ of review.

A majority opinion of the Appellate Court had sustained the action of Secretary Wilbur in rejecting 5000 pending applications for permit to prospect for oil and gas on Government domain. Justice Orsdel filed a dissenting opinion.

Other shops on the Wabash also will be opened next week. Officials here said the company was making every effort to keep the shops working as much as possible and that a special Christmas payroll was being prepared, so that every employe would have some funds for the holiday season.

To Rush Half-Holiday Bill.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Representative Dallinger (Rep.), Massachusetts, said today after a conference with President Hoover that the Bureau of the Budget estimated a Saturday half-holiday year-around for all Federal employes would cost $24,000,000 annually. Dallinger, author of a half-holiday bill, said budget estimates would be submitted to Congress at an early date. He hopes for action at the present session.

"Old Java"
the lost flavor that first made coffee famous, 75 years ago, is found again! None knew whence that flavor came nor why years later it vanished ..... But science found the secret: Coffee then was carried in wooden ships that slowly sailed tropic seas. The humid air of their damp wood holds caused something strange to happen .... Each green coffee berry was coated with a ripening "culture" (like yeast). This made the coffee, on reaching port, as ripe as golden peaches. No trace of acid remained. The flavor was as smooth as cream ..... And then came the steel steamship. Voyages dwindled from months to days ..... No longer does coffee have time or wood to season it. No ripening culture forms en route to mellow it ..... "Old Java" had become just a name. But Forbes has made it real again. The conditions in old sailing ships are duplicated ..... The coffee is covered, with the same ripening "culture." The result is Forbes Culture Ripened Coffee —ripe when roasted— as rich as Old Java, ripened at sea.

HINDENBURG OPPOSED TO U. S. WAR MOVIE

Threatened to Resign German Presidency if "Libel on Soldiers" Continued in Theaters.

By Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

BERLIN, Dec. 13.—President Von Hindenburg who was commander of the German Imperial armies during the World War, was the principal objector to the showing here of the American film, "All Quiet on the Western Front," the correspondent learns on good authority.

He threatened to resign if "this libel on the German soldier" was allowed to continue in motion picture theaters here, yesterday the Government forbade further showings of the picture in Germany.

Knowledge of Hindenburg's opposition to the film came from the Center party, which unexpectedly favored suppression of the picture, although it had at first been disposed to stand with the Socialists in support of it. The party reversed its decision when it learned how strongly Hindenburg felt on the subject.

A high official, who custom does not permit to be quoted, but who was at the front throughout the war, said it was not Hitler's Fascist followers who forced the prohibition of the film, but the majority of the German people. He said the picture presented a one-sided picture of the German front and, being pacifist in tone, deliberately overlooked the comradeship among soldiers and the other nobler aspects of the war.

"You can't prevent war with unfair pacifist films," he said. "You have got to get at the root of war with efforts such as the Kellogg pact."

Whistling, Cat Calls Stop Showing of Film at Erlangen.

ERLANGEN, Germany, Dec. 13.—Stench bombs, whistling and cat calls last night stopped the showing of "Oh, the Good Old Student Days" at a movie theater in this university town, near Nuremberg. Afterward the students marched to the public square and continued their protest in a mass meeting. The police, greatly outnumbered, were powerless to suppress the disturbance.

4274 in State Prison, New Record.

JEFFERSON CITY, Dec. 13.—A new high record in population at the penitentiary was reached late today when 11 new prisoners from Pemiscot County were "dressed in." The present number of inmates at the prison and on prison farms is 4274. The old record was 4272. The prison was built to house approximately 2500.

B. & O. CONSIDERS TWO PLANS FOR OPERATING C. & A. ROAD

Will Either Form New Company or Absorb Line Directing, Thus Dropping Alton Name.

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—Whether the Chicago & Alton Railroad loses its identity is understood in financial circles here to be dependent upon which of two plans for its operation is adopted by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. The B. & O. bought the Chicago & Alton at auction for $23,000,000 and will take possession Jan. 8.

Under one proposal, the Baltimore & Ohio would form a new company to own and operate the C. & A. The alternative, which would mean the passing of the name of the old road, is the direct absorption of the lines as a division of the B. & O.

Purchase of the road was in line with the plan of consolidation advanced by the Interstate Commerce Commission and there is some prospect, according to information in official circles, that absorption of the C. & A. into the B. & O. system will be effected if the four principal Eastern roads reach an accord on consolidation proposals. These conferences were recently resumed and then broken off when an impasse was reached.

IN an endeavor to revive the art of fancy ice skating in St. Louis after an interval of almost 12 years, a group of socially prominent men and women has formed the St. Louis Skating Club, which meets Monday and Wednesday evenings at the Winter Garden from 7 to 8 o'clock, before the rink is opened to the public, and Monday mornings from 10 to 12 o'clock. Miss Lucy Blackburn Marries W. F. Morgan

ELABORATELY decorated with chrysanthemums in all of the autumn tints, the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church in New York afforded a colorful background for the wedding late Friday afternoon of Miss Lucy Blackburn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. Randolph Blackburn, formerly of St. Louis, and William F. Morgan, son of Mrs. Harry Morgan of Philadelphia. The ceremony was performed by candlelight in the presence of 200 members of New York society. Hundreds of blossoms adorned the chancel, and the bridal party passed through a candle-lit center aisle.

The bride was preceded to the altar by her sister, Miss Marianne Blackburn, as maid of honor, and Mrs. James H. Freeman as matron of honor. They were gowned alike in turquoise blue velvet fashioned after the long, flaring mode with elaborately shirred trains at the hip line. Their flowers were chrysanthemums and Talisman roses.

The bridesmaids, who entered the church in pairs, were: Miss Roberta Martin and Miss Ruth Wana-

More Than 300 At Debut of Jane Francis

Winter Setting With Opalescent Lights at Ball Given by Parents of Veiled Prophet Queen

A COLD winter night, with tinsel icicles like thousands of tiny stalactites in a mammoth cave, and in the distance a revolving moon reflecting the whiteness of snow-capped mountains, was re-created for the setting for the debut ball of Miss Jane Perry Francis, 1930 Veiled Prophet queen, given Friday night at the St. Louis Country Club by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Talton T. Francis of Ladue road.

The walls of the dining room had been festooned from the ceiling with holly and smilax, from which finely spun strands of Christmas tinsel depended over the heads of the dancers. The lights were dimmed to a frosty opalescence with inverted three-tiered circular shades, decorated with winter landscapes and tiny cottages nestling in snowdrifts. Smaller shades swung from white wall brackets. Two orchestras, playing alternately all evening, were seated in an alcove of silvered cedar trees.

The illusion of winter was further enhanced by a large painting covering the east wall in the debutante's room, of snowy mountains and fir trees scintillating in the light of the moon.

The only note of color in the dining rooms was introduced in the table decorations for the dinner which preceded the dancing. Low wicker baskets of pink roses and steevia alternated with branched silver candelabra holding tall ivory tapers.

In the lounge of the club where Mr. and Mrs. Francis and their daughter received their guests, flowers predominated in the decorative scheme. More than 50 baskets of roses and chrysanthemums in every conceivable shade adorned tables and the fireplace, with some of the most elaborate arranged as a bower in front of the tall screen which afforded a background for the receiving line. The screen itself reverted in decoration to the winter theme, and at each side were giant Christmas trees draped with tinsel.

Miss Francis decided against her coronation gown for her debut in favor of an ivory georgette, fashioned without adornment on modified Grecian lines. She carried a great armful of waxen Joanna Hill roses. Mrs. Francis was gowned in blue velvet embroidered in rhinestones.

More than 300 guests attended the ball, one of the most brilliant of the season. The debutantes and their escorts were seated at a U-shaped table with 110 covers, and in the central room at a much larger table Mr. and Mrs. Francis presided over a group of their friends.

At Miss Francis' table were: Miss Almira Steedman, Miss Dorinda Kennerly, Miss Jane Messick, Miss Mary Merwin Shepley, Miss Cynthia Polk, Mrs. Clinton L. Whittemore Jr., Miss Mary Francis Day, Miss Mary Dana, Miss Adeline Smith, Miss Louise Goddard, Miss Margaret Vieths, Miss Christine Ferdyce, Miss Grace Jones, Miss Betty Kellogg, Miss Amelia Overall, Miss Mary Jane Baumes, Miss Betty Rathmann, Miss Elizabeth Singleton, Miss Florence Jones, Miss Martha Love, Miss Lucy Turner, Miss Katherine Boyd, Miss Christine Jones, Miss Jane Burns, Miss Emily Lewis, Miss Janet Shields, Miss Melissa McKay, Miss Alice Hallett, Miss Jane Allen Connett, Miss Sally Taylor, Miss Anne Wyles, Miss Jane Blackmer, Miss Virginia Cosby, Miss Roberta Darnell, Miss Ellen Wade, Miss Julia Rogers, Miss Anne Farrar Semple, Miss Jean Ford, Miss Marie and Miss Frances Wilson, Miss Jane Meier and Miss Martha Sluder.

Miss Eloise Wells To Wed S. W. Polk

MR. and Mrs. George E. Wells, 4615 Lindell boulevard, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Eloise Wells, and Samuel Wetherford Polk of New York, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Polk of Fort Worth, Tex. The wedding will take place in January. Mr. Polk and his bride will make their home in New York.

Miss Wells is a graduate of Mary Institute and Pine Manor Junior College at Wellesley, Mass. She attended for one year the Cambridge School of Landscape Architecture. maker; Miss June Collyer and Miss Genevieve Macy; Miss Ethel Barrymore Colt and Mrs. Martha Tucker; Mrs. William B. Leeds and Mrs. Alan Ryan Jr.; Mrs. Frank Morgan and Miss Marjorie Oelrichs. They wore burnt orange velvet with hats to match. Their gowns were designed with fitted bodices in the off-shoulder effect with narrow berthas ending in large bows at the deep V at the back. They carried chrysanthemums and yellow roses.

The bride wore her mother's wedding gown of ivory velvet with a long skirt depending from a high waistline. The V neck was filled in with rose point lace, and the long train was appliqued with lace, an heirloom in the bride's family. Her flowers were white orchids, and her only jewelry was a diamond and platinum bracelet, the gift of the bridegroom. Miss Blackburn gave her attendants crystal necklaces, and Mr. Morgan gave his groomsmen platinum watch bands.

John B. Morgan was his brother's best man, and the groomsmen were Richard Tucker Smith, Marvin Oelrichs, Robert Blackburn, brother of the bride; William B. Leeds, Glenn Hunter, Julius Macy, Herman Oelrichs II and Edward Erlanger.

Following the ceremony a reception was given at the home of the bride's parents in the Ritz-Tower apartments. A dinner for the bridal party was served in the drawing room adjoining the receiving room.

Mr. and Mrs. Morgan will spend their honeymoon in Europe, and will make their home at 495 Park avenue. They will spend Christmas with friends in London.

The bride and her family formerly made their home in St. Louis, and Miss Blackburn was graduated from Mary Institute here. She later attended Smith College and, after graduation, went to several dramatic schools in New York. Miss Blackburn has appeared in several plays in New York, including the New York Theater Guild. She will continue her work in dramatics upon their return from the honeymoon.

Mr. Morgan is a graduate of Princeton University, and a member of a family prominent in the theater. His father, the late Harry Morgan, was a well known figure in drama, and both of his brothers are actors. Until recently, Mr. Morgan was a member of the New York Theater Guild. He is a member of the Yale Club and the New York Athletic Club.

Many Parties After The Army-Navy Game

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.

THE Army-Navy football game today climaxed a week of good works for society.

The presence of several thousand cadets and midshipmen brought a big supper dance for charity, dances at hotels that are headquarters for Army and Navy crowds and many private parties.

It is a busy week-end for Admiral S. S. Robinson, superintendent of the Naval Academy, and Mrs. Robinson, and Major-General William R. Smith, superintendent of the Military Academy at West Point. Their presence is demanded at half a dozen affairs simultaneously.

Miss Frances Townsend and Howard Braeme MacDonald were married Monday at St. Bartholomew's on Park avenue. Mrs. MacDonald is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Perry Townsend.

WEDDINGS AND ENGAGEMENTS

Mr. and Mrs. James W. Brown of 509 Warren avenue, University City, announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Dorothy Lila, to James Campbell Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. James Campbell of 5543 Enright avenue, at a tea from 3 to 5 o'clock, Sunday afternoon, Nov. 30, at their home.

Talisman roses, chysanthemums and oak leaves were used in decorating the table. The announcements were on small pieces of orange paper hidden in walnut shells tied with orange ribbon. Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Campbell served, assisted by Miss Velma and Miss Virginia Brown, Miss Mary Campbell and Miss Ethel Lee.

Miss Brown is a senior student in Washington University and a member of the Delta Delta Delta Sorority. Mr. Campbell was graduated from Washington University and is a member of the Sigma Tau Omega Fraternity.

The wedding will take place in the early fall of next year.

The wedding of Miss Ruth Christian Figge, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Christian Figge, Wise and Emmerson avenues, to the Rev. Thomas Samuel Thompson of Jersey City, N. J., took place Tuesday evening at Memorial Presbyterian Church, the Rev. Russell Paynter officiating. A reception followed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Figge.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of ivory satin. Her veil of tulle fell from a cap of rose point lace that belonged to her grandmother. She carried a bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Helen Charlotte Figge was her sister's maid of honor and wore a princess gown of melon shaded satin. She carried talisman roses. Miss Katherine Ann Palmer was bridesmaid and was gowned in moss green satin and carried Joanna Hill roses. Mrs. Figge, the bride's mother wore a gown of wedding ring gold moire.

Benjamin Franklin Moss Jr., of Philadelphia, Pa., was best man. Calvin Busch was groomsman and the ushers were E. B. Wiley, Ambrose Winston, John Schaperkotter, Ernest Johnson and John Johnson.

The bride is a graduate of Hosmer Hall and both young people were graduated last June from Asbury College, Wilmore, Ky. After the honeymoon they will live in Little Compton, R. I., where the Rev. Mr. Thompson is pastor of First Congregational Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Davison, 4621 Pope avenue, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Ruth Davison, and Howard Mesirow, son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Mesirow of Chicago. No date has been set for the wedding.

A recent marriage of interest to St. Louisans was that of Miss Agnes Murray, formerly of St. Louis, to Robert Whitney of Chicago. The ceremony was performed at St. Bride's Church on Thanksgiving day. Mr. Whitney and his bride will live at 7767 South Shore drive, Chicago.

Praises Resinol

"My face was a sight from an eruption which appeared mostly on my nose and chin in the form of blind boils. I doctored it and used various things people suggested but nothing seemed to do any good. Finally I tried Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment and by regular use I cleared my face. I have told many people about them, and would like to be able to convince everyone that Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment are wonderful." (Signed) N. M. Meakin, Norfolk, Va.

News of St. Louisans Visiting in Paris

PARIS, Dec. 3.

RECEPTIONS, teas and balls are being announced one after another this week to fill the social calendar until Christmas time. The first of the formal functions will be a fete and ball in honor of foreign visitors in the French capital. The Vicomtesse Benoist d'Azy is in charge of the entertainment for the evening and is now conducting rehearsals for a group of Malatsoff's ballets. A number of society women and debutantes of Paris are taking part in the ballet or assisting at the gala. Among them are Mrs. Skinker Matthews, Mrs. Walter Russell and Miss Valerie Baker, all formerly of St. Louis.

The concert Sunday afternoon given by the Orchestra Symphonique de Paris at the Salle Pleyel was the more interesting because of the skill of Vladimir Golschmann, who conducted. He led the New York Symphony Orchestra some time ago and will for two months of the winter season appear as guest conductor of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra.

Conte and Contessa Carletto Franzoni, who are spending the winter in Neuilly, are planning to go to Locarno for the holiday season to visit the Franzoni family, whose estates are in this city of Switzerland.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Aloe of St. Louis prolonged their stay in Paris in order to spend Thanksgiving here. They were among those who had tables at the special Thanksgiving gala dinner at the Hotel George V. Mr. and Mrs. Aloe will visit in Germany before sailing for America on the Bremen, the last boat leaving Europe that will arrive in New York before Christmas day.

Mrs. Henry W. Mizner and her daughter Alice of St. Louis are making their permanent home in Paris, at the Villa Jule Janin in Passy.

Miss Zelina de Macklot Thompson of St. Louis is back in Paris at the Hotel Montana.

EIGHT NEGRO SERVANTS PALLBEARERS FOR WOMAN

Wishes of Mrs. Gillian N. Travous of Edwardsville Are Complied With.

In compliance with a wish expressed by their mistress many years ago, eight Negro servants and former servants acted as pallbearers at the funeral of Mrs. Gillian N. Travous at Edwardsville yesterday. Mrs. Travous, widow of Charles M. Travous, once general solicitor of the Wabash Railroad, died Thursday of apoplexy. She was 71 years old.

Ofter during the last years of her life, Mrs. Travous said she did not wish to impose on her friends and acquaintances the duty of bearing her body to the grave and preferred to have this last service performed by employes who had worked for her in life. Four of the servants had been employed by her for 25 years or more. One of them, Jonathan Williams, was the third of his family to serve the Travous family. Twenty-three years ago Mrs. Travous' husband died suddenly and it was Williams who found the body.

Since the death of her husband, Mrs. Travous and her daughter, Miss Rachel Travous, had lived alone with their servants in the family home, a colonial brick mansion which is one of Edwardsville's landmarks.

NEW MANCHESTER RD. BRIDGE OPEN TODAY

Permits Through Traffic From North and South Road to Lindbergh Boulevard.

The new Manchester road bridge over the River des Peres between Brentwood and Rock Hill is to be opened to traffic today. This will permit through traffic on Manchester road, between North and South road and Lindbergh boulevard, Kirkwood, where Manchester recently was widened from 18 to 40 feet by the State.

The widening extends to Big Bend boulevard, Maplewood, but it will be several weeks before through traffic can run east of North and South road, pending completion of a bridge over Deer Creek at Hanley road.

Antire road, newly paved to a width of 20 feet by the State, between Vandover road, south of Valley Park, and the Votaw bridge over the Meramec River, has been open to traffic since Monday. This stretch is about five miles long, in a picturesque rural section. It will form part of the new route of United States Highway No. 66 out of St. Louis.

It is expected the Highway Department will order completion of the new No. 66 location during 1931. It will leave the city over Watson road and join United States Highway No. 50 (Manchester road) at the country estate of Shaw's Garden, west of Gray's Summit, Franklin County. Between Famous Station, which is about a mile west of the Votaw bridge, and Pacific, the new highway will stay between the bluffs and the railroad tracks on the north side of the Missouri Pacific and Frisco Railroads. This location will avoid dangerous grade crossings and a narrow stretch of low ground between the Meramec and the Frisco, where the present county road runs.

Between Pacific and a point near Gray's Summit, State Highway Engineer Rudder disclosed, the State would like to place No. 66 for three and one-half miles on a section of 100-foot right-of-way that has been abandoned by the Missouri Pacific Railroad. In building a new double-track line the railroad took a new location and it is understood the abandoned right-of-way has reverted to the owners of the adjoining land. The State proposes to ask these owners for the right-o-way. Strangely enough, although fast trains operated over the old track, there are some curves in the line which exceed the ideal allowance for State highways, and the embankment is higher than the State would prefer in places. These drawbacks are not sufficient to offset the other savings if this ready-made right-of-way can be taken over, Rudder said.

Departing from the old railroad line a mile from Gray's Summit, the highway would be bridged over a deep cut of the new railroad line and built across the hills to the Shaw's Garden district.

URGES SPECIAL EFFORTS TO CURB TUBERCULOSIS

Dr. F. H. McKeon Says High Rate of Infection Among Negroes Requires Attention.

Dr. F. H. McKeon, medical director of the Tuberculosis and Health Society told physicians connected with the society yesterday they must increase their activities to maintain the declining tuberculosis rate of recent years. He quoted from the annual report of Dr. Howard H. Bell, city tuberculosis controller, which showed the death rate had declined only 6 per cent in the last five years as compared with a 50 per cent decline since 1917.

The high rate of infection among Negroes, Dr. McKeon said, made intensive efforts among members of that race necessary to reduce the general death rate. Relapses among persons discharged from sanitariums as arrested cases, suggested the need of a rehabilitation program, he said. Several cities maintain employment bureaus to find work suitable for patients just discharged from sanitariums until they are well enough to resume their former occupations.

ELECTED BY SAFETY COUNCIL

Augustus L. Abbott and E. J. Russell Made Vice Presidents.

Augustus L. Abbott, an attorney, and E. J. Russell, an architect, were elected vice presidents of St. Louis Safety Council by the Advisory Committee at its meeting Thursday night.

Abbott is chairman of the Law and Legislation Committee and Russell director of the Highway Safety Committee. Their election as vice presidents places the direction of all major committees of the Safety Council in the hands of officers of that rank.

The Daughters of Mary will entertain at the City Infirmary Dec. 13, and will serve refreshments after a musical program. The last entertainment was given at the Infirmary Nov. 25, and consisted of a play, "Rastus' Matrimonial Entanglement," given by the women of the Holy Innocents' parish. Tuesday the Daughters of Mary celebrated its thirteenth anniversary at a luncheon at the Lotus Club, 4236 Lindell boulevard, which was attended by 34 members.

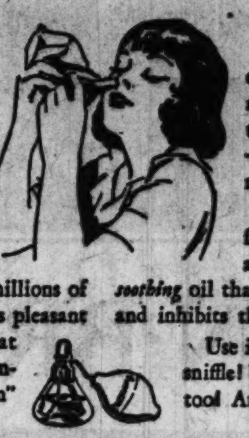
DON'T BE A "COLD-FIGHTER!"



Don't "go to war" with a cold, much as you hate the cold!

Instead, just soothe it away with the potent, modern "Pineoleum" oil spray treatment! Children like it, too!

Is it any wonder that millions of people have turned to this pleasant way of treating a cold—that thousands of doctors recommend it? For the "Pineoleum" oil spray treatment acts on a cold right at the seat of the trouble—the passages of the nose and throat.

It bathes the inflamed membranes in a penetrating film of soothing oil that protects the tissues and inhibits the growth of germs.

PAIR OVERCOME BY GAS WHEN STILL BOILS OVER

Man and Wife Found Unconscious in Flat and Taken to City Hospital.

Enrico Mineghini and his wife, Minnie, were overcome by gas early yesterday in their flat at 4742A Easton avenue, when a whisky still boiled over and extinguished the flame of a gas burner.

They were found unconscious at 8 a. m. by Roy Sargent, who lives on the floor below, when liquid from the still dripped from the ceiling. He summoned police, who forced a door and took Mineghini and his wife to City Hospital. The still was confiscated.

Negro Beaten to Death.

Odie Anderson, 55 years old, Negro laborer, 2948 Dickson street, was beaten to death by another Negro in a fight in front of 1314 Glasgow avenue yesterday afternoon. Police are looking for a relative of Anderson, who was named by witnesses. The cause of the fight was not learned.

THE *T*OOTH PASTE
that gave 3,000,000 people whiter teeth and saved them $9,000,000!

LISTERINE TOOTH PASTE

Large tube 25¢

At least 3,000,000 people who used to pay 50¢ or more for a dentifrice, now use Listerine Tooth Paste at 25¢. They are delighted to have made the change.

They have compared it with dentifrices in the high price field. And they have learned that its quality is matchless. That it cleans teeth swiftly but gently. That it removes tartar and discoloration without harming precious enamel. That it gives enamel an amazing lustre that others envy.

These 3,000,000 have also found that, compared to dentifrices of the 50¢ class, it accomplished a saving of $3 a year per person. In one year it has saved $9,000,000.

A short trial of Listerine Tooth Paste will convince you, as 3,000,000 others have been convinced, that it is folly to pay high prices for tooth paste. Buy a tube tonight and make any and all comparisons with tooth pastes you have used before. You will be won to this modern one.

That the makers of Listerine can offer such a paste at such a price is due entirely to mass production and cost cutting methods of manufacture. These economies are passed on to you. Lambert Pharmacal Co., St. Louis, Mo., U. S. A.

FIVE FOUND GUILTY, ONE FREED, BY JURIES

Penitentiary Sentences Imposed Last Week for Murder, Holdup, Arson and Forgery.

Six persons were tried by juries in the criminal divisions of Circuit Court last week, resulting in the conviction of five and the acquittal of one. Charles Jackson, a Negro, who killed his wife, was given life imprisonment. Robert Cooper, furniture mover, received a 16-year penitentiary sentence for killing Lee Stout. Agar Childs, a Negro, was given 10 years under the Henry law for robbery with a weapon. He held up a grocery. Louis Zaxer, former proprietor of a shoe store on Franklin avenue, was given five years for arson. Clyde Harding was sentenced to five years for passing bogus checks.

Harry Johnson, a white man, was tried for murder in the first degree, but the jury found him not guilty. He was charged with being one of three who entered the tire shop of Clarence Sweeny, Grand boulevard and Cass avenue, last March, taking $200 from a cash register and killing Sweeny as they fled.

Others charged with major crimes who entered pleas of guilty and received penitentiary terms are: Frank Burke, arson second degree and a prior conviction, three years; Claude Shupe, robbery, 10 years; Walter C. Meyer, embezzlement, two years; William C. Martin, robbery, five years; Edward Pinkley, robbery and prior conviction, eight years.

Persons charged with major crimes who were permitted to plead guilty to lesser offenses and take less than penitentiary sentences were: Frank Gunning, larceny of automobile, one year in workhouse; Anthony Tabacea, turning in false alarm of fire, $100 and costs; Harry Max, larceny of automobile, six months; Fred Schumacher, larceny of automobile, one year; Helen George, petty larceny, six months; James McPherson, malicious trespass, six months, Cornelius Grisson, petit larceny, three months; James Gill, petit larceny, three months; John Calumichi, petit larceny, six months and Emmett Blattner, carrying a concealed weapon, 50 days.

SLAIN CONFECTIONER'S WILL CONTESTED BY HIS WIDOW

She Charges Venice Man, Shot by Stepson, Made Instrument When Under Anesthetic.

Suit to contest the will of Clarence Brennan, Venice, Ill., confectionery proprietor who was shot and fatally wounded Nov. 16 by his stepson, Emmett Pazia, was filed at Edwardsville yesterday by Pazia's mother, Mrs. Maude Brennan.

Her petition alleges Brennan, who made the will Nov. 17 a short time before he died was in St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Granite City, under influence of an anesthetic at the time and was therefore not of sound mind. The will leaves $1 to Mrs. Brennan and the residue of the estate to Brennan's mother, Mrs. Mary Brennan, who also lives in Venice.

Harold J. Bandy, attorney for the widow, estimated the value of the estate at $30,000. A petition filed by Brennan's mother for permission to probate the will estimated the value of personal effects at $250 and stated the estate contained real estate of unestimated value.

Pazia was bound over to the grand jury, but it returned a no true bill holding he was justified in the explanation that when he shot Brennan, the latter was beating Mrs. Brennan, Pazia's mother.

Theater Guild Company With Mme. Nazimova at American in Turgenev's "A Month in the Country"—Grand Central to Open With "It's a Wise Child" — Mary Hart's Plans.

ONLY a single new play comes to town this week, the New York Theater Guild Company, headed by Mme. Nazimova, arriving tomorrow night at the American with "A Month in the Country." The Orpheum continues on with the successful comedy, "Is Zat So" while the Shubert remains closed, not to reopen until Dec. 28, when "Street Scene" comes in.

In the meantime the Skouras boys are going ahead with their stock company plans for the Grand Central. Christmas night is the time now set for the opening and the initial play will be "It's a Wise Child." The company engaged so far includes Lyle Talbot as leading man; Jonathan Hole, juvenile; Joseph Creehan, comedian; James Arthur Young and Albert von Bekker. The leading woman had not been announced up to this writing. In addition to "It's a Wise Child," the Belasco play for which the Warners have bought the picture rights, the Grand Central has secured "As Good as New," now running in New York; "Illicit," "Those Who Love" and "The Dishonored Lady."

MISS HART has not been idle in securing plays by any means and has her list for the rest of the season completed. When the rival stock company at the Grand Central gets going on Christmas day Miss Hart will be in the first week of a production of "The Road to Rome" for which she has engaged no fewer than four leading men and a woman guest star of reputation. Pierre Watkin, the matinee idol of the season is to be seen as Hannibal in that show.

As the Grand Central apparently is to go in heavily for sophisticated shows—"hot" ones they call 'em in New York—it seems likely that the Skouras second offering will be "The Dishonored Lady." At that time the Orpheum will have "Rebound," one of the real hits in the Metropolis. Owen Davis Jr., the visiting star with "Is Zat So," is being kept on for "The Road to Rome" and for "Rebound" as well.

"A MONTH IN THE COUNTRY," at the American, should prove to be one of the dramatic events of the season and the gaiety of the group living in a "nobleman's nest" in Turgenev's comedy will strike an unfamiliar note in the doleful strain in which Russian plays are supposed to be cast.

It has long been evident that Russian dramas differ from our own not only in the temperament of the characters, but in the technique that governs the telling of their stories. The reason for this distinctive quality lies in the fact that the Russian theater has been little influenced by the modes of the western world. The artificialities of "the well-made play" of the French, which affected such various dramatists as the Norwegian Ibsen, the English Pinero, and the American Clyde Fitch, left no trace in the work of Chekhov or Gorky.

These two playwrights, who are the best-known representatives of the Russian drama in America, have created the impression, however, that the theater in the land of vodka dotes on gloom and melancholy. Unless a play ends in tumultous despair, it can scarcely be Russian—so it is thought. Furthermore, the two examples of significant plays from Soviet Russia, "Red Rust" and "Roar China," which the Theatre Guild produced, now emphasize the absorption of the playwrights of St. Petersburg with the theories of Lenin.

"A MONTH IN THE COUNTRY," however, an octogenarian play—it was written in 1855—it is not only a pleasant prologue to the later deepening seriousness of Chekhov and Gorky, but a type of a considerable body of Russian plays that are keyed to a spirit of lightness and gaiety. It was produced by the Moscow Art Theater during the season of 1909-1910.

This is the first play of Ivan Turgenev, known the world over as a novelist, to be produced in this country in English. Alla Nazimova, herself a Russian, for many years absent from St. Louis, returns to the type of part in which she became famous—an emotional woman meeting crises in a play which, as a Russian critic has said, exhibits "the fascination of complex psychology built on the most delicate curves of love experience." The story derives from intimate realities in Turgenev's own life—his strange relationship to a Parisian opera singer, Pauline Viardot, her husband, and daughter—a situation paralleled in the plot. Surrounding Mme. Nazimova will be Earle Larimore, Henry Travers, Cecil Yapp, Edward Arnold, James Todd, Minna Phillips, Virginia Gregori, Glesra Marshall, Walter Coy and others.

Owen Davis—Not Among the Unemployed

ABOUT Christmas time Owen Davis, probably the most prolific of American playwright—he has climbed up from "Nellie the Beautiful Cloak Model" and "Chinatown Charlie" to "Icebound," "The Detour" and the dignity of a Pulitzer prize play—is coming to St. Louis to visit his son, Owen Davis Jr., who is a member of Mary Hart's company at the Orpheum Theater. It will be his first visit here since the old Havlin Theater days when his Nellies and Charlies thrilled the gallery gods. He has written more than 300 plays and since 1897, he told Montrose J. Moses, the writer, in the current number of The Theater Guild Magazine, there has never been a day or night when a play has not been on his desk in some stage of evolution. "And though I know now that I should slow down, I can't," he confessed to Mr. Moses, who says that is the penalty one has to pay for giving such devotion to the theater—for better or for worse—as Mr. Davis has given it since the days he and Al Woods, the king of melodrama managers, pumped credulity almost dry in their thrillers.

One of Mr. Davs' most successful plays, "The Nervous Wreck," was seen here a short time ago as the musical cinema, "Whoopee." It had been done first as a play, then as a musical comedy and twice as a silent picture before it became a talkie. Last week saw another one of his in the films under the title of "Only Saps Work" so that the old timers are still bringing him in uncounted royalties by way of the screen while he is busy on more modern children of his active brain.

"OWEN DAVIS," says Mr. Moses in the Guild Magazine," occupies a distinctly important place in the theater of the present. He is old enough to have known the American drama in the Frohman era; he is young enough to understand and appreciate what the new playwrights are seeking to accomplish with the new psychology, with the new form, and with the new scenic spirit. It is an unusual happening for a man as seasoned as he in the ways of the theater to have altered his own style, his own habits of characterization, his own angle of action, and to have produced, with a skill more subtle than he usually employs, two plays so commanding of attention and of serious scrutiny as "The Detour" and "Icebound." He wished to prove to his public that he had the means, the ability, the mental control to treat intensively a subject of the soil. Of course he happened to have the same soil in his own nature.

A healthy young man with plenty of paper ought to be able to write a play in five days, a woman should allow herself six, so that she may stop to tidy up her desk. Once written, of course, the hardest part is over. It would be well, however, to start on a Tuesday so as to be ready with the finished manuscript early in the week. I have known of authors who finished late on Friday and were not able to sell their plays until the following Monday.—OWEN DAVIS.

It may be remembered that Clyde Fitch was so constantly accused of knowing how to do nothing more than analyze and exploit the feminine nature, that in his last play, "The City," he made a pointed effort to show that the masculine understanding, was just as strong within him. Mr. Davis, in the same spirit and more successfully, has shown that all his concessions to the theater of the past could not keep him from the modern psychological spirit when he wanted to use it. In these two plays he successfully escaped his old theater ways—when melodrama was in flower.

RECENTLY, Moses says, he found, in an old notebook, a memorandum from Mr. Woods himself, telling of the many authors who were writing Nellies and Chinatown Charlies for him. Six of these were Davis. Mr. Davis was saved from the monotony of the grind of melodrama by competition with himself. Making unexpected profits (sometimes as high as $17,000 in the case of one of his first plays, "Through the Breakers") he could say to his aliases: "Go and do likewise." Seven, eight, a dozen or more scrips a season; some eggs in the basket bad; some of them golden, and goose eggs at that.

The curious thing was that here was a Harvard man, a classmate of Winthrop Ames, with the bedrock inheritance of two generations of Maine folk behind him and the culture of an old tradition, with paleontology and geology urging his attention toward the mineral fields of the country where his father was a coal and iron developer—yet suddenly deserting it for the uncertain fascination of the theater. Did he feed himself theatrical oats during the short time he spent at the University of Tennessee? Did he spread his dramatic wings while at Harvard? Yes. With a facility that presaged the ease with which he could forsake farce and light comedy to write "The Detour" and "Icebound," he wrote scrips, so he says, in the Elizabeth vein. Maybe the blood-and-vengeance tragedies of those days are as much to blame as was Al Woods with his lithographs for the early Davis.

IN his melodrama days, Mr. Moses writes, he dealt with the raw material. With these blocks of action, of human emotion, of character, he built his scripts. Though in those days he served out romance from a hot grill which he has had to temper, he is still a romanticist. He has repeatedly expressed to me his skepticism about the use of actual truth and actual character in the theater. Reality in the hands of the artist becomes a dangerous thing. He once said publicly: "To me the stage, even in a modern play, should be colored with some tinge of romance and these events should properly be a little more highly colored and a little more frequent in their happenings than the events of real life."

He knows the game of playwriting thoroughly. Technique doesn't scare him, for he senses the many combinations by which an idea may be twisted for the edification of an audience. No lariat twirler has a more dexterous technique. There is a mixture of craft and inspiration in all this, for he has the ability—which is at the bottom of all drama—to give life to the persons who have come out of his mind. Read any of his farces—"The Nervous Wreck" is perhaps his favorite—and you will discover that he loves a story for itself, but he also hitches that story to some quality of character.

Jewish Drama Tonight.

"Blind Love" will be presented tonight at the Odeon by the Jewish Folk Troup. In the cast will be Annie Lillian, Diana Weinstein, Morris Weisman, David Schoenholtz, Helen Bida, Sarah Kaner, Nathan Weinstein, Madam Weisman and Rose Weinstein.

An All-Orchestra Program Offering For the Symphony

Music of Modern Soviet Russia to Be Featured by Arbos in Two Concerts This Week.

THE St. Louis Symphony Orchestra will introduce to its audiences at its regular concert pair, Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, at the Odeon, Nicholai Miaskovsky's Symphony No. 5 in D major. The composer is said to be the most authentic voice in music of the Russian republic of today, and is regarded by his countryman as a master of first rank.

Although comparatively young—Miaskovsky is on the sunny side of 50—he has already produced 10 symphonies besides other works. His productions, while strenuously protesting a virile musical personality, have been influenced, it is declared, by his admiration for Moussorgsky, Rimsky - Korsakoff, Tschaikowsky, and Scriabin, the latter three, however, only in certain aspects. Miaskovsky was born to the military profession, which he abandoned for music shortly before the World War, and he was scarcely launched upon an artistic career before the maelstrom of that struggle engulfed him and he was held in the Russian Army until 1920, when he was assigned as professor of composition in the Moscow Conservatory, where he has since remained.

To that voice of Soviet Russia, in the first half of this week's concert program, Moussorgsky's Prelude to "Khovanstchina" will provide an introduction depicting "Red Square" in Moscow, at the dawn. The second half of Mr. Arbos' program for this all-orchestral concert will offer Wagner's Prelude to Act III of "Tristan and Isolde", two of Debussy's nocturnes, "Clouds" and "Fetes," and Richard Strauss' tone-poem "Don Juan."

The detailed program is:

Prelude to Khovanstchina ...Moussorgsky
Symphony No. 5 in D Major —Miaskovsky
1. Allegro amabile
2. Lento (quasi Andante)
3. Scherzo: Allegro burlando
4. Finale: Allegro risoluto e con brio
Prelude to Act III of Tristan and Isolde ....Wagner
(a) Nuages (Clouds) ....Debussy
(b) Fetes (Festivals) ....Debussy
Tone Poem: Don Juan ....Strauss

German Comedy Tonight.

"Der Wahre Jakob" a comedy by Arnold and Bach, which will be given tonight by the German Theater Stock Company, in the auditorium of the German House, 2345 Lafayette avenue.

Fine Program for "Pop" Concert Today

RICHARD WAGNER'S expression of joy over the birth of his son Siegfried—whom St. Louis remembers from a visit here to conduct the Massenchor, and who died in Bayreuth last summer—is one of the features of the program prepared by Senor Arbos for the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra's Radio "Pop" concert at the Odeon at 5 p. m. today. The program opens with Smetana's "Bartered Bride" overture, which is popularly known as "the comic overture" in Europe. It contains also the graceful music of Delibes' ballet "Sylvia" and Berlioz' stirring "Rakoczy" march.

The new rule of one price for all seats in the Odeon, to be purchased only at the box-office Sunday afternoon continues as does the price of 25 cents. No late comers will be seated from the opening of the concert until after the intermission.

Today's program is:

Overture to "The Bartered Bride" ....Smetana
Ballet suite, "Sylvia"...........Delibes
(a) Prelude: The Huntress
(b) Intermezzo: Valse Lente
(c) Pizzicati
(d) Procession of Bacchus
Siegfried Idyl ....Wagner
Rakoczy March ....Berlioz

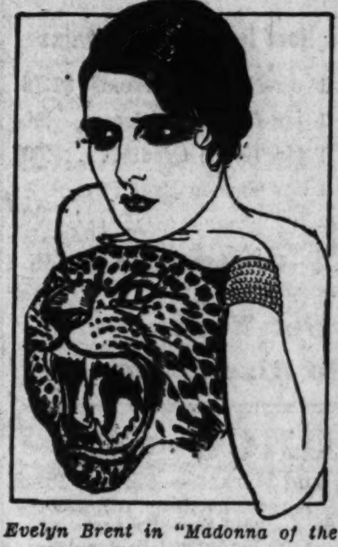
Opera Festival Plans Changed.

Guy Golterman, director of the projected grand opera festival, has decided to defer the test of The Arena for musical productions until next spring. The festival which was scheduled for The Arena Dec. 30, will be given, it is now announced, after the holidays at the Odeon or the new St. Louis University gymnasium-auditorium.



Evelyn Brent in "Madonna of the Streets," at the St. Louis.

The Week's New Films

—:— By NIE —:—

THE last few weeks have seen some fine pictures crowding in under the wire in time to break into the Ten-Best-Of-The-Year class and now along comes "Min and Bill," at the Fox to line up with the champs. This opus is not, as you might be led to believe from the title, a slap-stick affair. To be sure there is some rough and tumble fun in it but the picture is really a serious drama of foster-mother love made from Lorna Moon's story, "Dark Star," with Marie Dressler, veteran of many an unrefined back-fall comedy, doing a classical bit of work as the hard-boiled proprietor of a water front honkey-tonk. As Min she has a boy friend in Beery and Wallie's work is in keeping with the high standard set by his co-star. Marjorie Rambeau, who was once a star of importance herself on the stage, has the role of a lady of not very uncertain professional proclivities and she, too, is excellent. The story tells how Min devotes her life to protecting an adopted daughter, how she finally commits murder to insure the child's happiness, and the picture ends not at all to the customary manner of Hollywood standards but just as it should end. It is admirably directed and acted and takes a prominent place in the artistic efforts of the cinema.

Love Finds a Way.

IN "The Dancers," down at Loew's, Phillips Holmes is a hard-working lumberjack somewhere in the Canadian wilds. He doesn't look it, but he is. A dance hall gal tries to make him stray from the hard paths of the forests and take a spin down the primrose pavement, but she never gets to first base, for Phillips is true to Lois Moran back in England. Then Phillips' cousin dies, leaving him an earldom or something in London, and the backwoodsman goes home to claim his title and his true love. He gets the title all right, but something has happened to Lois and she flies off to Paris, leaving the boy friend alone with the dancer, who, strange to say, has turned up in England. They do move fast in the movies. Phillips never falters, however, and along about reel eight he catches up with Lois again and gets her consent to become an Earless. The dancing girl has faded out by this time and nobody seems to care very much, although, just between ourselves, she would have been worth looking over a little more seriously. Mrs. Pat Campbell, once famous on the English stage, bobs up in this film as a screen starter. She's a pretty good actress, too.

In the Air This Time.

WE SEEM to have some recollection of a movie in which Joe E. Brown was mistaken for a famous motorboat racer and forced to pilot a craft to fame and fortune, when he didn't know the rudder from the main fo'castle balloon jib. Neither do we, for that matter. Maybe there aren't any such things in a well regulated motorboat, anyway, but you probably know what we mean. Well, whether Joe played in that picture or not—perhaps it was an automobile and not a racing boat—he is back at the Ambassador this week, and whatever it was he raced in before has been turned into an airplane this time. The story, now called "Going Wild," is the same, anyway, and the comical-looking Mr. Brown gets plenty of laughs while he is up in the air.

Not So Young.

HENRY V. ESMOND'S fine old play, "When We Were Twenty One," in which Nat Goodwin and Harry Woodruff played so successfully many years ago, has been dusted off and brought out for the talkies under the not at all appropriate title of "The Truth About Youth." It is at the Missouri this week with the lovely Loretta Young in the cast and with Conway Tearle playing Goodwin's role and David Manners in the part of the Imp, made famous by Woodruff. Written before the Jazz Age the movie magnates have allowed the piece to remain about as it was attempting only to give it some sort of sex appeal with a new name. It's pretty good drama even at this late day and Loretta finds out that a middle-aged man is quite likely to make a better husband than a boy of 21.

What Love Can Do.

IN "Madonna of the Streets"—another title gone wrong for it was originally called "The Ragged Messenger"—at the St. Louis shows Evelyn Brent doing some fine work as an ex-keptive who sets out to sandbag a San Francisco millionaire mission worker but sticks around to fall in love with him and help him carry on his soul salvaging operations. The picture is just so-so with the ending entirely obvious but Miss Brent gives it considerable distinction by the way in which she handles the star part. The RKO vaudeville on the stage is up to the usual standard with Carl Randell and Virginia Watson in the headline position.

Given Easy Role.

Ruth Mayhew, Hollywood extra girl, has been given the year's easiest part in "Dishonored," with Victor McLaglen and Marlene Dietrich. She plays the victim of an accident and her job was to lie motionless and be carried back and forth on a stretcher.

Star Able Linguist.

Ruth Chatterton, starring in the picture "The Right to Love," has translated and adapted three French plays. They are "Monsieur Brotenneau," "La Tendresse," and "L'homme Enhabit."

Ten Cent Movies

RKO Reported in Plan for Chain Store Entertainment—Film Guild to Be Organized Here — New Masters of Ceremonies for the Fox and Ambassador.

AUTOMATIC movie shows with a 10-cent admission charge to be run on the chain store system throughout the country are reported to be under way by an organization known as the Trans-Lux Movie Corporation. That name means nothing to the picture fans, but Courtland Smith, president of the organization, has long been associated with the William Randolph Hearst movie interest and, what seems more important, RKO hold 50 per cent of the stock in the company. RKO, closely allied with General Electric and the Radio Corporation of America, already owns many first run picture houses from coast to coast—The St. Louis and Grand Opera House here are parts of the system—has lately acquired the Pathe Exchanges and controls, at least in part, the output of Universal and Columbia Pictures.

According to what little news has leaked out about the 10-cent plan, small theaters, where available, will be used as show places. Where the smaller houses are not to be had store buildings in the down town sections of many cities will be remodeled as was done in the old nickelodeon days. Two men and a turnstile will comprise the operating force and a complete program, running an hour, will be offered. Full length feature talkies, cut to the desired length, will form the backbone of the entertainment.

BEFORE this gets started, however, a group of St. Louisans will meet next Thursday night at the Young Men's Hebrew Association, on Union boulevard, to organize a Film Guild. Gilbert Harris is the leading spirit in the affair and he has the backing of many persons interested in seeing pictures which the more commercial cinema palaces cannot show, with profit.

The plan, as now proposed is to bring to St. Louis German, Russian and French films, mostly silents, which have had a strong appeal in New York to class audiences. For the time being, if the organization is completed Thursday night, these pictures will be shown at the Y. M. H. A. as part of the regular entertainment course there. The pictures, however, will not be selected with the view of appealing only to Jews but with the idea in view of affording good films for all persons who can appreciate them. If the response warrants a little theater will be built.

Incidentally, although it has no connection with the Guild plan, St. Louis is to have its first program of all Jewish talking pictures the week of Dec. 21 at the American Theater. The feature of a program that is to be presented twice daily throughout Christmas week is a drama of modern Jewish life entitled "My Yiddishe Mama." The leading roles are taken by Mae Simon, Cantor Schmilikel, Seymour Rechtzeit and other favorites of the Jewish stage. The feature picture will be augmented by a series of short subjects, all in sound and all in Jewish.

HARRY ROSE is in his last weeks as master of ceremonies at the Ambassador. He will be succeeded around Christmas time by Jack Haley, a well-known comedian of the stage who has also been seen in pictures. Haley, it will be remembered, jumped into the shoes of the late Jack Donohue on a day's notice and played the leading role in "Sons O' Guns" at the Shubert Theater a few weeks ago. Previously he had been the star of the very successful musical comedies "Good News" and "Follow Thru." He was in the latter show when it was offered in screen form.

The Fox, too, has gone back to the master of ceremonies idea, with Al Wohlman on the spot. Wohlman stepped into the job last Thursday and got off to a fine start, scoring nicely with his songs.

THE come-back trail of Hollywood, where many of filmland's once famous have walked hopefully since the talkies exploded the peaceful life of the silent screen, soon will see four troupers hand-in-hand on its tricky course, fighting to regain the stardom that once was theirs.

Two of them today received their admittance tickets, the prized movie assignment, to a chance on this strange alley of fate, where some have gone on to new riches and glory, but where most have found only disappointment and despair. They were Patsy Ruth Miller of St. Louis, and Esther Ralston. A few days ago Edward Everett Horton and Laura La Plante, also a St. Louisan, got the well-known break.

A few years ago, when they sat on top of the heap, they never played together, for few pictures have more than one star. Now, as lesser lights, they are cast in the same picture. The film will be "Lonely Wives."

Traffic Club Christmas Party.
The Traffic Club of St. Louis will hold a Christmas party for 250 small children drawn from destitute families of St. Louis and East St. Louis at Hotel Jefferson, Monday, Dec. 22, beginning at 12:15 p. m. The children will be taken to the party in busses under police supervision. C. W. Wheeler is chairman of the entertainment committee.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.

GENE MARKEY tells of two tramps applying for work at a back door. The lady of the house brought out a pile of rugs and two carpet beaters and told them to get busy. Some time later she came out to find one busily beating rugs while the other was doing nip-ups, hand stands, cart wheels and flip-flops.

"Why," she exclaimed admiringly to the other tramp, "I didn't know your friend was an acrobat!"

Whereupon the tramp replied: "Neither did I—till I just hit him on the shin with this carpet beater."

KDKA Ready To Use 400,000 Watts Power

Will Use W8XAR, Its Auxiliary, in Past-Midnight Test Broadcasting.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Four hundred kilowatts of power—400,000 watts—will soon be projecting special programs into the air nightly from W8XAR, auxiliary of KDKA, Pittsburg, Pa. The experimenters have informed the Federal Radio Commission that they are now ready to broadcast with this power, the highest ever used for broadcasting anywhere in the world.

Because W8XAR will go on the air between 12 midnight, and 5 a. m., St. Louis time, when reception conditions are at their best, its programs should be heard over the length and breadth of the North American continent, and possibly in foreign lands, too.

Fans everywhere should listen on the 980-kilocycle channel as soon as the announcement comes from Pittsburg that the past-midnight experiments are starting. They may show the way to the future of broadcasting, just as KDKA 10 years ago pointed the way to the development of present-day broadcasting.

Two new 200,000-watt tubes, each standing six feet high and requiring the passage of tons of cooling water to keep them from overheating and bursting, are making possible this noteworthy experiment. H. P. Davis, who directed while Dr. Frank Conrad engineered the pioneering broadcasting from KDKA a decade ago, stated in his license application to the commission that the power would be raised gradually from 50,000 watts to 400,000 watts. But the power may ultimately go even higher if the tubes prove their worth.

Today the highest powered broadcasting is from Radio Moscow and Radio Roma, each rated at 100,000 watts. WGY, Schenectady, has conducted some convincing experiments with 200,000 watts.

Just how much power is 400,000 watts? Well, one horsepower is the equivalent of 746 watts, so 400,000 watts will approach 540 horsepower—enough to drive five or more of the highest powered motor cars now on the market. This is the energy that will be thrust from the aerials of W8XAR. It is tremendous power in the radio sense, yet not very considerable when one resolves that receiving sets only a few miles away from W8XAR can measure the energy they pick up in infinitessimal fractions of a watt—fly-power.

A 500-watt radio station uses less power than is required for the average electric iron. All the broadcasters in the United States, according to Federal Radio Commission records, use an aggregate of 1,453,355 watts, a little less than 2000 horsepower. Probably all the received energy of the 13,000,000 or more sets in the country would aggregate one watt or two. The rest is dissipated in space within a few blocks of the transmitter.

Comparing with the 1,453,355 watts of power consumed in this country by all broadcasting stations, are these figures showing the aggregate aerial energy used abroad: Germany, 535,000 watts; Great Britain, 470,000; Russia, 222,000; Sweden, 120,000; Czecho Slovakia, 107,000, and France, 64,000.

Television Is Still Very Much in the Experimental Stages

Television is still an experiment. Of that fact the American public, and especially prospective purchasers of radio sets, may rest assured on the testimony of a majority of the most eminent authorities in television research. If television is "around the corner," that corner is many, many miles away and the rate of approach to it is a snail's pace, Martin Codel says in a dispatch from Washington.

One came away from the Federal Radio Commission's conference on experimental visual broadcasting, as the commission officially styles television, with the conviction that many years must elapse before the average radio listener can expect to take television to his bosom.

For the layman minded to tinker, or for the technician willing to delve more deeply into the details of the visual broadcasting art, there are televisors and televisor kits now on the market and there are visual broadcasts to tune in daily from more than a dozen experimental stations. Fortunately for the television experimenters, there are thousands of people so minded, and their observations and criticisms as well as the work being done in the laboratories will all contribute to the ultimate perfection of sight by radio.

"Many and various were the claims of achievement advanced during the conference. Only one really startling claim was made, however. The inventor and his backers give all assurances that they will substantiate that claim before the month and the year are out.

"Many and various were the claims of achievement advanced during the conference. Only one really startling claim was made, however. The inventor and his backers give all assurances that they will substantiate that claim before the month and the year are out.

"Philo T. Farnsworth, a youth from Utah, announced to a skeptical audience that he had perfected a system of television which reproduces 300-line moving pictures of actual scenes and objects after radio transmission over a band of wave lengths only six kilocycles wide. Audible broadcasting requires 10 kilocycles, a few television experimenters will admit that they can do with less than 100 kilocycles.

"Made possible by what he will describe only as a 'revolutionary new tube which eliminates electrical scanning,' the Farnsworth system is said to have accomplished 'practical electrical television as against experimental mechanical television.' Hence, says the inventor, commercial television is here.

"Has it real entertainment value? Do its results approximate what must be the criterion of acceptable television—the motion picture screen, or at least home movies? It remains for the young inventor, who has been conducting his researches in San Francisco, to show. None of the others has as yet."

Mrs. Freeman F. Gosden and Mrs. Charles J. Correll, the wives of "Amos 'n Andy," draw weekly salaries for doing what millions of radio listeners do every night for nothing.

Freeman F. Gosden and Charles J. Correll write the sketches for their broadcasts, but many of the suggestions and ideas which are incorporated in the series come from their wives. So valuable has been the assistance of Mrs. Correll and Mrs. Gosden that now the wives of Amos 'n Andy draw regular salaries, paid to them weekly by their famous husbands, which they earn by listening to every broadcast and commenting and criticising.

Correll and Gosden say that the idea of paying actual salaries has been nothing short of an inspiration. "It makes them take their job seriously," said Gosden, and if it were a purely business arrangement, we could never pay them enough for the help they have given us."

Chevrolet Prepares to Sell Million Cars in 1931

General Sales Manager Klingler Tells Meeting of Dealers and Bankers That U. S. Will Absorb 4,000,000 New Cars a Year From Now on.

Speaks Here

H. J. KLINGLER,
Vice president and general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor Co., Detroit, who spoke at the convention of dealers and bankers in St. Louis Wednesday and Thursday.

One million of the new Chevrolet six cars that were introduced only a few weeks ago will be built, and will be sold, in 1931, a gathering of 800 dealers and associated bankers were told in convention Wednesday by H. J. Klingler, vice president and general sales manager of the Chevrolet Motor Co.

Declaring that business already is improving, and that the coming year promises to be satisfactory for concerns prepared to capitalize prospects, Klingler said that "on the most conservative, rock bottom estimate I can make, the United States will absorb 4,000,000 new automobiles a year from now on.

"That includes the replacement of old automobiles that have worn out or gone out of model in service, the additions of the second and third or more cars to one-car families, and the new cars for the young folks who are growing up and marrying and look at an automobile as an integral part of their home."

Replying to the question, "Are cars going to get much cheaper than today?" he said: "I do not see how they can get much cheaper. You can go into Flint, Mich., today and buy there, f. o. b. factory, the best new model Chevrolet we make for $650. I have been asked if such a car, the best four-door sedan we make, will ever be on the market for $500. I do not think so.

"The metal, the wood, the glass, the textiles, that go into a car cost less today than they have in years. If their prices change they can only go up, as I see it. Increased mass production methods might trim something from that $650 car, but they could not trim $150 from it to enable us to sell it for $500 f. o. b. factory. Now is the time to buy a new car. This year or the next year."

"Despite general conditions this year," Klingler said, "we have 400 more direct dealers in our distributing organization than we had on Jan. 1. We have had the best clean-up of old stocks in our history. Used car stocks are lower than at this same time last year. During the first 10 months of this year of business depression our dealers sold 1,100,000 used cars in addition to almost an equal number of new cars.

"That performance, which we regard as highly satisfactory in view of conditions, is the direct result of having built up a permanent and substantial-dealer organization. Our sole object in holding our annual meetings with dealers is to make our dealers better merchandisers. The dealer is the key to the success of any manufacturer dependent upon a dealer organization to distribute his product.

"The Chevrolet dealer today is a substantial business man in his community, as much an asset as the department store. He is vital to the life and growth of that community and brings to it each year a business totaling thousands of dollars.

"While he is strictly an independent merchant, we extend him every aid we can to enable him to operate successfully in his territory. In such matters as accounting and finance, for which each dealer used to have a different systerm and a different method of operation, we are rendering him assistance by installing a uniform system and instructing him in its operation. Such phases of his business as the proportion of advertising expenditure to new car sales, the volume of service work to be expected from a given territory and similar matters we go into detail with him at these meetings, and extend him individual help as needed throughout the year.

"He is, as a result, a competent merchant capable of applying sound business methods to the conduct of his establishment. He was able this year to adjust his business to local conditions, and come through with his organization in better shape than ever to get his share of new business.

"Our dealers can and will sell a million new cars in 1931. Conditions point to one of the best years we have ever had. Business generally is coming back—slowly but inevitably. Money is plentiful at cheap rates. Saving deposits are ahead of last year."

Klinger and other executives of the Chevrolet Motor Co. and other General Motors concerns were in St. Louis to meet Chevrolet dealers and bankers. The gathering was the final one of 52 dealer-sales meetings that have been held by four groups of Chevrolet executives in as many key cities throughout the county and have been attended by virtually all the 10,500 Chevrolet dealers and a large number of bankers. It was part of a great sustained effort to bring Chevrolet dealers and their banker friends to realize fully the plans of Chevrolet for 1931 and its policies to help the dealer and assist him in protecting his investment as well as in selling cars. The meetings were held two months in advance of the usual time, to back up the unprecedentedly early introduction of the new Chevrolet models.

Assisting Klingler at the St. Louis meetings were A. W. L. Gilpin, regional sales manager, with headquarters here; D. E. Ralston, assistant general sales manager in charge of the Western half of the United States; W. G. Lewellen, sales promotion manager for the United States; W. H. Leach, vice president of General Motors Acceptance Corporation; W. G.

Policies and Methods Devised by Chevrolet to Help Its Dealers to Become Prosperous Are Depicted in Series of Unusual Playlets.

Powers, sales promotion division, Detroit; L. W. Keifer of the department of dealer finance and business management; C. W. Fox, sales promotion division, Detroit; T. L. Fortune, Eastern manager of Motor Accounting Co.; R. J. Pearce, parts and service division, Detroit; C. H. Segrits, sales promotion division, Detroit, as well as A. W. L. Gilpin, Mid-West regional sales manager. C. E. O'Meara, zone sales manager, was prevented by illness from attending.

Wednesday's activities really began with a luncheon in the Gold Room of the Jefferson Hotel that was attended by some 800 Chevrolet dealers and bankers. Brief talks were made by Klingler, Gilpin and others of the visiting executives. Then, at 3 o'clock, the dealers and bankers went to the Odeon, where what Chevrolet plans to do in 1931, and how, as the world's largest six-cylinder car manufacturer, it proposes to attain its goal was outlined to the retail organization. The presentation in the afternoon revealed the close connection between manufacturers and their sales outlets and the modern methods employed in imparting the details of important sales programs. Instead of talks and lectures, skits, playlets and talking pictures were used to put across the Chevrolet message.

The arts and artifices of the theater and the moving picture were employed. The actors were executives of the company. A carload of specially designed curtains, drops and other stage equipment, worth many thousands of dollars, had been brought from Detroit to provide the settings. All of this material was designed and built in a special factory which Chevrolet has established in Detroit for such purposes. A crew of stage hands handled the performance back stage.

Every vital factor in the operation of a retail automobile business was presented in one or another of the playlets. The proper methods of selling new cars; the used car situation; service, accounting and other matters were treated. As result, the dealer and banker audience got a clear picture of approved methods of conducting a retail automobile business in the most efficient manner.

Thursday, Klingler, Ralston and Gilpin held a session with local Chevrolet field representatives and an "open house" meeting with dealers in this zone.

Dodge Officers In St. Louis for Dealer Meeting

Factory Executives Declare 10,000-Mile Trip Reveals Reason for Optimism.

Dealers from all over the St. Louis territory, and from as far south as New Orleans, gathered at the Jefferson Hotel yesterday to meet a group of officials of Dodge Brothers' Corporation, who are making a 10,000-mile tour of the country to study market and general business conditions. Dealers from this district were headed by the Milstrand Motor Co., Inc., of which Milton B. Strauss is president.

The Dodge officials left Detroit on Nov. 29 and since have held meetings in Kansas City, Dallas, Tex.; San Francisco, Seattle, Wash.; Minneapolis and Chicago. They will go from St. Louis to Cincinnati, Atlanta, New York and Boston, returning to Detroit for a concluding dealer meeting, Dec. 22.

All of them—and they included principal sales, advertising and service executives — expressed themselves as satisfied that there are very definite indications of bettering business and as certain that optimism is justified. They were A. Van Der Zee, general sales manager; W. M. Purves, passenger car sales manager; Walter S. Graves, truck sales manager; A. H. Ferrandou, bus sales manager; F. N. Sim, director of advertising; W. R. Bamford, assistant to the director of service; Rex Glasson, director of sales development; George Allen, chief engineer of passenger cars; A. G. Herreshoff, chief truck engineer; C. E. Sering, used car authority; Edward Ford of service department and Fred Glassford of the manufacturing division, all of Dodge Brothers Corporation, and Lee Anderson, president; A. M. Corrigan, Robert Wolfers and J. W. Bertch of Advertisers, Inc., Detroit, advertising counsel for Dodge Brothers.

"Our studies and first-hand observations of markets and conditions as we view them lead us to believe," said Van Der Zee, spokesman for the party, "that, almost without exception, 85 to 90 per cent of the purchasing power of the country is intact. The 10 or 15 per cent that has been lost temporarily is represented by the reduction from normal employment which statistics show is only 10 per cent and is among factory workers mostly. The remainder of the loss in purchasing power comes from the curtailment of the incomes of a portion of the 90 per cent gainfully employed.

"This 10 to 15 per cent layer of reduction is the ingredient in our economic upheaval that is foment-

Maybe we are "TOO LIBERAL"

A De Soto Sedan can be bought for as small a down-payment as
Ordinarily, the allowance for your present car more than covers this initial payment.

Our reputation for being liberal with the public in our allowances on cars traded in on new De Soto Eights and Sixes is the natural result of the way we do business. We are not afraid to take in used cars, because we know how to move them. To us, the so-called used car "problem" is no problem at all. With two leaders like the De Soto Eight and the De Soto Six, we are accustomed to handling a large volume of trade-ins—and are organized for it. Then, too, every De Soto car we sell helps to sell other De Soto cars. That's why we find it is good business to be liberal in appraising old cars brought to us for trade. We not only make it easy to own a new De Soto but make each customer a valuable friend.

Nash Plants Effect Numerous Economies In Production of Cars

An example of Nash organization may be seen in the great Nash-Seaman plant in Milwaukee where the finest coach work in Nash history is now being produced.

There is a new process which guards all wood parts against attacks of weather, dampness or climatic changes. It includes two hot baths for all wood parts in a patented, odorless solution, which impregnates the wood and insures it long life and service under all driving conditions. Laminated, non-warping wood from the West Coast is now used in the new bodies at points of special strain. This utilization of "ply-wood" is another costly feature which makes the bodies finer than ever.

New flash welding machines; a completely new dry cleaning process which does away with time costs formerly accompanying hand cleaning of the bodies; new precision striping machines; new and finer jigs nad dies; better trim materials and scores of like advancements all add to body quality and manufacturing economy.

New Buick Eight Cars Are Engineered To Operate Silently

In the new Buick straight eight, the sound of motor operation is eliminated to such a degree that the driver of the car cannot detect the sound of the engine.

The silence of the Buick engine has been achieved by the use of several new engineering features. Outstanding among these is the use of an air intake silencer on the carburetor. This silencer, which is a product of the combined engineering resources of General Motors and the Buick engineering staff, eliminates the carburetor roar usually associated with eight-cylinder engines.

Four point rubber insulated motor suspension dampens out other motor noises and the rugged chassis construction prevents vibration with its attendant noises.

The new Fisher body has contributed in a large measure to the silence of this new car by replacing glued joints with firm metal brackets and supports and by eliminating many of the joints and seams that were a part of former models. Also there is complete insulation of the driving compartment with felt, celotex and a rubber floor mat.

Marmon's 16-Cylinder Car Will Have Engine Developing 200 H. P.

The fact that Marmon is expected to announce new models within a few months, which will mean only slight changes in design, except in the case of the new Marmon Sixteen, is causing the Archer-Mann Motor Co., distributer, to reduce its inventory of new cars. As a result, the firm is making substantial reductions in prices of new Marmon cars.

Marmon will present its long-heralded 16-cylinder car at the coming New York automobile show and at other principal 1931 displays, according to announcement by G. M. Williams, president of the Marmon Motor Car Co.

The new Marmon Sixteen was engineered by Howard C. Marmon and has a 200-horsepower, all-aluminum engine with the highest ratio to weight of any passenger car to date. The wheelbase is 145 inches.

In appearance, the Marmon Sixteen is a departure from standard automobile design, although it is not in any sense radical. The designer was Walter Dorwin Teague, well-known in the field of art and product design.

ing our buyers' strike and keeping our pot of fear boiling. The business organization and economic fabric of our country is still filled with vitality, though partially dormant.

"Everywhere we encounter dealers and men in varied lines whose businesses are holding their own this year against the records of any previous year. By analyzing the existing market, namely the 85 to 90 per cent that is intact, and working it instead of bemoaning the loss of the small layer represented by reduced employment, the majority of business could be showing satisfactory returns instead of being in the dumps."

"Signs of a return to prosperity in this particular locality," Van Der Zee said, "are on a par with those in other sections and far exceed those in many parts of the country. Our local dealers have done an outstanding job this year and we count them among our strongest dealer bodies. With the most complete line ever offered of Dodge sixes and eights, as well as commercial cars and trucks, they are in excellent shape to do a marked increase in volume in 1931."

Commenting on truck and commercial car possibilities for business found during this comprehensive swing around the country, Graves said: "The commercial car and truck business is good and there is considerable buying at the present moment. I find that large users are lining up their requirements for the future and are gathering figures and estimates preparatory to buying. It is particularly significant to consider that deliveries of Dodge trucks during October materially exceeded deliveries in any previous month this year."

Wins Contest

Chevrolet's Denver Zone Chief Crowned As 'King Go-Getter'

T. E. Chancellor, zone manager at Denver, was crowned "King Go-Getter" of the Chevrolet Mid-West region Friday night in a ceremony at Hotel Jefferson as a result of an unusual sales contest for Chevrolet executives in the Mid-West region.

The idea of the contest was based on a story by Peter B. Kyne, and the contestants were all assigned seemingly impossible tasks. All Chevrolet executives and field representatives in Gilpin's territory were eligible.

The crowning ceremony, in which Gilpin took the chief role, was carried out with elaborate detail and was followed by a banquet and theater party.

Other executives were crowned as "King Go-Getters" of their divisions, as follows: E. W. Berger, Decatur, Ill., assistant zone manager; D. B. Keefe, Denver, and C. C. Grant, Kansas City, Mo., sales promotion managers; C. G. Goodman, Memphis, Tenn., accounting manager; H. Mager, Denver, T. V. Jordan, Decatur, and C. C. Martin, Kansas City, as field representatives.

Among those attending the ceremony were F. X. Miller, regional sales promotion manager; A. W. Famular, regional accounting manager; G. A. Sprackling, regional parts and service manager; C. G. Slawson, regional car distributer at St. Louis, and O. A. Klein, regional car distrbiuter at Kansas City. Also present were these zone managers: O. E. Nonn, Decatur, Ill.; E. A. Nimnicht, Kansas City; C. E. O'Meara, St. Louis; A. F. Diedrich, Wichita, Kan.; M. B. Roys, Little Rock, Ark., and C. G. Smith, Memphis, Tenn.

Motorists Learning That Winter Buying Has Its Advantages

Breaking in a new car during cold weather offers several advantages. Many motorists who used to think that winter was a time to get along with their old car are realizing that it is false economy.

Buyers at this time of the year have their new cars when it is most important to have a dependable engine that starts easily; perfect brakes for slippery roads; new tires to grip icy surfaces and new batteries. The saving of time and repair, plus the satisfaction of driving cars that operate faithfully in the most severe weather are reducing the number of persons who defer new car deliveries until spring.

In breaking in a new car during the winter, Chrysler service officials say, there is little attempt at speed and the engine is not subjected to fast driving or extreme heat until it is ready to withstand such strains. The design of the latest cars, as exemplified in the new Chrysler eight and Imperial eight, insures economical and dependable year-round performance. The quality lacquer and chromium plating easily resists extreme winter weather.

Today the closed car with its powerful engine, positive four-wheel hydraulic brakes, long flexible springs and balloon tires provide comfort and safety little dreamed of a few years ago.

Studebaker Reports Its Stockholders Increase 33 Per Cent

An increase of 33 per cent in the number of its stockholders during the past year is announced by the Studebaker Corporation According to the manufacturer, its stockholders numbered 22,512 on Nov. 1929 and 30,021 on Nov. 10 of this year.

Pointing to this increase as a significant indication of public confidence in Studebaker, Albert Russel Erskine, President of the Corporation says:

"The introduction of free wheeling, in the new President and Commander eights last summer was the signal for ranewed interest on the part of the public as indicated by Studebaker's climb to fifth place in national registration within 30 days of the appearance of the new cars. Since then free wheeling has been introduced in a new Dictator eight, thereby making this innovation available in the lower price field."

New Ford Dealer Erecting Building On Chouteau Avenue

The Chouteau Avenue Motor Corporation has opened a new Ford dealer sales, service and parts department at 727 Chouteau avenue. The firm is also erecting a building at 1021-25 Chouteau avenue that is expected to be ready for occupancy about March 1.

The new building will front 80 feet on Chouteau and will be 140 feet deep. The sales and parts room will occupy 68 feet of the Chouteau avenue front. The building will be of brick, one story high. The rear will be given up to the shop and service departments.

Officers of the company, which was organized recently and was appointed an authorized Ford dealer, are: Samuel Schwartz, president; K. MacLeod, vice president, and Paul Schreiter, secretary-treasurer.

Austin Roadster Announced Will Be Shown Here Soon

An attractive roadster has just been announced by the American Austin Car Co., according to Central Motor Sales, Inc., distributer of Austin cars.

Finished in two-tone color combination, and with a custom-tailored, khaki-colored, removable top, this Bantam roaster combines appearance and comfort with economy of operation.

Shipments are already in transit and the new car will be displayed locally within a few days.

Auto Cold Weather Insurance Provisions

Members of motor clubs affiliated with the American Automobile Association are offered suggestions on preparing for winter driving. Among the provisions constituting "Cold Weather Insurance" are:

Filling radiators with alcohol or antifreeze solution suited to the climate.

Draining crank case and filling with high-grade oil of winter consistency.

Having all chassis parts crowded with good chassis lubricant.

Checking battery and generator to determine that both are capable of meeting conditions imposed by winter driving.

Installing a good heater.

Flushing gear cases and refilling them with winter-tested lubricant that will secure any gear shifting on the coldest days.

Dan Hyland, manager of the Alemite company, 3229 Locust street, says that the manufacturer he represents experimented for years to discover the formula for Alemite winter gear lubricant, which will actually flow at 10 degrees below zero. This, he said, means that the gears are in a complete and constant coat of cushioning lubricant, which enables the gears to be shifted as easily in the coldest weather as in summer.

G. M. Truck Prices Reduced, Cuts Ranging From $50 to $600

The General Motors Truck Co., Pontiac, Mich., has just announced reductions in the prices of its line of light duty trucks. The reductions include $50 from the price of the Model T-15 three-quarter tonner; $70 on the Model T-17 one-tonner, and $150 on the Model T-19 ton and a half type.

A reduction of $600 in the price of the T-90 heavy duty type, of 7½ tons capacity, also has been put into effect. The reductions apply to all types in each class.

New Line of Reo Speedwagons and Trucks Announced

A new line of Reo Speedwagons and trucks is announced by the Steiner-Fahrenkrog Automobile Co.

A Reo Super-Tonner, 129-inch wheel base, and a model with 135-inch wheel base are now furnished with a standard four-speed transmission and rear axle for "dualing." Improvements include chromium plating of the radiator, heavier fenders and running boards and mats, and larger hub caps.

The new rear axle now accommodates dual wheels and has an axle shaft sturdy enough to withstand rough usage. It has 1¾ inch diameter at the spline end and 2¼ inches at the bearing end. Two tapered roller bearings, back to back, support the axle shaft at the wheel end.

The new transmission for the Super-Tonner has four speeds forward and one reverse, beginning with a ratio of 6.57 to 1 in low gear, which, with a differential gear ratio of 5.2 to 1 makes a combination which provides immense power in low gear.

The engine of the former models is retained unchanged.

The 70 H. P. "Gold Crown" engine remains the motive power in the big jobs.

New color combinations are now available. The new cab has an improved trim in the seat and back. Chromium cowl lights in the two and three-ton series and chromium in the ton and ton and one-half jobs add to the appearance.

Radio is making ready for its first international style broadcast, to come direct from Paris. ..lthough the event is somewhat in the future, plans have been set under way by the Columbia System for the broadcast. It proposes to pick up a talk by Capt. Edward Molyneau, Paris dress designer, and bring it to this side of the Atlantic for retransmission by 42 stations on Friday night, Feb. 6, at 9 o'clock, which will be 3 a. m. the next day in Paris. It is to be the first of a series of 14 programs on which master dress designers will talk. The opener will consist of music played in the New York studios, with a switch during the half-hour program to Paris for Capt. Molyneau. His voice will go to London by telephone, then leap across the Atlantic on short wave channels.

A special broadcast by Amos and Andy will be sent out by short waves from NBC transmitters to be picked up and rebroadcast by the British Broadcasting Corporation at 1:30 Wednesday afternoon, Dec. 31. It should be heard in England at 7:30 on New Year's Eve. This will be the first attempt to send a regular network program across the Atlantic for rebroadcasting. Amos and Andy will give a special sketch with no attempt to follow the serial story that they are presenting to listeners in this country nightly.

A combination of parabolic reflector and microphone is being used by the NBC in broadcasting concerts by large orchestras. It will be used Christmas Day when Leopold Stokowski leads the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra in another special Philco concert over KSD. The new parabolic concentrator, which uses a sound reflection principle employed during the World War in combating air raids, is erected to face the orchestra. It catches the sound waves and reflects them into the diaphragm of the microphone with excellent results through harmonious focusing.

By adding WDRC, Hartford, to its network the Columbia System, has brought its total of affiliated stations up to 73. The National Broadcasting Co. networks have 76. Thus virtually one-fourth of the 613 stations in the United States subscribe for chain programs.

Educational, religion, drama and special events are receiving ever-increasing attention from the broadcasters, according to reports by the National Broadcasting Co. That company devoted almost a fourth of the broadcasting time of its two New York stations, WEAF and WJZ, to these subjects in November.

The two stations broadcast a total of 1072 hours during the month, 547 for WEAF and 525 for WJZ. WEAF presented a total of 1087 programs and WJZ offered 1480, making 2567 for both stations. These programs required 23,022 microphone appearances of artists, announcers, musicians, speakers, actors and others.

Of the total broadcast time about 2 per cent was given over to religious programs, 7.5 per cent to informative work, 7.6 per cent to drama and 5.2 per cent to special events, including sports.

Broadcasting of real murder trials has been brought much nearer, according to William S. Rainey, NBC production manager, as a result of the success of "The Trial of Vivienne Ware," which was carried by WJZ for half an hour each on six successive nights, ending Nov. 30. Rosamund Pinchot played the title role. U. S. Senator Robert F. Wagner played the judge; George Gordon Battle, noted lawyer was counsel for the defense, and Ferdinand Pecora, former chief assistant prosecuting attorney of New York, was prosecutor. All three of these men said they believed actual trials could be broadcast without affecting the dignity of the courts and would educate listeners in court procedure as well as interest them as moving drama.

When 1930 draws to a close the Grigsby-Grunow Co., sponsor of Majestic's Old Curiosity Shop dramas, and Majestic Home Hour, and co-sponsors of the American School of the Air, all of which are heard over the Columbia chain, will have set a new mark for number of hours broadcast under one banner.

Ray Erlandson, director of broadcasting activities for Majestic, estimates that 10,616 station unit programs were presented under his supervision and under exclusive sponsorship of the Chicago concern in 1930. Between 10,000 and 25,000 fan letters are received weekly in response to broadcasts, Erlandson said.

Majestic's Curiosity Shop is broadcast Sundays at 8 p. m. over 49 stations in the United States and two in Canada.

Three New Crosley Sets Introduced—General Motors Adds Small Receiver—Stewart-Warner Has Console for Small Rooms

More Crosley Models.

Three new Crosley receivers have been introduced—the Buddy Boy, an attractive mantel type set; a new Classmate, with a cabinet five inches higher than that of the Crosley Mate, and a new Administrator.

The Buddy Boy is 15½ inches high, 17 inches wide and 9½ inches deep. It is made on a new system of construction, and is a one-piece cabinet without seams, joints, nails or screws. The Classmate has the same circuit as the Mate, and has the latest type Crosley moving coil dynamic power speaker.

The new Administrator has the same circuit as the Director and the same speaker. It also has positive automatic volume control and local-distance switch.

New Stewart-Warner Set.

The new Stewart-Warner small console receiver has been designed for the small apartment house living room, library, nursery or breakfast nook. It is 34 inches high, 23 inches wide and 15 inches deep.

It has the standard Stewart-Warner eight-tube chassis, and performs the same as the larger models.

Its cabinet is of five-ply American walnut with a decorate panel of Oriental walnut. The speaker grille is backed with cloth of gold in harmony with the grain and tone of the wood. It comes equipped for either 60 or 25 cycle AC or for DC, and has the Stewart-Warner electro dynamic speaker.

General Motors Small Set.

Featuring tone selection and period design, a new small six-tube screen grid AC radio set, known as "The Little General," which may be moved easily from place to place and blend with any setting of household furniture, has just been announced by General Motors Radio. The set is patterned after a Gothic cathedral arch and the speaker is covered with a specially designed silken fabric.

Only 19 inches high, 16 inches wide and 10½ inches deep, the "Little General" is finished in three optional colors—butt walnut, or in colored lacquer of green or buff, so that it may be used in any room.

The speaker is of the electro-dynamic type. Three knobs flanking the indicator, and beneath it, operate the station selector, tone selector and volume control.

Four tuned circuits with a power screen grid detector, a 45-power output tube, and a rectifying tube are used.

Brunswick Plan Praised.

Bert B. Perkins, director of the Warner Bros. - Brunswick Radio Thanksgiving campaign to bring back to public consciousness the importance of continuing support of organized charitable institutions, states that, even without the presentation of the $100,000 in radio equipment which was Warner Bros. gift to the nation's organizations dedicated to the relief of the poor, the welfare departments of over 20 great cities have voted the idea successful from the standpoint of increase in unsolicited support for homes, asylums and hospitals which the campaign has achieved.

St. Louisan Gets Patent.

Film Shows Causes of Man-Made Static and Ways to End It

A motion picture, entitled "Man-Made Static," was shown Friday night to radio dealers by C. H. Andersen, chairman of the Interference Committee of the Associated Radio Councils, at the Mayfair Hotel.

The film showed what caused most radio interference noises. Incidentally, it indicated that instead of the power companies being almost wholly to blame, they should be blamed for only about 10 per cent while more than 50 per cent of it could be eliminated by dealers' service men.

All sorts of interference, from that caused by dial telephones to that due to oil burners elevators and flasher signs, can be cured by use of the proper filtering devices on the appliances at fault.

London policemen are testing miniature receivers with the idea of adopting them for use on patrol duty. The sets weigh no more than an electric torch and can be carried in a breast pocket. Scotland Yard is interested in the experiments.

Observing three men at the door of a grocery at 1079 South Newstead avenue at 2:30 a. m. yesterday, Patrolman Frank Knack of Magnolia Avenue District slipped around through an alley and areaway to reach the place without being seen.

Deep in my heart you are fondly remembered,
Sweet, happy memories cling round your name;

To wait for cure, but all in vain,
Till God alone knew what was best.
He called you home to give you rest.
You had a nature we could not help loving,
A heart that was purer than gold.
And to those who knew you and loved you
Your memory will never grow cold.
You did not fail to do your best.

2 CONCERNS BUY QUARTERS IN AREA EAST OF FOURTH

Jennings-Ramsey Mfg. Co. at Third and Plum — Wolf - Pollack Realty Co. at 206 Olive.

BOOM INDICATED IN THIS DISTRICT

This Is Because of River Front Beautification Program, Soon to Take Definite Form.

By Berry Moore.

Realty transaction of the week pointed to revived activity in the district east of Fourth street between Washington avenue and the Municipal Bridge.

These included the purchase by the Jennings-Ramsey Mfg. Co. of the building at the southeast corner of Third and Plum streets through the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., and by the Wolf-Pollack Realty Co. of the five-story and stone office structure at 206-12 Olive street.

The Third and Plum street building, two stories in height, was acquired for a factory by the Jennings-Ramsey Co., manufacturer of undertaker's supplies, now at 317 Spruce street. The property has a frontage on Third of 95 feet with a depth of 164 feet on Plum. The building, erected by the late John T. Milliken, is exceptionally well built, the interior being of white tile. The consideration was not disclosed.

Office for Realty Firm.

The building at 206-12 Olive was purchased by the Wolf-Pollack Co., as headquarters with plans for specializing in property in the district east of Third street between Washington avenue and Market street. The street floor of the building, having a frontage of 77 feet on Olive, will be remodeled for offices of the real estate concern, now occupying ground floor quarters at 101-3 North Eighth street.

Obviously, a speculative boom in real estate in this part of the city is anticipated, predicated on plans for improving this part of the city, together with development of the northern and southern river fronts, as submitted for the Board of Public Service by the City Plan Commission.

As has been told, this includes beautification of the area east of Third street, between Spruce street and Franklin avenue, with provision for parking space; an elaborate mall from the old Courthouse to the river; double decking of Third street and extensions to Thirteenth and Geyer and to Thirteenth and Mullanphy; and a double deck road along the river front between Spruce and Franklin. The river front program also includes construction of a high-speed non-stop automobile connection from the northern and southern sections of the city to the proposed double-deck Third street thoroughfare.

Claude E. Vrooman, capitalist and large real estate operator, recently purchased the 10-story Rialto office building, at the southeast corner of Fourth and Olive. The purchase was made, it was stated, in recognition of the possibilities of the business district east of Fourth street, in view of the river front project, which promises finally to be realized. Vrooman has declined several offers involving substantial profits on his investment.

NEW BOARD FOR LINDELL WIDENING

Property owners in the vicinity of Grand and Lindell boulevards are hopeful that the newly appointed commission, the fourth to sit on the famous bottle-neck condemnation case, will do a job that will end the delay in this important widening enterprise.

Eugene J. Altheimer, real estate dealer, William Hayes, contractor, and James Duross, lawyer, are the members of the new commission, appointed yesterday by Circuit Judge Hall.

Attempts to get an award reasonably satisfactory to the property owners and the city have been under way since 1919. The last commission's work was censured by the city's lawyers, in a recent discussion in court, as being slipshod. The city, in the last case, objected not only to the lowness of some benefit assessments made against property owners, but against the excessive size of others, and declared that territory had been included in the benefit district which should have been omitted.

When the commissioners' work has been finished the city will be able to proceed with widening the section of Lindell from Channing avenue to Grand, from a varying width of 60 and 80 feet to a uniform 100 feet. Even this may not be the end of the improvement. City planners have envisioned the whole wedge between Olive street and Lindell, east of Grand, as an open and parked space.

Urges Architects to Concentrate On Designing Dwelling Houses

All business and industry awaits a prognosis of business revival from the building industry; such recovery, if it comes, will be found first in the field of residential building. Shelter still is one of the basic needs of civilization; not more housing but better housing, and the best way to create new housing is to produce better, more economical, more livable housing for less money. This is the conclusion of L. Seth Schnitman, chief statistician, F. W. Dodge Corporation, writing in the current issue of Architectural Record.

"What is being done in this direction," writes Schnitman, "is evidenced in apartment house construction in the outer fringes of some of our industrial cities. But development along these lines operates to add dwelling units without material displacement of existing units. The bigger problem involves, it would seem displacement of obsolescent, walk-up tenements in our slums and near slums which have outlived their economic utility; the rebuilding of existing centers rather than further horizontal extension unless such extension involves some displacement. Out of this must come better design, superior economic utilization of land, environment, materials, and a fuller realization of the possibilities of an untapped housing market. Such will reawaken dormant financial interests—the insurance companies, our savings banks, our mortgage houses and building and loan organizations, to say nothing of private capital of individuals. These reservoirs of money, now brimful, will be released to one single utility which more than any other can restore the balance to our economic machine that has been upset largely by ruthless excesses of which 'shelter at any cost' was not the least impelling."

Discussing the role of the architect in this pressing need, Schnitman says:

"The architect who plans without regard for construction economics, prospective labor and material costs, land values, financing, technologic improvements, shifting centers of commerce and habitation, taxation, rentals—must go the way of the physician who prescribed before diagnosis.

"The architect is as truly the building designer as the automotive engineer is the automobile stylist. His is the problem of changing and improving the character of architecture so effectively as to make obsolete existing structures; his is the problem of providing better and more livable habitation, more efficient offices and school buildings. It is indeed no easy matter, but in times such as these, when staffs are not under pressure on current plans, unexcelled opportunities are present for the development of efficiency that must bring about a much more methodic evolution in architecture in the light of construction economics than has obtained hitherto.

"Vertical transportation which has made the skyscraper possible is being adapted to residential requirements. And in the offing even larger apartment houses, with community gardens, swimming pools, tennis courts and the like seem presaged. Fabricated units, under the direction of the architect, will make possible the erection of more livable small houses, better in construction, at substantially lower unit costs, operating to make obsolescent the row house of an earlier day. Though standardized, these units will be fabricated with due regard to the important matter of community grouping.

"It is upon nonresidential building that architects seem to have centered their energies for improvement in design, efficiency in operation, economies in production. With an indicated further decline in this type of building activity because of the large oversupply in office space, it would appear that the attention previously directed to nonresidential building may now well be diverted toward improvements in residential types, to make houses more habitable, to make dwelling units more efficient. In these processes residential building will find basic soundness for continued improvement, for it is not more housing that is needed, but rather better housing. The best way to create a demand for new housing is to produce better housing for less money."

DOWNTOWN DISTRICT DEVELOPMENT PLANS

City Improvement Association Sets Up Ten Major Objectives for Future.

The City Improvement Association, an organization pledged to the development of downtown St. Louis, now has a membership of more than 100 and, according to Lou J. Conant, executive vice president, expects to increase the number to at least 200 active members before the close of another year.

"Ten major objectives," said Conant, "have been adopted as the program of the City Improvement Association for the ensuing year. Property owners in the downtown district, who make up the membership of the City Improvement Association have pledged themselves to subscribe a fund sufficient to carry out its program of publicity. Funds are subscribed by each property owner on the basis of land and building valuation in the downtown district. Members of the association recognize the significance of continuous publicity to bring about improvements which will open up traffic lanes leading into the downtown district, provide adequate parking for automobiles and new terminals for street cars and busses.

The 10 major objectives as given by Conant are:

1. Widening and double-decking of Third street. North and northwestern approach to Third street. South and southwestern approach to Third street.
2. Elevated roadways on these and other thoroughfares leading downtown to provide for uninterrupted high speed traffic.
3. Completion of Morgan, Market and other street widening projects leading into the district.
4. Opening of the Eads Bridge as a free bridge.
5. Adequate downtown terminal facilities for street cars and busses.
6. Completion of the river front plaza in a monumental manner.
7. Construction of the Old Court-house mall and preservation of the Old Courthouse as an adjunct to court requirements of the district.
8. Adequate public parking facilities on the river front east of Third street.
9. Encouragement of new buildings and other improvements, thereby maintaining and increasing property values in the downtown district.
10. Stress the manifold advantages and conveniences of location in the downtown district for present and future business.

"The City Plan Commission," Conant stated, "proposes an excellent program for the central river front at a total cost of $50,000,000. Under the charter of the city of St. Louis the Plan Commission believes it would be difficult to carry out a project of the character and magnitude proposed in a complete and satisfactory manner. 'Present laws,' says the Plan Commission, 'permit but two methods of meeting the cost, one by public bond issue; another by special assessments of benefits, or by a combination of these two methods.'

"The City Improvement Association contemplates submitting amendments to the city charter in the spring election which will permit the gradual development of the City Plan Commission program through one or both of these two financing methods.

"Operating under an amended charter, the city of St. Louis may find it possible to develop its river front program, step by step, over a period of years without waiting until the project can be handled as a whole."

Delegates to Conventions Desirable Visitors to City

Gatherings Develop Friendships for St. Louis and Increase Business by Many Millions, Said a Bureau Official.

The St. Louis Convention, Publicity and Tourist Bureau originally was known as the St. Louis Convention League. It was organized in May, 1909, and was among the first organizations of its character to be formed in the United States. In reviewing the work of more than 20 years, Charles F. Hatfield, general manager of the bureau said: "The purpose of this organization is to bring conventions to St. Louis, to give the convention visitors a worthwhile service while they are in our city, and to make their stay here so pleasant and profitable that there will be a reluctance to leave and a desire to return to St. Louis.

"The St. Louis Convention, Publicity and Tourist Bureau is one of the largest, best organized and most successful bureaus of its kind in the country. The policies of the Bureau are governed by a board of directors of 57 of the leading business men of the city, representing practically every business and civic organization, including the City Administration, Chamber of Commerce, retailers, banks, professional, improvement associations and similar groups.

"During the first year the Bureau was organized it brought only 12 conventions to St. Louis. From 1910 until 1915, there were 611 conventions held here or an average of 87 per year. From 1916 to 1926, inclusive, there were 2574, or an average of 234 conventions per year. In 1927, there were 259. These conventions brought into St. Louis 75,726 visitors. In 1928 there were 265 with an attendance of 79,217, and in 1929 there were 271 with an attendance of 86,890 and this figure does not include visitors to the National Dairy Show.

"When you consider," said the Bureau's representative, "that the average convention delegate stays in the city at least three days and spends at a very low estimate at least $10 per day, you can realize the enormous financial benefits that are derived through the conventions that are held here.

"The Bureau, in its desire to be conservative used as a basis for its figures the estimate of $10 per day per delegate. Other cities have not been so conservative. In figures recently given out by a Convention Bureau in another city it was stated that through questionnaires it was ascertained that 982 delegates attending a specific convention spent during a stay of 3½ days, a total of $128,233.24. If these figures were taken as a basis, the 85,000 delegates to conventions held in St. Louis during an average year, spent in St. Louis $11,990,300.

"This revenue from conventions goes into every channel of trade. It has been estimated that 23 per cent of the convention dollar goes to the hotels, 31 per cent to the retail stores, 18 per cent to the restaurants, 10 per cent to garages and transportation, 8 per cent to theaters and other forms of amusement and 10 per cent for miscellaneous.

"The convention of today brings together, from all over the country, recognized leaders in every form of social, educational and business activities that are concerned in human progress. The meetings scheduled for the next few months will bring to St. Louis hundreds and thousands of these men and women. Millions of dollars will be added to the buying power of St. Louis—millions which will flow through every business channel and reach, more or less, every industry."

FEDERAL BUSINESS IN ST. LOUIS

Branches and Headquarters Here Transact Large Business.

In recognition of the importance of St. Louis in the West and Southwest, the United States Government maintains here branches and divisional headquarters for many of its departments. Among these are the Agricultural Department; the Civil Service; the Army Department; the Department of Commerce, the Compensation Bureau, the Department of the Interior, the Department of Justice, the Department of Labor, the Navy Recruiting Office, the Postoffice Department, the Postoffice Inspectors, the Treasury Department, the United States Commissioners and the Mississippi Warrior Service.

Congress has approved a bill for the erection in St. Louis of a central building in which all Government offices will be housed.

Jefferson Barracks, the historic, century-old United States Army Post, occupies a picturesque site on the banks of the Mississippi River 10 miles below St. Louis. It comprises 1261 acres and includes a national cemetery. It has a postoffice, telegraph and railway stations, and contains the St. Louis Powder Depot. Jefferson Barracks is a regimental station with normal complement of about 1200 officers and men, with one battery of field artillery. Other Federal institutions in St. Louis are the Veterans' Hospital, the United States Marine Hospital and the Custom House.

Daily Plane Service to Omaha.

Announcement has been made of the opening, tomorrow, of daily airplane service between St. Louis and Omaha. One trip each way daily is scheduled.

Modern Grade Crossings.

Six modern viaducts to carry important streets over or under dangerous railroad crossings in St. Louis have been built in the last decade. Two other crossing improvements are under way, and program has been laid out to dispose of the majority of the most heavily traveled crossings elsewhere.

DESIRABLE SITES FOR MANUFACTORIES

St. Louis Industrial District Has Ample Acreage Close to Rail and Water.

The area known as the East Side of the St. Louis industrial district contains considerable undeveloped acreage that is criss-crossed with railroads and all-weather highways. Much of the land is adjacent to parts of eight to 10 miles of river front and the diversion canal, which offers wharfage sites.

H. F. Porter of the Industrial Bureau of Granite City, referring to the sites available, said that the area contains three well-defined districts with considerable diversity of manufacturing.

The major industries represented include packing at National City, chemicals at Montsanto, stoves at Belleville, glass, brick and ammunition at Alton, tanning at Hartford, oil refining at Wood River and Roxana, iron and steel at Granite City. Taken in its entirety, the area counts for an immense volume of manufactured products of wide variety.

It is in and about this section that undeveloped factory sites have attractive futures. Describing the section, Mr. Porter said:

"As defined by the Industrial Bureau of the Granite City district, it extends north along the river to the diversion canal, which empties into the Mississippi about opposite the mouth of the Missouri. The district extends inland between eight and 10 miles, or to the foot of the bluffs, opposite Granite City, curving to the river at Alton and again below East St. Louis.

"Far-sighted men of Greater St. Louis generally entertain the view that, if St. Louis' apparent destiny as the great manufacturing center in the country is to be realized, these extensive acres of favorable topography, with every facility handy, must be utilized for industry.

"Included in the area are eight to ten miles of river frontage at present without any manufacturing plants. When development starts in earnest this shore property will be adequately protected against high waters to meet the demand by industries needing wharfage of their own or requiring large quantities of cheap water or both.

"The Diversion Canal, too, offers possibilities of wharfage sites. It would need only a widening and deepening. Extending now inland about four and a half miles, it could readily be extended farther.

"Edwardsville and Collinsville, just over the bluffs, and included in the St. Louis Industrial Area, are coal mining centers. They are significant in the general picture as a future location of fine residential development which seems destined to occur along the bluffs, east of the Granite City district proper.

STOCK LIST DECLINES TO NEW 3-YEAR LOW LEVEL

Slump Is Orderly but Price Resistance Slowly Gives Way Under Steady Hammering of Selling During Week.

LOW MARKS REACHED AS THE WEEK CLOSES

U. S. Steel Goes to 136 3-8, American Telephone 178-1-8 and American Can 107 — Cotton Market in Further Decline.

y the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—The in- estment and speculative markets ere under the spell of blind and elentless deflation this week.

The slump was orderly, but rice resistance slowly gave way der the steady hammering of lling. Stocks broke through the w level of Nov. 10 to the lowest ince July, 1927. The week-end ound bond prices around the levls of 1925. Cotton tumbled bew 10 cents a pound to the cheapst price in 15 years. Silver bulon tumbled to the lowest price in istory.

The decline in bond prices was sturbing to investors, who, Wall reet bankers pointed out, apparntly failed to grasp the fact that rices weer being forced down by technical banking and money ituation, rather than any impairent of investment values, save in olated instances.

Owing to slack commercial deands, banks early in the year had ifficulty in finding profitable employment for their funds and purhased bonds heavily. With the rowing holiday currency demands, nd desire of banks to be well pplied with cash in a period of nsettlement, banks have sold heir investments heavily in the st few weeks. This has softened he market, impaired investors' onfidence, hampered investment ouses in distributing new offerngs, in fact, developed a vicious ircle of adverse factors. It has enefited only the shrewd bargain nters, such old-timers as bought avily of Liberty Bonds when ey went into the low 80's ten ears ago.

Little Basis in News.

The fresh decline in stock prices ad little basis in any new deelopment in corporate news. The arket reacted, however, in sympahy with the decline in bonds and mmodities. The breaks in cotton d silver were discouraging, at a me when it was felt that some easure of stability had been chieved. Furthermore, as expected many quarters, the advance in opper prices from 9½ to 12 cents, roved to have been too rapid, and opper exporters finally reduced heir price to the basis of 11 cents, omestic.

The price index of 90 representative shares dropped 9 7-10 points to the lowest level since July, 1927. he index of 50 industrials alone ost 9 8-10 points, touching a level ot seen since May, 1927. The inex of 20 rails sold off 7.3 points. his index was started in 1926, d it reached a level never beore recorded. Other indices, hower, indicated that rail share rices averaged around those of e summer of 1925. The price inx of 20 utilities, which moves e most erratically of any in this mpilation, dropped 11.9 points, the lowest level since August, 28.

The suspension of a local uptown nk was not regarded in Wall reet as an important factor in e general situation, although narally it did not help sentiment mong smaller investors. This intitution had started on the lower ast side and a large proportion f its depositors did not speak Enish. It grew rapidly, but develed quite apart from the strong stitutions of Wall street, never en becoming a member of the earing house.

It had been the subject of gosip for several months, and its nal suspension was regarded as iminating the local soft spot. The ct that it was the largest bank o suspend since the Knickerbocker rust in 1907 reflects only the normous growth of population d wealth since that time, for s closing can be regarded as in o wise comparable to the 1907 ffair.

Saturday's Close About Low.

The renewed decline in commody prices stirred up a gale of sellg in the market today. Few imortant stocks escaped being blown to new low ground, and quotaons closed at the bottom. Sales taled 1,962,480 shares for the o hours, a turnover only slightly

SALES VOLUME SHOWS GAIN ON LOCAL EXCHANGE

"Tax Selling" Indicated in Some Transactions — Wagner Electric a Feature —St. Louis Public Service Preferred at 20.

A volume of business more than double that of the preceding week, establishment of new lows for the 1929-30 period by at least 10 stocks and selling which was looked upon as "tax selling" featured the week just closed on the St. Louis Stock Exchange. Transactions exceeding 11,000 shares. "Cross sales" helped bring up total.

Wagner Electric transactions made up more than 25 per cent of the total. There was a 2500 share lot at 19¼ with the same house both buyer and seller. There was a similar transaction of 1000 shares of National Candy at 21. Some Consolidaed Lead sold under what appeared similar circumstances.

Of 41 securities traded in in full lots, 21 closed lower, five higher and 15 unchanged.

Hamilton-Brown ran up to 8¾ from low of week of 5 but reacted to 6 subsequently.

There was no trading in St. Louis Public Service preferred after announcement of passing of dividend until the closing session when it sold at 20. Previously 20 shares sold at 23, down seven points form last sale on Nov. 17.

Stocks closing lower for the week included International Shoe, Missouri Portland, Landis, Brown Shoe, Rice-Stix and National Candy.

Moloney Electric was higher.

When the 2 to 5 point net losses were averaged in the weighted price index of 90 issues it was found that the composite had dropped 3.4 points to 119.1, the lowest since July, 1927, contrasting with the year's high of 205.8 reached early in April.

Hope that commodities had reached an encouraging degree of stabilization has received a rude shock in the last few days and a market that easily weather a bank suspension turned despondent when cotton, silver and copper weakened. The former staple today dropped 90 cents to $1.25 a bale under the weight of the census Bureau's consumption report for November showing a reduction of 30,000 bales and prices touched fresh post-war lows, with the spot month down to 9.45 cents.

Corn yielded something more than a cent a bushel in expectation of larger receipts early next week and in sympathy with bearish weather forecasts for the Southwest. Bar silver, however, firmed a few points here as the quotation in London hardened. Bonds were weak, but wheat, as usual, was steady.

Spontaneous business news developments of importance to the market were lacking, although the admission in trade reviews that Christmas business had been rather disappointing so far in certain sections, added to the babel of pessimism. Estimate of steel operations in the Youngstown district for the coming week are off 3 per cent.

U. S. Steel 136⅝.

Many large blocks of stock were dislodged during the morning, with liquidation obviously present in considerable volume, professional sellers hastened to press their advantage and nothing was spared. U. S. Steel went to the new low of 137¼, met support there and rallied, but finally gave way again when pressure was reapplied, and declined to 136⅝. It closed only ⅛ above that quotation, off 2¾ net. American Telephone dropped to 178⅛, American Can to 107, General Electric to 43⅛, New York Central to 113¼, Westinghouse to 91, Bethlehem Steel to 51½, Anaconda to 29⅛, and these were virtually the final prices.

Atchison's loss of 3 was not sufficient to establish a new low, but it and Pennsylvania were exceptions in the rail group, whose average price of 90.8 has not been duplicated singe 1925. Miscellaneous equities that held above their previous minimums included Standard Oil of New Jersey, Radio, General Motors, National Biscuit, North American, Sears-Rooebuck, Woolworth, Fox Film and Loew's. This performance, however, did not mean that they were exempt from loss.

American Can's four-point net decline was the largest in the list of active industrial favorites, although Allied Chemical, Air Reduction, Columbia Carbon, Worthington Pump and International Business Machines lost as much or more. United Aircraft declined six points, recovering one.

American Telephone, Westinghouse, General Electric, Bethlehem Steel, Eastman Kodak, Southern Railway, Sears-Roebuck, Union Carbide, Public Service of New Jersey, Consolidated Gas and American Foreign Power were among many down 2 to 3 at the close. Transamerica was heavily sold and closed at 10½, off 1½.

Foreign exchanges were quiet and easy. Disturbances in Spain affected the peseta. Far Easterns were steadied by the improvement in silver.

New York Sugar.

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—Raw sugar was quiet today and while no sales were reported to local refiners there was a sale of 27,000 bags of Philippines to an operator for April-May shipment at 3.51c delivered. Refiners showed no interest and in absence of any business in nearby supplies, spot prices remained unchanged at 3.35c delivered.

Yesterday's reports that the conference at Brussels had been postponed until after the new year were denied and a firmer undertone developed in raw futures, with closing prices 2 to 4 points net higher. The market opened 2 to 4 points higher and later showed net gains of 3 to 5 points on local covering and buying by houses with European connections, promoted by the better showing of the London cables and private comment from Europe expressing a belief that an early and favorable agreement will be reached at the Brussels conference. There was a little realizing at the extreme advance and final prices were about a point below the best of the session. Approximate sales 19,600 tons. Closing prices: Dec. 1.27c, Jan. 1.30c, March 1.39c, May 1.47c, July 1.54c, Sept. 1.62c.

Refined market was unchanged at 4.75c for fine granulated, with second hands still available at 4.70c to 4.72½c.

COTTON MARKET HAS FURTHER SETBACK

Southern Selling and Liquidation Is Reported — Spot Cotton 9.60 Cents.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—A further decline in cotton due to continued Southern selling and liquidation carried the price of March contracts off to 9.83c in the market here today or 20 points below yesterday's closing quotation and more than 2 cents per pound below the high price reached on the rally of late October, and the lowest since the World War. Closing prices were at the lowest with the market barely steady at net declines of 18 to 25 points. Spot quiet, middling, 9.60 cents.

The opening was steady at a decline of 2 to 7 points in response to relatively easy Liverpool cables. There was some trade buying and considerable week-end covering, but it was supplied around the initial prices and the market soon worked lower under a continuance of the selling pressure which was evidently stimulated by weakness in Wall street. Stop orders were uncovered and in addition to Southern selling here, there was rumor that in some cases hedges were being sold against mill stocks of cotton or cotton goods. The week-end covering was more or less in evidence, while there was continued trade buying in small lots on scale down orders but the market showed very little rallying power. December sold off to 9.45c and May to 10.10c, making net declines of 20 to 25 points on the active months and the market closed at these figures, which represented declines of from 210 to 222 points from the high prices touched on the rally during the latter part of October.

The Southern selling here was regarded by a local trader as indicating that some cotton previously held off the market was coming out on the decline. Report of a poor spot demand also heard during the morning, and some of the early buyers in futures here appeared to be reselling later owing to the absence of more aggressive support at the decline in prices and the unsettled showing of the stock market. The report of the Census Bureau showing domestic consumption of 414,887 bales for November against 541,153 last year was about in line with expectations and without apparent effect on the market.

Liverpool cable said that trade calling and some Bombay buying in that market had been supplied by liquidation. A limited turnover in cotton cloths and yarns was reported in Manchester, but China news was said to be encouraging. The amount of cotton on shipboard at United States ports at the end of the week were estimated at 168,150 bales against 212,-828 last year.

BOND PRICE AVERAGE LOWEST SINCE 1925

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—An unusually large volume of offerings flowed into the bond market today to force prices to the lowest level of the week, which also was the minimum for the period since 1925, as measured by price averages.

Buying demand, which caused some stiffening of prices in Friday's session, appeared to have been satisfied and domestic corporate issues declined steadily in the short session today. Activity remained above the average as it has since Monday, and the turnover was the largest for an abbreviated session in several months.

The recessions in certain gilt-edged railroad and utility bonds widely held by commercial banks indicated further selling from those quarters to raise funds for special purposes. The declines were sharpest among second-grade railroad obligations, which at present prices provide the largest yields in several years. On the basis of the drop in the average for 10 railroad bonds, the depreciation in the quoted value of railroad bonds during the week amounts to more than 2½ per cent.

The week proved one of the most disturbing to bond prices in recent years. The average for 30 bonds at the close stood at 93.4, the lowest in five years at least, and compared with 95.9 on last Saturday.

While gilt-edged bonds ignored fundamental conditions favorable to stable prices, United States Governments were uniformly higher. Banks have been switching from domestic corporate issues to Treasury notes and Liberty bonds, which can be quickly liquidated.

With a few notable exceptions, foreign bonds were under pressure. Cologne City 6½s dipped 11½ points on a few sales and Rome City 6½s reached a new year's low at 70⅛. Fractional advances in German Governments were offset by drops in bank and industrial issues. Turnover in Latin Americans was moderate, with the price trend mixed. Chilean Governments rallied 1 to 2 points. Brazilians were generally lower.

The New York fiscal agents for the Sao Paulo 7 per cent coffee realization loan issued last May announced that since July 1 the Government has liquidated the stipulated monthly amounts of Government and planters' coffee and that payments to the sinking fund have been regularly made.

CORN FUTURES CLOSE DOWN ON LOCAL EXCHANGE

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Dec. 13.—Corn futures lost 1¼ to 1⅜c at the week-end session on the local board, the market following Chicago, where bears were said to have stressed the lower stock market. As for wheat, May closed unchanged. There was no trade in December while July wheat was offered at 69c. The news of day included report of wet harvest weather in Argentina.

Winnipeg wheat closed 1½c to 1¾c lower.

Liverpool wheat closed ½d lower.

May wheat opened at 78⅞c, December corn 72c and May corn 75¾c.

Local wheat receipts, which were 57,400 bushels, compared with 61,600 last week and 78,400 last year, included 17 cars local and 14 through; corn receipts, which were 120,000 bushels, compared with 75,600 last week and 36,800 last year, included 75 cars local and 11 through; oats receipts, which were 37,400 bushels, compared with 66,000 last week and 44,000 last year, included 16 cars local and 1 through. Hay receipts were 15 cars local and 4 through.

In the cash grain market, soft wheat was easy to down 1c. Offerings were light and trading was narrow. There was only a fair selection on sale and little demand except for limited call from local elevators. There were, however, a few orders on hand for bright, starchy grain. Sales of No. 1 were on a basis 3c above the Chicago old May figure and No. 2 2½c above. Hard wheat was off ½c. The demand was limited but equal to the light volume on sale. A light inquiry was generally reported by elevators, with bids at broader discounts. Sales of No. 1 were on a basis 1½c below the Chicago old May figure. Wheat with protein strength was offered to arrive from the west on the basis of ½c below the Kansas City May figure for 12½ per cent, ½c above for 13 per cent, 2c above for 13½ per cent and 3c above for 14 per cent, f. o. b. Kansas City. Corn was down 1c to 2½c, with sales mainly at prices 2c and 2½c lower. Clearance was pretty close, with elevators and industries taking the bulk of the offerings at slightly longer discounts. Oats were 1c and 1¼c lower. Offerings were moderate and cleared closely. Demand was stimulated somewhat by the lower levels.

DECLINE IN JULY WHEAT IS FEATURE OF TRADE

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 13.—Skidding with cotton and stocks, July wheat today reached the lowest prices registered in 27 years. In sharp contrast, other future deliveries were upheld by stabilization efforts. July wheat dropped into the "sixties" and finished at virtually the day's bottom figures.

Closing quotations on all cereals were heavy, with wheat unchanged from yesterday to 2⅛c lower; corn, 1@1½c off; oats, 1⅛@1½c down, and provisions unchanged to 10c decline.

The maximum fall of wheat was 2¼c, taking July wheat down to 69¾c a bushel, exactly the same price at which December corn closed. This was but 1c above the all-time low record for this century, established in March, 1903. According to one quarter, weakness of stocks was the paramount influence affectnig grain values, being viewed as an index of the business outlook.

Tumbling wheat quotations were followed by reports of a wet harvest in Argentina, especially throughout the provinces of Pampas and Cordoba. Incidentally, wheat trading here was more active than of late. There was prediction that extreme low prices for wheat would not only serve to curtail spring wheat acreage in this country and Canada, but also would mean likelihood that it would hardly pay to cut some of the wheat in Argentina and Australia.

Provisions sagged with grain, despite upturns in the value of hogs.

KANSAS AGGIES BEAT BILLIKENS, 16-15, IN GAME OF MANY THRILLS

By Dent McSkimming.

In a game filled with exciting situations, sensational shooting and tight defensive play, the Kansas Aggies last night staggered St. Louis University's Billiken basketball team with one of the most distressing defeats Nylkos' team has suffered in two seasons. With but 15 seconds left to play, the Billikens were leading, 15 to 14. They had only to keep the ball away from their own basket to win, but the break came for the Aggies on a held ball, a tip-off, and the lanky center, Cronkite, reaching up from a struggling mass of players, tipped the ball into the basket for the winning points. Before the ball could be put back into play from center the timer's whistle ended the game.

Sensing the danger of the tip-off under the Billiken basket, Coach Nylkos held up the game and sent his tallest man, Willits, in to relieve Grandoni in order that Cronkite's unusual height might be counteracted, but Willits failed to get his hand on the ball and the game was over.

Nigro the Sensation.

The outstanding figure of the game was Captain Nigro of the Aggies. He rescued his team from impending rout by tossing in four field goals in the second half. Prior to the time that Nigro started on his scoring streak the Billikens appeared far superior in every respect. They outplayed the visitors in the first half and led at the interval, 8 to 2. They had held the Aggies without a field goal in that time and it seemed they were on the road to certain victory. Failing to penetrate the Billiken defense for short shots, Captain Nigro resorted to long-distance pot shots and he scored from all angles, even with one hand. He became a menace and in trying to cover him, the Billiken guards permitted their sound defense to crack.

Since they were beaten by a single point, the Billikens must attach a lot of importance to a foul goal tossed by Capt. Nigro on a technical foul charged against St. Louis when the crowd jeered Umpire Lorbor. Nigro's good shot from the foul line brought the score up to 13—12 in St. Louis' favor.

Only three St. Louis players scored field goals, Joe Kennedy, Grandoni and Roberts one each. Frank Kennedy missed five shots from the foul line and scored once.

Two Straight Victories.

Victory last night gave the Aggies a clean sweep of their two-game series here for they beat Washington on Friday night, 35-24.

About 1500 persons saw last night's game at the St. Louis University Gymnasium on Pine street.

CHICAGO, Ill., Dec. 13.

A FEW months ago, when the football committee passed the rule compelling the absolute stop between the shift formation and the actual offensive thrust of the play, a great voice was uplifted in protest. It was none other than Knute Rockne, the nearly infallible, objecting that the change would seriously impair the effectiveness of this style of play.

During the season this protest was not revived. All teams obeyed the order to pause at least a counted second before setting the play in actual motion toward the opponent's goal, after the shift of players had been made.

Nor have any post-season complaints been heard. In fact, Rockne and other coaches adapted themselves to the changed conditions wonderfully. The play was just as effective, while the duties of the officials were rendered much less irksome.

Fair, but Dismal.

THIS year there is again talk of changing rules and the officials are hopeful some clarification of the fumble rule will be made, rendering decisions less involved.

Red Grange is demanding the retirement of the point-after-touchdown. He advocates letting the number of first downs de-

Failing to penetrate the Billiken defense for short shots, Captain Nigro resorted to long-distance pot shots and he scored from all angles, even with one hand. He became a menace and in trying to cover him, the Billiken guards permitted their sound defense to crack.

Since they were beaten by a single point, the Billikens must attach a lot of importance to a foul goal tossed by Capt. Nigro on a technical foul charged against St. Louis when the crowd jeered Umpire Lorbor. Nigro's good shot from the foul line briught the score up to 13—12 in St. Louis' favor.

Only three St. Louis players scored field goals, Joe Kennedy, Grandoni and Roberts one each. Frank Kennedy missed five shots from the foul line and scored once.

Two Straight Victories.

Victory last night gave the Aggies a clean sweep of their two-game series here for they beat Washington on Friday night, 35-24.

About 1500 persons saw last night's game at the St. Louis University Gymnasium on Pine street.

"BALL OVERBOARD" Byng of Navy Dives to Rescue at One-Yard Line

WRAY'S COLUMN

CHICAGO, Ill., Dec. 13.

A FEW months ago, when the football committee passed the rule compelling the absolute stop between the shift formation and the actual offensive thrust of the play, a great voice was uplifted in protest. It was none other than Knute Rockne, the nearly infallible, objecting that the change would seriously impair the effectiveness of this style of play.

During the season this protest was not revived. All teams obeyed the order to pause at least a counted second before setting the play in actual motion toward the opponent's goal, after the shift of players had been made.

Nor have any post-season complaints been heard. In fact, Rockne and other coaches adapted themselves to the changed conditions wonderfully. The play was just as effective, while the duties of the officials were rendered much less irksome.

Fair, but Dismal.

THIS year there is again talk of changing rules and the officials are hopeful some clarification of the fumble rule will be made, rendering decisions less involved.

Red Grange is demanding the retirement of the point-after-touchdown. He advocates letting the number of first downs decide which team is the winner, in case of a tie.

While this seems a fair enough way, it certainly will be dismal for the onlooker. The fan in the grandstand will get no thrill out of watching the officials go into a huddle, do a little addition and then have the announcer explain that one eleven beat the other because it had gained two more first downs (perhaps on penalties) than its rival made.

The kick, forward pass or whatever play is employed to score a point after a touchdown has at least the merit of affording a spectacle for the crowd.

CONDUCTING a building devoted to major sports in a big city is just one thing after another, to the property boys who are accountable for shifting the scenery. That same night they had to melt the ice and prepare the terraza floor for the boxing show of Friday night.

After that it was necessary to freeze the arena all over again for the hockey show of tonight. Immediately after tonight's performance the ice will be melted again, after which trucks will begin hauling in a sufficient

Landis Having Bad Season When Baseball Needs Real Pinch-Hitter the Worst Way

By J. Roy Stockton.

Kenesaw Mountain Landis, high commissioner of baseball, no longer rules with an iron hand, and the refusal of the major leagues to accept him as arbiter in the controversy with the minors over the draft was tantamount to a polite but firm repudiation of his one-man domination of decisions, according to numerous close followers of baseball who attended the recent convention in New York.

"Baseball needs a czar now more than it ever needed it before," one veteran follower of the game said after the meeting. "Five minor leagues virtually are facing ruin as a result of the majors' refusal to do business with them and the majors will suffer also because the five leagues are eliminated as sources from which to draw players. Both sides in the controversy will suffer as a result of the impasse and if Landis had the supreme power that he exercised five years ago he would force peace on the majors and minors. He was placed in power to prevent discord and decide all troublesome questions, but here baseball is in a chaotic condition and apparently, because the majors so wish it, he is standing aside and permitting the big and little leagues to fight it out to what may be a disastrous finish for both sides."

The Answer Is "No."

There really was slight difference between the terms the minors proposed and the ones the majors were willing to accept. The small leagues wanted to keep players for at least four years and in cases where a young player might spend most of the four years in classes of low classification, the Class AA leagues wanted to retain his services for three years before the draft could take him away. The majors insisted that all players be subject to the draft after four years of minor league service, regardless of the classification of the leagues in which they served.

As has been told, when all efforts to reach a compromise failed, the minors agreed to put the entire question up to Landis and abide by whatever decision he might make. One explanation of the majors' refusal of this proposition is that the clubs with minor league holdings feared that in formulating rules to govern relations between major and minor leagues, the commissioner might insert a clause that would nullify the value of their "chain stores" which had built up through long work and the investment of much money. If they had agreed to abide by any terms the commissioner deemed fair, they feared their agreement might tend to increase the commissioner's powers and there has been agitation for legislation to

GREENLEAF IS DEFEATED IN POCKET TOURNEY

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—Playing the best billiards of his 15 years of colorful experience at the green-clothed table, Frank Taberski of Schenectady, tonight turned the tables on Ralph Greenleaf in the world's pocket billiard championship tournament, defeating the defending titleholder 125 to 89 in 16 innings of brilliant playing.

In last year's tournament Greenlef ran out in two innings without permitting the Schenectady veteran to score, but tonight Taberski was not to be denied. He started off with a run of 11 in the first inning and from then on until the end of the grim battle held the upper hand.

The unexpected downfall of Greenleaf, his first of the tournament, left Erwin Rudolph of Chicago in undisputed possession of first place with three successive victories. Taberski's record now stands at two triumphs and as many defeats.

WEBSTER GRADS BEAT KIRKWOOD IN CHARITY GAME

The Webster Alumni football team defeated the Kirkwood Alumni, 7 to 6, yesterday afternoon at Kirkwood in a charity game as part of the Lindbergh Highway dedication program.

Passes were responsible for both touchdowns, either directly or indirectly. In the third quarter, Miller put Webster in scoring position with a 15-yard pass to Guth, which put the ball on the Kirkwood 15-yard line. Miller ran around right end and cut back for the touchdown. John Greene supplied the margin of victory with a kick for the extra point.

The Kirkwood graduates tried hard to tie the score in the final period. Starting from the Webster 31-yard line, Kirkwood passed its way to the touchdown. Klein flipped one to Thompson for 19 yards. After two line bucks, Kinyon passed seven yards to Klein for the score. Kinyon failed to add the extra point.

ROCKNE ON RADIO PREDICTED STECKER WOULD WIN FOR ARMY

THOSE who listened to Knute Rockne, Notre Dame's football coach, over the radio broadcast yesterday afternoon between halves of the Army-Navy game, were given an example of Rockne's sagacity. The Rambler coach stated that the Army second-string backs were performing in better style than the regulars, and that if Army won the game, Ray Stecker would be the man to do it. Stecker fulfilled Rockne's prophecy by running 57 yards through the Navy team for the winning touchdown in the fourth quarter.

Flat River Beats Principia, 38-16

The Flat River Junior College of Flat River, Mo., defeated Principia Junoir College, 38 to 16, in a Missouri State Junior College conference basketball game last night at Howard Gymnasium, before about 800 spectators.

Fred Renfrow, a forward, and a player of unusual ability, starred for the visting quintet. He slipped around and through the opposition and scored 11 field goals, for 22 points. He was the outstanding player of the game.

Emmel, small and red headed, led the attack for Principia. He was able, however, to drop in only three field goals.

Flat River got away to an early lead, and at the half was ahead, 22—7.

CADETS OUTPLAY NAVY IN CHARITY GAME; MIDDIES' PASSING ATTACK FAILS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—One twisting, dazzling dash of 57- yards lifted Army to victory over Navy today in sweet charity's benevolent renewal of an ancient, fighting rivalry.

For three full periods the gold-crested Cadets from the bluffs of West Point, and the grim, battered Sailors from the shores of the Chesapeake locked in an even, desperate grapple, while 70,000 howling partisans, among them many of the nobility of the business, social and service worlds, yelled for the "break" that finally decided the struggle. Then in one perfect individual play, as if in answer to the prayers of the Army, Cadet Ray Stecker, 170 pounds of galloping power, tore the Navy apart and raced the 57 yards to the goal that gave Army a 6-to-0 triumph.

One Shot—the Battle's Won.

Stecker took the ball on his own 43-yard line and streaked behind massed interference at Lew Bryan and Wes Byng, Navy's right tackle and end. He lost his mates as he hit the scrimmage line but he never faltered.

Swinging wide, stiff-arming the inner line of the midshipmen's defensive, Stecker swung into the open. As he hit into Navy territory his knees chugged higher, he hugged the ball to his chest, and just galloped straight away down the far side line for the Sailor goal.

There wasn't any Army man in front to help him. The secondary swung on him as he crossed Navy's 30-yard line and he simply plowed through them. Oscar Hageberg, Middie fullback, lunged and missed on the 25-yard line. Dale Bauer, the quarterback, took his shot and failed as Stecker, head up and legs churning, swung over the 15-yard stripe. Lou Kirn, Navy's fine plunging back, could just tag him with an open hand as he hit the goal, 57 yards from his point of departure. Then he stumbled down, swamped under the avalanche of gold-striped maniacs who stormed out of the ruck to hug and pat their teammate, and the game, as far as scoring was concerned, was over.

That one play, perfect because of the strength and courage of the big halfback from Hazelton, Pa., gave Army a victory that should have been won in the very first quarter. Twice in that period, with Stecker, the all-round hero of the day, and Tom Kilday, of San Antonio, Tex. lugging the leather in short smashes that bit four to five yards at a time out of Navy's desperate line, drove down the field to the very mouth of the Middie goal. But each time, once after a thrust that carried 56 yards to Navy's 14-yard line, and again on a 21-yard drive to the Sailors' 12-yard stripe, Stecker tried to pass for touchdowns when Army couldn't seem to miss gaining through the line, and both times his tosses were incomplete over the goal for touchbacks.

The first time this happened, Navy's plight was aggravated by a bad pass from center that rolled within a yard of the goal before Byng drove into a pile of Army men and got it back. Big "Blimp" Bowstrom, Navy's captain and kicking tackle, got his kick away to Bowman, Cadet quarterback from Harriman, Tenn., on the Sailor 37-yard line.

Army pounded right back, completing a 16-yard pass from Stecker to Bowman. But the next time the Midshipmen took the ball their luck was better and Army's chance to pile up an early and decisive margin was lost.

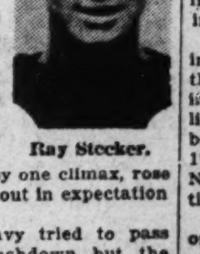
Four Consecutive Passes Fail, When Navy Recovers Fumble on Army's 25-Yard Line

There seemed no question that the better team won, although the Navy, fighting an inspired battle with an eye to upholding the principle that brought about the break in relations with the Cadets following the 1927 game, had one grand chance to tie and perhaps win the only game the two schools may play for some time.



Ray Stecker.

Bowstrom lifted a long punt to Bowman shortly after Stecker scored in the fourth quarter but the little Cadet back, attempting to play safe and protect the lead, fumbled as he signaled for a free catch. Byng recovered the ball for Navy on Army's 25-yard line and the big crowd, already thrilled by one climax, rose with one great shout in expectation of another.

Four times Navy tried to pass to the tying touchdown but the Cadet line, a magnificent forward wall, rushed every effort and the alert Army backs knocked down three tosses. The fourth pass, a beautiful play in which Byng, a left-handed heaver, swept into the backfield and shot underhand to the right while following a sweep around left end, threw wild to Hagberg, who was free almost at Army's goal.

Another Opportunity Lost.

Wild passing, this time by Johnny Gannon, Navy halfback, cost a possible score in the second quarter. Gannon pulled a surprise toss from his own 25-yard line but could not hit Hagberg, who was wide and clear in an open field. Again, in the third quarter, Tuttle smothered Stecker's fumble for Navy just back of midfield and penalties, coupled with the driving of Joe Tschirgi, carried ten yards into Army territory.

STATISTICS OF GAME

NEW YORK, Dec. 13.—Here is the statistical story of the Army-Navy game:

	Army.	Navy.
First downs	12	3
Yards gained by rushing	183	63
Forward passes	18	14
Forwards completed	7	3
Yards gained by forwards	56	23
Forwards intercepted by	0	1
Number of punts	11	[illegible]
Average distance of punts	31.9	38.1
Fumbles	[illegible]	[illegible]
Own fumbles recovered	[illegible]	[illegible]
Penalties	[illegible]	[illegible]
Yards lost by penalties	75	35

A fumble halted this temporary uprising.

Aside from these chances, Navy never threatened and could not make a first down until the third period. The Midshipmen got one in that quarter and picked up two in the final period.

The victory was Army's fourth in the last five games of a series that started in 1890 and but for intervention of charity and the unemployed would have been considered definitely ended in 1927. Army has won 14 games, Navy 12 and three have ended in ties.

As has been customary in the history of past Army-Navy clashes, the under-dog, the Midshipmen in this contest, battled way beyond the ability shown during the regular season. Navy, beaten by Notre Dame, Southern Methodist, Ohio State and Duke, fought Army [illegible] danger with Byng and Steffanides, the ends; Bowstrom, tackle and Tuttle, playing grand games in the forward wall. Army, beaten only by Notre Dame, and tied by Yale, showed a definite all-around superiority with Joe Price, giant tackle, the big factor in the line and Stecker, Kilday and Bowman the backfield heroes.

Although the color and drama of the occasion could not have been improved nor the gathering more cosmopolitan and vivid, the presence of the Salvation Army relieving the distress of the unemployed fell below expectations. Late estimates set the returns at $600,000.

ARKANSAS AGGIES HAND CONCORDIA SECOND SUCCESSIVE DEFEAT, 18-17

KRAUSE FAILS TO SCORE WITH 2 FREE THROWS IN LAST MINUTE

By Harold Tuthill.

Ed Krause missed a chance to be a hero in the eyes of the Concordia basketball fans last night when he failed to count either of two free throws in the last minute of play and the Arkansas Aggies defeated Concordia Seminary, 18 to 17. The game was played at the Washington University Field House before 1200 spectators.

The Preachers showed a vastly improved five over the one which lost to the Rolla Miners, but the veteran Arkansas Aggies refused to wilt before the whirlwind Concordia attack.

The Aggies were behind, 8 to 7, at the end of the half. Harold Keller tied the score with a free throw and put the visitors in the lead with a goal from scrimmage. Bill Hendrix increased the difference with a free throw, but Herb Etzler kept Concordia in the running with a field gold.

After Coburn Thornton sank a goal from the field, Bill Reuter crashed through with two rapid field goals and shoved the Preachers into a short-lived lead. Hosea McDaniel scored from the floor and Hendrix from the free throw line, to enable the Aggies to go into a 16 to 14 lead.

Gil Lehmann narrowed the gap by sinking a free throw. Keller ended the Aggies' scoring for the evening with a shot from under the basket. Emil Hartmann was fouled on two occasions, making both tries from the foul line good, and the score was 18 to 17.

Krause, with 50 seconds to go, was fouled by McDaniel and missed the free throw. When McDaniel, in his haste to recover the ball stepped over the line, Krause was awarded another try, which he also missed and the game ended shortly afterwards.

LANDIS HAS BAD YEAR WHEN BASEBALL NEEDS REAL PINCH HITTER

curb that power, rather than to augment it.

That the commissioner in a roundabout way agreed to cease frowning openly on the chain store system is considered a certainty in view of the fact that a hostile measure, introduced by the Cardinals, leaders in the "farm" idea, was withdrawn before it could be put to a vote at the joint meeting.

This proposed amendment to the major league agreement asked that the commissioner be ordered to interpret the rules and make decisions without discrimination against clubs with minor league connections, because of those connections.

The fact that the proposition was withdrawn and that the commissioner did not resent its introduction and force a showdown is convincing to most observers that an understanding was reached or that the owners of chain stores were informed indirectly or directly that they had nothing to fear and that the commissioner would string along with them and protect their investments.

Although it was announced officially that no decision was reached on the question of the so-called "lively ball," despite many hours of argument, grapevine or unofficial information was to the effect that the manufacturers were instructed to investigate and devise some means of taking the rabbit out of the ball, to curb the hitting of home runs.

Whether the cover will be thickened, the wool yarn wound more loosely or some other step be taken to make the ball less lively will be up to manufacturers, but several baseball men said they had been informed sub rosa by the owners that the ball would be deadened for the 1931 campaign.

WHO makes the most successful fighter, the guy with the bulging bean or the fellow with the vacant garret? In other words in a battle of Brain vs. Brawn, which would win?

Say, I can remember in the old days when I was first busting into the fight game there was a lot of hollabaloo about this Brain vs. Brawn stuff. The clever fellows were beginning to catch the public fancy. Jim Corbett started it with his clever footwork, ducking, parrying, etc., and so the fighters began to get cleverer and cleverer.

First they were clever with their hands, but gradually their cleverness went to their heads, until we find, in the last decade, brain triumphs over brawn for the heavyweight championship of the world.

I'm alluding to the triumph of Gene Tunney over the old Manassa Mauler that rainy night in Philadelphia going on five years ago. You might recall that was only a 10-round battle, and there was quite a squawk about such an important title as the heavyweight championship passing in such a short decision fight. But let me tell you something: That was no 10-round fight for Tunney. No siree! What happened in the ring that night was only the—whaddaya call it?—culmination, that's it—that was only the culmination of a three-year battle on Gene's part. Listen, and I'll explain it to you.

Tunney always was a studious kind of a guy. He never had much schooling, you know, so far as high schools and colleges were concerned, but he had a yen for studying. And when he came out of the Marine Corps with the A. E. F. championship, he had the bug in his head that he could become the heavyweight champion of the world. At that time Dempsey held the title, and how he held it!

So Gene the Gent—he was a cold, quiet sort of a fellow even at that time — made up his mind Dempsey was the man he'd have to lick for the title. And right away he began to make a study of his problem.

Studied Dempsey In Ring and in Film.

NOW, the only way to study Dempsey was to study his fights and Tunney decided to make the moving pictures of Dempsey's fights his text books. He studied the pictures of Dempsey's fight with Carpentier; he studied the pictures of all the other fights of Dempsey that were available. And then came that night in the Polo Grounds in 1923, when Dempsey fought Firpo, the Wild Bull of Pampas.

It was short and sweet, lasting one round and about a minute, but cripes, what a load of action was piled into it! And that was the fight that made Gene Tunney the heavyweight champion of the world three years later.

How? I'll tell you. Tunney saw the fight. He studied the pictures, and right then he decided here was the greatest textbook of all. This fight held the secret for him.

You know, Firpo came within an ace of winning that fight. Well, Tunney noticed that as Dempsey came rushing wildly at Firpo—his usual method of attack—the Wild Bull, who didn't know any more about boxing than your great-grandaunt, shoved out his gloved fists much the same as you would shove out your hands to ward off someone about to bump into you.

Now, it happens Dempsey's chin bumps into Firpo's right fist, and Jack almost goes down. In fact, he does sink to one knee, but he grabs Firpo and pulls himself up.

There was Tunney's tip-off. He haunts the theater that shows the pictures of the fight next day and for several days thereafter, and finally gets for himself a copy of the film. And does he study it! He studies the fight in slow motion, fast and at the regular speed of three minutes to the round. This last he does so he can study Dempsey's timing accurately. You know, in the regular picture houses they always run fight pictures at the rate of two minutes to the round, making the action appear almost twice as fast as it actually was in the fight.

He Made Himself, A Pair of Hands!

AND Gene settles down to his study. He memorizes every move of Dempsey's—how he delivers his blows, how he starts 'em, how he finishes 'em. Not only memorizes, but he analyzes 'em. He notices Jack has a murderous left hook to the heart, but he also notices, in the slows, that the old Manassa Mauler has to set himself before he delivers it. In other words, he sees Jack come moving it, weaving, then he sees him stop for the fraction of a second to get set, then bam! Over goes the left. Short it is, and potent. But, mind you, there's that fraction of a second stop.

Next, Tunney begins working out his part of the fight. He shadow-boxes as he watches Dempsey's flickering movements on the screen. He slips in with a right just at the instant that he knows there will be that Dempsey pause. Then he practices his moves and his punches on the big bag.

This goes on for three years. Tunney always fighting a mental picture of Dempsey, and by that time Gene knows a blamed sight more about Dempsey and his fighting than Jack knows himself. Aye, for three years Tunney is training for that one fight.

His hands are brittle, so what does he do? Goes off into the north woods and works as a lumberjack. Chopping trees and sawing wood. And all the time he has two little rubber balls that he carries in his pockets. These he is forever squeezing with his hands, even while he's walking, or resting otherwise. Result, the old hands change from weak and brittle to strong and tough.

Besides, Gene gives plenty of attention to the muscles of his midsection. He takes exercise morning, noon and night until he has the old breadbasket armored with a muscular wall that's just about bullet proof.

Few people know it, but I can tell you that Tunney, the night he beat Dempsey, could withstand a greater body punishment than any other fighter that ever lived.

And all the time the old bean is working. Remember, Tunney sees that Dempsey leads with that left hook. Now, it's against all rules and regulations in boxing for a fighter to lead with his right; that is, start his attack with a right-hand wallop, unless he's a southpaw fighter, and they don't count.

Well sir, Gene the gent makes up his mind he'll cross Mr. Dempsey by walking right up to him and smacking him slam-bang on the old potato with a right. Also, he figures he'll put the Manassa Mauler on the spot by taking the play away from him in the prebattle goat-getting duel that invariably precedes a big championship fight. But does Gene wait until he gets into the ring to do this? Not Gene.

Trip to the Scene In Flying Machine.

HE'S trained for this fight up in the Pocono Mountains at Stroudsburg. Remember, nearly five years ago airplane travel was still viewed with alarm. I mean it wasn't regarded as exactly the safest way of getting anywhere all in one piece.

So what does our nimble brained bucko do? Nothing at all but wait till the morning of the fight, and then startle the boxing world and flabbergast Dempsey by dropping down out of the clouds into Philadelphia just in time for the weighing in. He had flown down from Stroudsburg!

Everything planned, doped out to the last detail. And then, when he got Dempsey into the ring, it was the old stuff for Tunney to take blamed near half an hour bandaging his hands while Dempsey, already a nervous wreck, chafed and fretted in his corner.

Just how the thing worked out is boxing history now. When Tunney finally decided it was time to start he signified he was ready, and after the few routine preliminaries such as calling the men to the center of the ring, the referee instructing them in the rules, etc., the bell rings and they're on their way.

Here comes Dempsey out with that same old rush. Thrilling to the crowd, but just old stuff now to Gene. Tunney comes out to meet him, bluffing carelessness but really all a-set and watchful. He advances way out and meets Dempsey sooner than Jack expected.

Ha! There it is. Dempsey starts to set himself for the left hook, and POW! Tunney's right fist chugs against his chin and Jack rocks to his ankles, not only stunned but shocked. Such a thing never happened to him before. And while his wits are wool-gathering, the studious, alert Tunney begins peppering him with a straight left jab that seldom has been equaled in the ring by a heavyweight.

Oh, there's hell to pay, all right. Seems as if everything Dempsey tries is anticipated by Tunney, who keeps beating Jack to the punch and making him look like a sucker. 'Tain't long before Dempsey's left eye is about closed, and the left side of his face is bruised and swollen from the damaging right smashes that Tunney keeps raining on him.

Besides, the old Mauler's faculties seem to be in a fog. That first slug on the point of the chin right off the bat did that.

Chops 'Im to Pieces And Takes the Title.

I'M sitting there at the ringside, and I see the pale-faced Tunney with a set look on his face, going about his business like a mechanical man. That's what he is, this Tunney, a mechanical fighter. One that has perfected this move and that, just like a machine works. Impassive as a clam on the half shell, Gene the Gent is methodically cutting the poor old floundering Mauler to ribbons. Jack suddenly looks old.

But you've got to hand it to the Old Mauler. He ain't dead yet. There's still dynamite in old Iron Mike, as he calls his trusty left fist. It takes him four rounds to get Iron Mike on the job, and then only because Tunney is only human, after all. Gene slips a bit and boff! Dempsey catches him on the Adam's apple. Right in the neck he gets it.

Damn near gets him too. Gene topples over against the ropes, and he looks like a sucker for a right. But Dempsey's mind is too befogged to catch on to this quick enough, and by the time he does realize his big chance has come it's gone. Gene's bean is working all the time, and he goes on the defensive. He outgenerals Dempsey, and in the next round it's apparent to everyone that this is going to be just a monotonous slaughter of the great hero.

And that's just what it turns into. Fact is, Jack couldn't have gone another round after that tenth.

Blind, gory, tottering, the old heart is there.

"Lead me out to him," he says to Gene Normile, "I can't see. I wanna shake his hand!"

And that's how Brain triumphed over Brawn!

Durso to Meet Golden Gloves Champion Here

Joe Roman, winner of featherweight title honors in the Golden Gloves tourney at Chicago last winter and victor over Johnny Tunco, New York Golden Gloves champion, in a subsequent tourney at the Chicago Stadium, will meet Dan Durso of the Croatian A. C. in an intercity bout, it was announced last night by Matchmaker Willie Miller, as one of the special attractions featuring Thursday night's amateur boxing tourney at the South Broadway A. C.

Roman is a resident of Joliet, Ill., and boxes under the colors of the Steel Workers A. C. of that city. In capturing the Golden Glove honors, he defeated Eddie Dowling, Harry Alberts and Chee Salamone, crack Chicago ringmen. In subsequent matches the Joliet puncher kayoed Jimmy Brown of Kewanee, and outpointed Johnny Hughes, the Illinois State featherweight title holder. His record includes a point victory over Joe Espinosa, a boxer now starring in professional competition.

ROGER LORD'S GOLF HANDICAP DROPPED TO 2

By W. J. McGoogan.

Roger E. Lord, veteran golfer of the Algonquin Club, was the surprise of the past season in the St. Louis district, final averages released yesterday show. Lord, whose five best rounds average 73.8, will start next year with a handicap of 2. Jimmy Manion, Normandie star, is the only other player in the district with so low a handicap.

Lord played six tournament rounds, his scores being 80, 74, 71, 73, 75 and 76. His five best rounds totaled 369 strokes, an average of 73.8. The handicap is arrived at by substracting an arbitrary par figure of 71 from the average and taking 80 per cent of the difference.

Manion had rounds of 78, 72, 71, 72 and 74, for an average of 73.4.

The play covered the six medal scores made in the handicap tournaments held throughout the season. Due to the drouth and the resultant poor condition of the golf courses in the district the number of tournaments last summer was reduced from the usual eight to six.

In third place, behind Manion and Lord, came Mike Friedlein, young Forest Park star, who played in only three tournaments. His handicap is three.

Four men have a handicap of four. They are Chick Irwin, North Hills, Lester Slattery, Crystal Lake, Donald Anderson, Normandie, and Ben Goodwin, Algonquin.

Elliott Whitbread, district champion and member of Normandie, has a handicap of five, as have Chester O'Brien, Westborough, Sidney Salomon Jr., Westwood; Dr. I. R. Davis, Forest Park; Leonard Casale, Woodlawn; Ray Gates, Forest Park; Luther Schambach, Osage, and M. H. Jordan, Madison.

Harold McAninch, Crystal Lake, John Griffin, Forest Park, Eddie Donahue, Woodlawn, Earl Whateiy, North Hills, Dave Garroway, Algonquin and Sid Le Gear of Sunset Hill will have a handicap of six strokes each next season.

These handicaps are official and will be used at the start of the 1931 season.

A meeting of the District Association will be held in January at which time dates and clubs for various tournaments to be held next summer will be selected. This will be quite a task inasmuch as in addition to the handicap events, District tournament the Missouri amateur championship and women's Trans-Mississippi tournaments are to be held in St. Louis in 1931, the former at North Hills, the latter at the St. Louis Country Club.

And that routine continues all winter with perhaps an indoor rodeo or auto show thrown in by way of variety.

A "Rabbit a Mile."

THERE is a new game-hog in the field, slaughtering wild life indiscriminately. It is the concrete highway, with its unending procession of speeding automobiles streaming in every direction through the state day and night.

Bob Becker, a Chicago rod-and-gun authority, estimates that the slaughter of rabbits that amounts to one for each mile of concrete highways of the state, during the season. The creatures are blinded by the glare of the head lights and are seemingly paralyzed into inaction and run down.

In addition skunk, possum, quail and pheasant have been killed by speeding autos.

And, worse still, unsportsmanlike hunters, finding that quail and other game fowl do not take wing on the approach of an automobile or a wagon, frequently pot the birds by shots from the auto.

That's hardly justifiable except for obtaining a bird or two for actual and badly needed food.

The Wrestlers Come Back.

AFTER a long period in the umbrageous realms of suspension, the heavyweight wrestling game is again coming back to Chicago. For a time the commission thought the roly-poly boys were putting something over on the public. But tomorrow will see the game opening up again, with none other than Jimmy Londos and Mike Romano playing the feature roles.

Mike formerly performed with the Sandow troupe, which means Ed Lewis, Sonnenberg and that flight. His match with Londos might mean that the Curley and the Sandow divisions have decided to bury the hatchet and work together in the interest of the revised pastime known as wrestling.

The fact that Sonnenberg, who worked with the Lewis contingent, suffered a defeat recently may seem to indicate this, too. Joe Stecher is now training with this group and is mentioned here as a possible opponent for Sonnenberg or even Lewis.

The last match would be the crowning challenge to a public that has seen this pair in action against one another at intervals for the past 15 years or so.

Yes, We Have No Champion.

THE victory of Don George over Sonnenberg in no way clarifies that mysterious title situation. George now is claiming a title that only one or two states in the country recognize—Massachusetts and California. Jimmy Londos induced the National Boxing Association to name him champion some months ago; but since that time the N. B. A. has washed its hands of wrestling, while the newly formed wrestling body, through its president, has announced that it has not officially approved of anybody as its world's champion.

That paves the way for a world's championship claiming stakes, with anyone of several men likely to demand a hearing. The National Wrestling Association wants to conduct an elimination tourney to determine the champion. But several of the title prospects will not enter under any circumstances. They prefer to CLAIM the title and tour the country beating setups, rather than risk defeat and elimination from the big money.

The end is not in sight.

But in the meantime the big boys are throwing one another out of the ring with great abandon from Massachusetts to California, and the public likes it.

Indicating that, wise as he was, Barnum overlooked one good bet.

'VILLIANS' OF MAT WORLD ON WEDNESDAY CARD

By Damon Kerby.

Promoter Tom Packs has lined up a wrestling program to be held at the Coliseum Wednesday night that has drawn the undivided attention of St. Louis wrestling enthusiasts. A sell-out is predicted at the gate. Part of the proceeds of the show will be turned over to the Community Fund.

The main event between Jimmy Londos and Milo Steinborn does not rank high, as a wrestling attraction, in view of the fact that Steinborn is rated no more than a fourth-rater. However, he has a drawing power among the German element, and there also are those who will go to the bout to see him match his strength against Londos' tricks.

Several favorites, if only from a booing standpoint, will appear in the supporting matches, and these are the boys expected to pull the wrestling populace to the Coliseum.

Consider them, as they appear on the card. Dick Daviscourt, that old arch villain, meets Jack Washburn in the first preliminary. For a long time, in describing the pugnacious tactics of wrestlers, it was necessary only to compare them to Daviscourt. Dick was intensely unpopular, but the public paid to boo him. And Washburn, his opponent here, also has had the wrath of the wrestling fans centered upon him, with the customary increase at the gate as a result.

The second match on the program, between Rudy Dusek and George Zaharias, with a 30-minute time limit, by the way, brings together two other unpopular men who have benefited by that same unpopularity. The fans have paid money time and again with a hope of seeing Zaharias and Dusek get knocked over; they will doubtless pay this time to witness modified mayhem between the two. Both have recently experienced defeat here, Dusek being tossed a month or so ago by Jimmy Londos, while Zaharias, on the last Coliseum card, was thrown by Steinborn. Plenty of fireworks is expected by the fans when Zaharias and Dusek meet on the mat.

When Fred Grobmeier and Roy Steele, who meet in the semifinal, got together here last spring, it seemed that the rafters of the Coliseum would be shaken by the vigorous thumping each administered the other. They spent a part of the evening doing their stuff outside the ring. The match was called a draw, with doctors hurrying to and from the dressing room after the match.

Ticket prices range from $3.15 down to $1.10.

Drake's visit to the Polo Grounds in New York to meet Fordham will be the first time an Iowa team has ever appeared there, Solem said.

Drake meets Notre Dame at South Bend, Oct. 17, and Fordham at New York, Oct. 24.

Selections of players for two position his year was debated at length by the b os Angeles. The remainder of the All-A amed almost unanimously.

In line with a policy adopted at he last annual meeting, the board amed eleven players for the All-America team without selecting a econd and third eleven. Many ther players were considered, however, and in the cases of cener and one guard a deadlock was verted only after much discussion.

As in former years, the board was influenced neither by membership on a winning team nor membership on a loser. Notre Dame, universally admitted to be the leading team of the present day, succeeded in placing but two of its luminaries on the honor roll, while California, despite a poor year, fared as well as Northwestern, champion of the Western Conference or Alabama, champion of the South—the three teams each landing one berth.

Carideo Succeeds Himself.

Carideo, for the second successive year, assumes the quarterback position without one dissenting comment. No other position on this year's team was filled without some discussion.

Another player to repeat is Tichnor, the Harvard captain, but not without considerable debate.

Hein of Washington State, champion of the Pacific Coast, crowded Tichnor for the place and was only eliminated by the smallest of margins. It may be said that Harvard did not meet exceptionally strong teams but Washington State on the other hand, experienced much difficulty in winning several of its games, notably against the University of Washington. Tichnor admittedly has been the force holding the Harvard situation intact for the past two seasons. He weighs 195 pounds, is tall, rangy and one of the best on defense against passes. His inspirational value to his team reached its peak as captain of this year's squad.

Beckett and Linehan get the guard positions after a three-cornered fight with Metzger, the 155-pound flash in the Notre Dame line. Every big Irish gain in the Southern California game found Metzger leading the attack. A dozen tackles behind the line of scrimmage proved an average game's work for this diminutive star. Beckett of California and Linehan of Yale were finally selected be-

Hein, of Washington Stat Tackle to Make Room

Linehan, weighing 200 pounds, is always a hard driving player. Going down field under punts he has few equals and his charging against the defending line has never failed to confuse the opposition.

Other star guards are Baker of Southern California; Steele, Florida; Krajcovic, Maryland; Kabat, Wisconsin; Wisneiski, Fordham.

Seldom has this board moved a man out of his regular position but in order to keep Tichnor at center and at the same time make room for the finest linemen on the Pacific Coast, Hein of Washington State was moved into a tackle position. He has played over 50 regular scheduled games without once calling for time out or being removed from the game. Coast critics have said that Hein is one-half the strength of Washington State on the defense and his character and leadership have been the making of a championship team. Hein weighs 197 pounds and stands six feet, two inches. Despite this great size he runs 100 yards in 10.5 seconds. Intercepted passes are generally found in the hands of this agile giant and when eligible to receive passes Hein has seldom failed to connect.

The other tackle position goes to Sington of Alabama with little opposition. A year ago he crowded Sleight and Ackerman only to be eliminated by a narrow margin. This year found him playing way beyond his previous excellent form and he was pronounced by one critic as "the best tackle ever turned out in the South." Sington is versatile, with outstanding talent as a kicker. Few place kickers are his equal and on the kick-off he puts the ball across the end line seven times out of ten. Fast as a halfback, Sington carries 225 pounds into his vicious charging.

VILLIANS' OF MAT WORLD ON WEDNESDAY CARD

By Damon Kerby.

Promoter Tom Packs has lined a wrestling program to be held the Coliseum Wednesday night at has drawn the undivided at- ntion of St. Louis wrestling en- usiasts. A sell-out is predicted the gate. Part of the proceeds the show will be turned over to e Community Fund.

The main event between Jimmy ondos and Milo Steinborn does t rank high, as a wrestling at- action, in view of the fact that einborn is rated no more than a urth-rater. However, he has a awing power among the German ement, and there also are those o will go to the bout to see him atch his strength against Lon- s' tricks.

Several favorites, if only from a oing standpoint, will appear in e supporting matches, and these e the boys expected to pull the estling populace to the Coliseum. Consider them, as they appear the card. Dick Daviscourt, that arch villain, meets Jack Wash- rn in the first preliminary. For ong time, in describing the pug- cious tactics of wrestlers, it was cessary only to compare them to viscourt. Dick was intensely popular, but the public paid to him. And Washburn, his op- nent here, also has had the ath of the wrestling fans cen- ed upon him, with the custo- ry increase at the gate as a re- t.

The second match on the pro- am, between Rudy Dusek and orge Zaharias, with a 30-minute e limit, by the way, brings to- her two other unpopular men o have benefited by that same popularity. The fans have paid ney time and again with a hope seeing Zaharias and Dusek get ocked over; they will doubtless this time to witness modified yhem between the two. Both e recently experienced defeat e, Dusek being tossed a month so ago by Jimmy Londos, while harias, on the last Coliseum d, was thrown by Steinborn. nty of fireworks is expected the fans when Zaharias and sek meet on the mat.

When Fred Grobmeier and Roy ele, who meet in the semifinal, together here last spring, seemed that the rafters of Coliseum would be shaken the vigorous thumping each ad- istered the other. They spent art of the evening doing their f outside the ring. The match called a draw, with doctors rying to and from the dressing m after the match.

Ticket prices range from $3.15 n to $1.10.

Knute Rockne, Glenn S. Warner, Tad Jones and W. A. Alexander.

(Copyright, 1930.)

Selections of players for two positions on the All-America eleven this year was debated at length by the board in executive session at Los Angeles. The remainder of the All-America team for 1930 was named almost unanimously.

In line with a policy adopted at the last annual meeting, the board named eleven players for the All-America team without selecting a second and third eleven. Many other players were considered, however, and in the cases of center and one guard a deadlock was averted only after much discussion.

As in former years, the board was influenced neither by membership on a winning team nor membership on a loser. Notre Dame, universally admitted to be the leading team of the present day, succeeded in placing but two of its luminaries on the honor roll, while California, despite a poor year, fared as well as Northwestern, champion of the Western Conference or Alabama, champion of the South—the three teams each landing one berth.

Carideo Succeeds Himself.

Carideo, for the second successive year, assumes the quarterback position without one dissenting comment. No other position on this year's team was filled without some discussion.

Another player to repeat is Tichnor, the Harvard captain, but not without considerable debate.

Hein of Washington State, champion of the Pacific Coast, crowded Tichnor for the place and was only eliminated by the smallest of margins. It may be said that Harvard did not meet exceptionally strong teams but Washington State on the other hand, experienced much difficulty in winning several of its games, notably against the University of Washington. Tichnor admittedly has been the force holding the Harvard situation intact for the past two seasons. He weighs 195 pounds, is tall, rangy and one of the best on defense against passes. His inspirational value to his team reached its peak as captain of this year's squad.

Fesler, Ohio State, Only Player Not Seen in Action

NO single All-America selector could—and no group or committee of selectors did—cover the territory and witness as many football teams in action during 1930 as the men on the All-America Board. Tad Jones made an early season tour of football camps in the Mid West, and later came to Los Angeles for the annual meeting of the board. Coach Alexander flew by airplane from Atlanta to attend the coast meeting.

The following teams were seen by one or more members of the board: Maine, Maryland, Georgia, Brown, Army, Dartmouth, Alfred, Princeton, Harvard, Yale, South Carolina, Carnegie Tech, Auburn, Tulane, North Carolina, Vanderbilt, Pennsylvania, Florida, Santa Clara, Minnesota, Oregon State, Oregon, Southern California, California at Los Angeles, Washington, California Tech, California, Southern Methodist, Navy, Pittsburg, Indiana, Drake, Northwestern, Colgate, St. Mary's, Fordhom, Wisconsin, Chicago, Illinois, Detroit, Michigan, Notre Dame, Purdue.

With a single exception, every player on this year's team was seen in action by a member of this board, and in that case the qualifications and record of the player were so outstanding as to admit of no doubt. The player was Fesler of Ohio State.

Beckett weighs over 200 pounds and an indication of his speed and body-handling is the fact that his reputation as a boxer is as excellent as his record on the gridiron. Pacific Coast critics, without exception, named Beckett as the best guard of the year.

Hein, of Washington State, Moved to Tackle to Make Room for Harvard Ace

Linehan, weighing 200 pounds, is always a hard driving player. Going down field under punts he has few equals and his charging against the defending line has never failed to confuse the opposition.

Other star guards are Baker of Southern California; Steele, Florida; Krajcovic, Maryland; Kabat, Wisconsin; Wisneiski, Fordham.

Seldom has this board moved a man out of his regular position but in order to keep Tichnor at center and at the same time make room for the finest linemen on the Pacific Coast, Hein of Washington State was moved into a tackle position. He has played over 50 regular scheduled games without once calling for time out or being removed from the game. Coast critics have said that Hein is one-half the strength of Washington State on the defense and his character and leadership have been the making of a championship team. Hein weighs 197 pounds and stands six feet, two inches. Despite this great size he runs 100 yards in 10.5 seconds. Intercepted passes are generally found in the hands of this agile giant and when eligible to receive passes Hein has seldom failed to connect.

The other tackle position goes to Sington of Alabama with little opposition. A year ago he crowded Sleight and Ackerman only to be eliminated by a narrow margin. This year found him playing way beyond his previous excellent form and he was pronounced by one critic as "the best tackle ever turned out in the South." Sington is versatile, with outstanding talent as a kicker. Few place kickers are his equal and on the kick-off he puts the ball across the end line seven times out of ten. Fast as a halfback, Sington carries 225 pounds into his vicious charging.

Edwards of Washington State and Schwegler of Washington; Maree, Georgia Tech; Von Bibber, Purdue; Rhea, Nebraska; Price of the Army and Foley of Fordham make up a fine set of second flight tackles.

Fesler Regains Form.

Fesler of Ohio State, an All-America end in 1928, came back to his previous peak form this season This boy has been the backbone of his team and is undoubtedly the greatest natural defensive end in years. His versatility found him used at fullback on the offensive, where his passing and punting were the main threats to Ohio State's opponents.

Dalrymple of Tulane is the best end produced by the South in the past five years. He has no apparent weaknesses at the wing position. He is clean in his play, but the hardest hitting player in the Southern football league and has been compared by several old-time critics to Hinkey, peerless Yale end. Dalrymple blocks and tackles with the drive of a locomotive.

Baker of Northwestern was an outstanding end. Nemeck of N. Y. U.; Riblett, Pennsylvania; Arbelbide, Southern California, and Ebding of St. Mary's ranked high among the wingmen of the entire country.

Some men so completely eclipse all others in their position that any attempt to justify their selection is akin to painting the proverbial lily. Carideo needs no justification. His qualifications defy adequate description. "A team and a coach in himself," is the way many have pictured this Notre Dame field general with the cool and calculating mind, the amazing poise, the uncanny strategy and magnificent blocking.

Brill and Pinkert Named.

No kicker in this decade can compete favorably with Carideo for accuracy and position in punting and in converting goals after touchdown. But, above all, the intellect of Carideo stands out.

Duffield, Southern California; Dodd, Tennessee, and Morton, Dartmouth, are good quarterbacks, but not in a class with Carideo.

Brill and Pinckert go in at halfback. The brawny lad in the Notre Dame backfield has seldom failed to stop the attack in its tracks. It is quite generally conceded that Brill is the greatest defensive back of 1930. He not only stopped the enemy's onslaught but invariably demoralized the onrushing attack by his power and size and catapulting tactics behind the defending line.

Pinckert would make a great running mate for Brill. He is at good passer and pass receiver. Unusually fast for his 195 pounds. Pinckert would make a great ball carrier under another system. In spite of injuries, his work against Notre Dame impressed the critics and his average performance for the season stamps the Southern California lad as one of the best. Few blocking wing-backs class with Pinckert.

Viviano of Cornell was one of the fine backs of the year. Moffatt, Stanford; Suther, Alabama; Murray, Duke and Wheeler, Haskell Indians, are the other backs who stood out.

Savoldi Out of Picture.

With Savoldi removed from consideration, Russell of Northwestern had no serious competition at the fullback berth. He was considered the best plunger of the year by many observers. He made the offensive "click" and when Northwestern lost Rentner, a great passer, Russell carried the Hanley machine to the end of a perfect winning schedule with one exception—Notre Dame. Russell was a bulwark against Notre Dame, however, where his blocking and powerful legs stood between the Irish and victory until the last few minutes of play.

Other unusually fine fullbacks were Kitzmiller, Oregon; Macaluso, Colgate, and Roberts, Georgia.

Certificates authorized by the board will be distributed at an early date to the 11 players selected and cards of merit will be awarded to several hundred others, whose names appear elsewhere in these pages. A bronze reproduction of the official All-America certificates was authorized this season and will eventually be available to all colleges having placed players on the All-America teams selected from 1924 to date. A gold football mounted on a red, white and blue shield, is also awarded to the eleven honor players. This trophy in the form of a watch-chain emblem is considered the highest insignia of All-America achievement.

CONWAY, Ark., Dec. 13.—Lawrence Harris of Rogers, 210-pound tackle, has been chosen captain of the 1931 football team of Hendrix-Henderson College here. Werner Trieschman of Little Rock, another lineman, was chosen sub-captain. Both will be seniors next year.

CARDINALS SIGN SISLER TO PLAY AT ROCHESTER

George Sisler, who in 1922, as a member of the Browns, was voted the most valuable player to his team in the American League, is now a member of the Cardinal organization, having accepted terms with the Rochester (International League) club for 1931. The announcement was made by Clarence Lloyd, secretary of the Cardinals, following receipt of a telegram from Warren Giles, president of the Redwings.

Sisler recently was given permission by the Boston Braves, of which he has been a member for the past few years, to make a deal for himself.

With the Redwings, Sisler will replace Jimmy "Rip" Collins, who will be a member of the Cardinals. According to reports from the East, St. Louis fans will be greatly reminded of Sisler, when they see Collins in action with the Cardinals.

Sisler, who started his major league career in 1915, coming from the University of Michigan, enjoyed his greatest season in 1922, when he batted to an average of .420. He was out of the game for the entire campaign of 1923 because of sinus trouble, but came back as manager of the team in 1924. He remained at the helm until after the 1926 season, when he was replaced by Dan Howley. Sisler succeeded Lee Fohl as the Browns' manager.

The former Brownie star's main difficulty last season was with his legs. He slowed down badly, although he hit .308. His fielding, however, was not as good as in previous campaigns.

WASHINGTON U. AND GEORGE WASHINGTON MAY PLAY NEXT YEAR

Washington University is negotiating for a football game with the George Washington University to be played at Washington, D. C., Nov. 2, 1931, it was learned yesterday afternoon. It is certain that some Washington team should win the game.

GILLESPIE DEFEATS EDWARDSVILLE, 20-14

Gillespie, Ill., High School's basketball team defeated Edwardsville at Edwardsville last night 20 to 14 in a nonconference game.

Edwardsville took an early lead and led until two minutes before the close of the third quarter, when Gillespie tied the score. Two long shots, one by Laughlin and one by Rodemacher, pulled Gillespie up on even terms. Edwardsville regained the lead a moment after when Fahrig shot a field goal, but Fulton's goal tied the score again and after that Edwardsville was able to score only one more point, while Gillespie piled up its lead.

RECORDS GIVE ALABAMA EDGE ON WASHINGTON STATE ELEVEN

By James M. Gould.

With the battle between Alabama, champions of the South, and Washington State, Pacific Coast titleholders, scheduled for New Year's day in the Rose Bowl at Pasadena, Cal., this year's football season will officially end next year.

Neither of the contending teams has been defeated nor tied. Washington's closest game was that with Southern California early in October when State defeated the Trojans, 7-6. Vanderbilt played the best game against Alabama, losing only 12-7.

There is hardly a line offering comparison between the two elevens. Every one of Alabama's games has been played in the South, while Washington State's only trip away from the coast was for a game with Villanova, which the Westerners won, 13-0, the score not really indicating the difference in the power of the two teams, as Villanova never was able to enter Washington territory all afternoon.

Scores Favor Alabama.

According to comparative scores, advantages in offense and defense are with Alabama. The Southerners have scored 247 points and have permitted opponents only 13 in nine games. In the same number of contests, Washington has scored 218 points and has allowed 32 to the opposition. State escaped defeat in its game with the University of Washington by the small margin of a field goal. On the whole, the Alabama schedule rates more difficult that that played by the Far Westerners. For, Alabama played such teams as Tennessee, Vanderbilt, Florida, Louisiana State and Georgia—all powerful combinations.

The trip West will be the third for Alabama as contenders in a Rose Bowl game. They first went to the coast to play Jan. 1, 1926. Their opponents were the University of Washington players and Alabama, after a thrilling battle, won out, 20—19. They went back the following year to meet Stanford and gained a 7-7 tie with a fine Stanford eleven.

Alabama is a likely favorite for this coming game. Every regular on Coach Wallace Wade's Southern team is a senior with the exception of one.

This coast game brings to an end Coach Wade's service at Alabama. He has been in charge for eight years. Next year he is to coach Duke University.

In their first test of the season against an out-of-town club, the Tablers today face in the Jugo-Slavs a team which has been the sensation of the Chicago season. They start soccer early in the fall in Chicago and in three months of competition the Jugo-Slavs have lost only two games.

Their name is a misnomer. Instead of being Slavs they are almost entirely Scotchmen. The Jugo-Slav organization in Chicago wants to build up a soccer team of its own people, but has not enough good players to observe the nationality restriction. As good Slav players are developed, the Scotchmen will be supplanted. There will be only two Jugo-Slavs in the starting lineup.

Today's game at Sportsman's Park, is a second-round match in the Triner Cup series, involving representative clubs of Chicago, St. Louis, Detroit and Cleveland. The Hellrungs of St. Louis are playing the Bricklayers at Chicago this afternoon. Joseph Triner of Chicago has donated the cup which will go to the winning team.

Imrie Is a Real Star.

With an unusually clever and efficient center forward in Davie Imrie of Scotland and Detroit, distributing the play, the Chicagoans are considered one of the best goal-getting teams in the West. Imrie has been called the best center forward Chicago has had in 20 years. At center halfback is another Scot, Tommy Littleford, formerly of the Bricklayers.

In goal is Dr. Alejuvich, a physician, and at left halfback Frank Tomich. They are the only Slavs in the lineup. The halfback is a "foine upstanding lad" of 219 pounds. He will have little occasion to use his weight, however, for neither Cronin nor McHenry, who oppose him, resort to bumping to get possession of the ball. Now, if "Firpo" Tomich were playing right halfback he would have to give and take a few jolts from Buddy Brengle, who somehow can't help running into people.

So far as the Tablers are concerned, they have only to play up to their game of last Sunday to win. Even granting that the Slavs are one of Chicago's best in years, the Tablers can win if they play their game.

Muny All-Star Teams Will Be Selected Today

The task of picking the two all-star teams of Municipal Soccer League players who will participate in the benefit program of Thursday night, has advanced to the point where the teams may be roughly outlined. With the approval of the Municipal Soccer League Executive Committee, the question of selection has been placed in the hands of a committee made up of Bill Brady, John Cradock, Joe McLaughlin and Dent McSkimming. The game, at Walsh Memorial Stadium, under the electric lights, will be part of a double-header. Players of the professional league will meet in the other game.

One of the Muny teams will be selected from clubs playing in South St. Louis and the other from teams of North St. Louis. The following players have been tentatively selected:

South St. Louis: Bartnett, goal; Heidell, Thoene, Branconier, fullbacks; Gagel, Heidenry, J. Diaz, Ulmer, C. Corbett, Thro, Gallagher, halfbacks; Red Diaz, Kane, Berger, Palosha, Schutte, Gasiner, Badiola, J. Schmitt, O'Mara, Luckett, forwards.

North St. Louis: M. Delaney, Walsh, Klass, goal tenders; Anderson, Gamewell, Keating, M. Conners, fullbacks; Ahearn, Heterman, Hartigan, McGinn, B. Mercurio, Dowling, Schafer, Byrnes, halfbacks; Crowe, O'Connell, Barnes, Fitzgerald, Zimmerman, B. Conners, P. Reidy, Kramer, Sullivan, Murphy, McDonnell, forwards.

From this extensive group two teams of 15 players each will be named today.

THE ART OF SOCCER FOOTBALL NO. 8

Wing Forward Is Expected to Score Goals in Modern Football, Wilson Says

Even the Conservative Scottish Teams Are Asking the "Winger" to Cut In to Center.

By Andy Wilson,
Of Chelsea and Scotland.
No. 8.

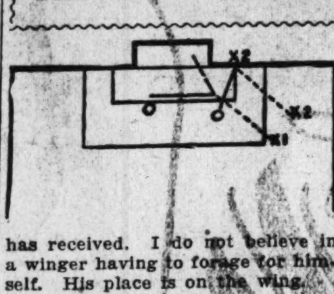
One of the strangest statements I have ever heard made about football is that playing on the wing is easy. There is not an easy position in a football team, and the wings are just as difficult as any other position—difficult so far as getting the most out of them.

The only thing that can be said for the winger, so far as ease is concerned, is that he needs only to worry about attack. This is another position that has radically changed since the alteration in the offside law. In the old days the winger was not expected to be a goal-getter in the direct sense. His main job was to get the ball into the middle. Today he can get goals, and is, in fact, a very useful member of the attack in that direction.

There are three methods of attack for the winger, and I propose to deal with those before going into detailed technique, such as taking corner kicks, positional play and centering.

The whole of a winger's play depends upon how he gets the ball. Let there be no doubt about this point. A winger plays well only when he receives the ball properly. When you hear it said that a winger has failed, it is well to study what sort of passes he has received. I do not believe in a winger having to forage for himself. His place is on the wing.

THE WINGER ATTACKS



Old-Fashioned Way.

The first method of attack is carrying the ball down the wing and centering. Frankly, this is the old-fashioned idea of wing play, and it is only done when there is no opportunity of using one of the two alternatives which I shall describe. If, however, you cannot cut inwards with the ball, then it is wise to carry the ball as far down the wing as possible before centering. The nearer you can get to the goal-line before parting with the ball, the less likelihood there is of your colleagues being offside.

But the winger should very rarely dribble. The moment he appears to be crowded, he should part with the ball. He has so many opportunities to pass, either to the middle with a center, to his inside man, or back to the wing half, that dribbling is not only dangerous but bad football. By parting with the ball, he gives his colleague a chance to pass it back after drawing the opposition.

Under the Old Off-Side Rule, Outside Man Was Virtually Forbidden to Try a Shot.

This, as I say, however, is nearly out of date. Today, with so much attention being given to holding the ball and drawing the opposition before passing, a winger gets far more clear runs than he did. Wingers get goals these days, and they get them by cutting inside very quickly. The pass inside the fullback, which I shall describe when talking about inside forward play, usually leaves the winger with a clear run or opposed by one defender. In any case, if the winger gets a ball, and there is not an opponent within 10 or 15 yards, he must these days turn toward the middle.

Two Ways of Attack.

Here we get the two alternative forms of attack. If a winger can get the ball to the penalty area, he may score direct, or he may give a cross-pass to his center forward, or inside forward, for that player to shoot. But if, after cutting inside, he is still wide of the penalty area, then I advise him to carry the ball toward the goal line, and give a back pass to his inside forward, who will run on to the ball and shoot.

I want you to study the back-pass with great care. I have no hesitation in saying that this is the most devastating move in football. Properly done, it means a goal every time.

Study my diagram. XI is when the winger has taken the ball near to penalty area. The dotted line shows his progress afterwards. Where the dotted line finishes, and a black line is shown, you see where he sends the ball. He shoots or passes. He is, of course, guided by the opening. If he is covered, then he passes. He also passes if the angle of shooting is too narrow, as it might well be if the goalkeeper has done his job properly.

The second point is shown in X2. You will see from where the winger has taken the ball to the goal-line (by the dotted line). Then the black line shows the back-pass to the oncoming inside forward. I do not need to tell you that an inside forward has every chance to put the ball just where he pleases.

Take care, however, to push the ball back on the ground. A bouncing pass is useless, the shooter will probably send the ball high over the bar. Use the inside of the foot, and push the ball back.

These two moves are the most common in wing football, but it is possible in the case of X2 that, when the winger gets the ball to the line, his inside man is not in a position to run on to the ball. The back pass would, therefore, be useless. You have then to center. The danger is that you will middle the ball, and find the goalkeeper saving it.

How Jackson Scores.

Such positions can, however, be made very profitable. If you have an understanding with your fellow winger, you can either lob the ball over to him, out of the goalkeeper's reach, or you can push the ball back, across the goalmouth, but too far back for the goalkeeper to reach it, so that your fellow winger can run on to the ball, and shoot. This is a method perfected by Alex Jackson and Billy Smith, when these two played together in the Huddersfield team. It is advanced football, and needs perfect understanding. I shall deal with this under positional play, but it must be mentioned here.

The main thing I want to impress upon wingers is that they must take every available chance to turn inside with the ball. The days of perfect centering are passing very quickly. In Scotland centering is going out very fast. The short, sharp pass from inside is now the main weapon of attack to the winger.

GIRLS' BASKETBALL TEAMS TO PLAY FOR LEAGUE LEADERSHIP

The third round games of the Superior Girls Basketball League will be played next Wednesday evening at the Armory, when the powerful Bly-Moss cagers and the Aquinas Club clash in the feature game, to decide the league leadership.

Both quints are in tip-top shape for this contest and both coaches are prepared to start their strongest lineup.

Last week's charity contests resulted in victories for both and the result is a deadlock for first place.

The early game will show two East Side teams, the Libersteins and the Continentals, in a game for third place.

LEAD AT STAKE IN FAIRGROUNDS SOCCER FEATURE

The tie for the leadership of Group 2 at Fairground Park should be broken this afternoon when the Andersons meet the St. Matthews in the second game of the group double-header. There are two other outstanding games on the Municipal Soccer League schedule for this afternoon, one at Sherman Park where the Cooks meet the Irish Hurlers, and the other at Carondelet Park where the Spanish club resumes its war with the Schenbergs.

Of the three, the Anderson-St. Matthew game is likely to produce the most interesting football. In their last meeting, the young Matthew club knocked over the veterans by a 1-0 score, Bart Conners getting the only tally of the game. That is the only defeat the Anderson's have suffered this season. In their last two games the Matthews, at the urging of some of their wild-eyed rooters, have been forsaking the ball to play the man and the teamwork which made them so effective earlier in the season has suffered. If the youngsters listen to the call of the wild they will go the way of a lot of promising amateur players but if they continue to play the ball they will likely win the Municipal championship. Harry Ratican says they are the best young soccer team he has seen in many years.

Although they are hopelessly out of the running for the Carondelet championship, the Spanish club will undoubtedly give the Schenbergs a lot to think about this afternoon. The last time they met there was a riot after the game but the Police Department has promised to furnish more than two officers today so there is not likely to be any more stabbing.

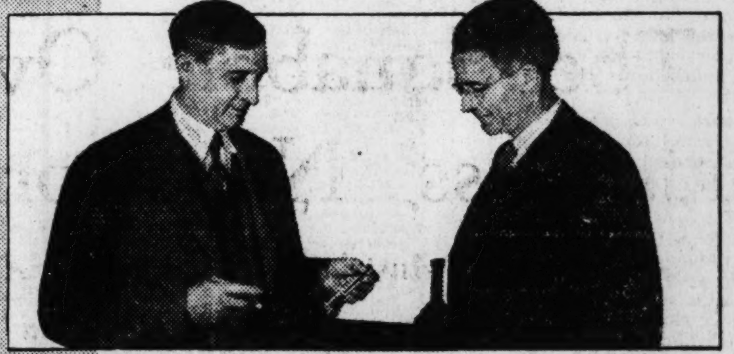
A Master Stroke!

AROMA and FRESHNESS sealed in Cigars by New "Cold-Treatment" Process!

Willis H. Carrier, President, Carrier Engineering Corp., makers of "Manufactured Weather"

Says Mr. Carrier—"We've manufactured perfect weather for many a building and product, but to devise an air-conditioning system that would 'Cold-Treat' cigars, and thus preserve their flavor and freshness, was one of our most interesting tasks.

"We are glad to have helped Dutch Masters in working out their pioneering new Cold-Treatment process, and congratulate them on giving smokers a cigar that is as fresh and full of flavor when it is smoked, as it was at the time it was made."



Mr. Carrier, President, and Mr. Stacey, Vice-President and Chief of Research, discussing new methods of air-conditioning, in the famous "Manufactured Weather" laboratories.

ANY MAN who has ever smoked an absolutely fresh-made cigar knows that the aroma of that cigar is as superior to an ordinary cigar, as fresh fruit is superior to dried fruit. It stands out in his mind as the greatest smoke-thrill of his life!

For years cigar manufacturers have sought some method that would preserve this "Peak of Perfection" in a cigar. And now Dutch Masters' revolutionary NEW "Cold-Treatment" process does it!

This pioneering process selects a Dutch Masters cigar just as it comes from the machine—just at that precise moment when the fine tobaccos are at their fresh Peak of Perfection . . .

And then, by this exclusive and secret process of "Cold-Treatment," seals that fresh-made aroma and flavor within the cigar itself. And it stays there—'til the moment when your lighted match releases it in mellow, fragrant puffs.

Enjoy for yourself the thrill of a cigar that is as fresh and full of aroma at the minute you light it, as it is at the minute it's made. Buy a Dutch Masters "Cold-Treated" cigar—to-day! Archduke Leopold of Austria.

The Squabble Over the Archduchess' Napoleonic Necklace

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

NEW YORK.

DOLLAR-CHASING America has recently had the opportunity of occupying a ringside seat at the quaint, old world spectacle of Austrian nobility squabbling over a $450,000 diamond necklace, and a New York court has had the privilege of acquitting the Archduke Leopold on a charge of conspiring against his venerable aunt, the Archduchess Maria Therese, in the sale of the piece of jewelry.

Perhaps strictly speaking the contending parties are not nobility any more. Leopold is the grand-nephew of the late Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria, but since the fall of the monarchy, perhaps he is only one of nature's noblemen. But to democratic America—especially certain wealthy ladies who appreciate European charm and royal lineage—he is still the Archduke Leopold Marie Alphonse Charles Antoine Beatrice Raephael Michel Joseph Pierre Ignace Hapsburg. The fact that the police arrested, finger printed, photographed and jailed him as Leopold Hapsburg means nothing.

As for the Archduchess, she is a bit old to abandon her title, even in deference to a republic. Furthermore, she seems hardly cut out to be a worthy commoner: she lacks the simple faith that is more than Norman blood. If she ever had such faith, it deserted her when she received only $7200 for the $450,000 necklace which she had sent to the United States to be sold. Her suspicions caused her to set in motion the process by which a scion of the house of Hapsburg was forced to stand trial before a jury of tradespeople and other workers.

The beginning of this story goes back 119 years to 1811, when Marie Louise, second wife of Napoleon Bonaparte, bore the great man a son, destined to die in early childhood. Napoleon was so delighted with the baby that he rewarded the mother with a splendid necklace of 47 diamonds. The stones, weighing 280 carats, had been gathered from the abandoned Golconda mines of India. They were set in 10 briolettes and nine pendants. And as the years passed, the necklace passed from hand to hand and neck to neck until it reached the Archduchess Maria Therese.

When she fell into straitened circumstances following the World War, she felt she must look about for a suitable purchaser for the necklace.

ABOUT this time, Charles F. Townsend was introduced to the Archduchess by her nephew, the Archduke Leopold, who—if such a thing were possible—was feeling the pinch of poverty slightly more than the old lady. Townsend, the Archduchess was told, had formerly been a member of the British secret service in India.

It was said that if anyone could sell her jewels he could. Maria Therese had his past investigated by the British Foreign Office, and seemed satisfied with the result. Townsend was entrusted with her mission and her jewels.

He met with no immediate successs. In the first place, the Archduchess wanted at least $100,000 for her necklace. It is worth about $450,000, historical value, and about $260,000 intrinsic value. Townsend sounded out the Khedive of Egypt, who had longings for pretty things. But that gentleman, although he liked the bauble, would have none of it for the price the Archduchess asked.

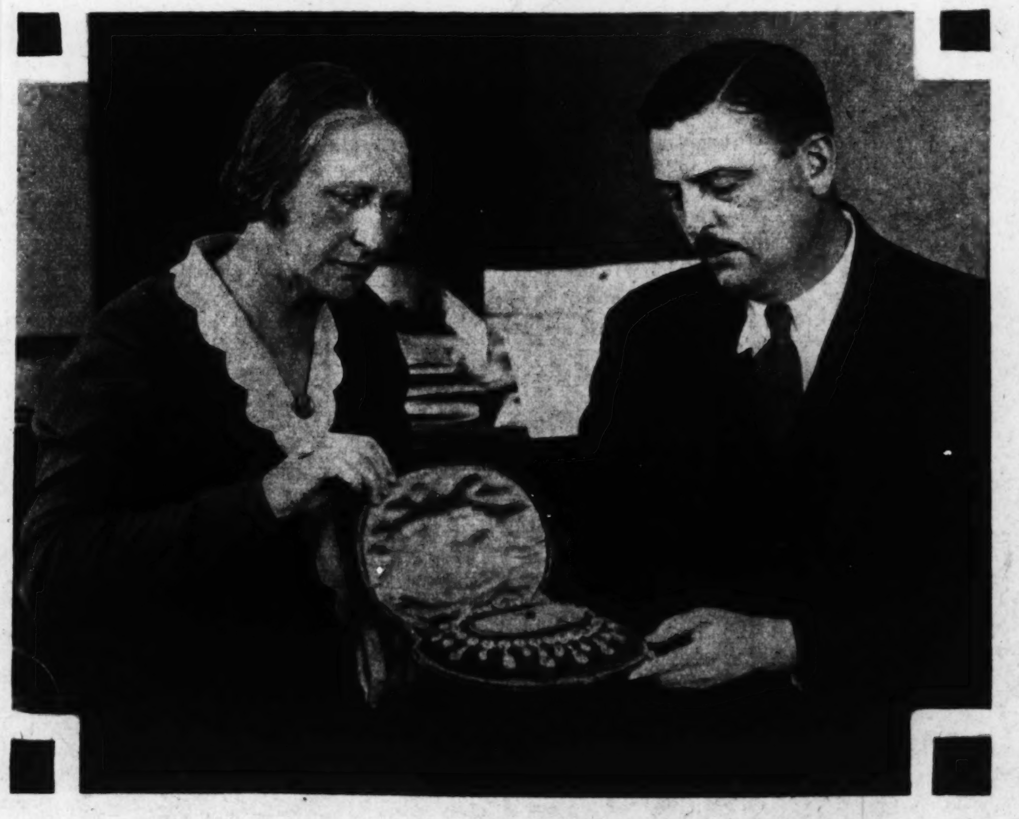
Then the Archduchess conceived the idea that some wealthy American might be willing to pay her price to gain the historic diamonds. She gave Townsend her power of attorney and sent him to America.

In the meantime, Leopold—debonair despite the bald spot on his head—had tried America. He found that by shuttling back and forth to this country he could make a living selling sausage, antiques, malt and hops, and working as a seaman, messenger and movie extra. So when Townsend arrived in New York he looked up his old friend, Leopold—not very prosperous looking, but still a jaunty person.

The business of selling the necklace began. Townsend found two purchasers. One was willing to buy the necklace for $90,000, and the other was ready to pay $95,000. In each case the sale was almost made, with Townsend's option to repurchase. But in each case Townsend was reminded by the Archduke that the high figure meant a long wait for funds and a deluge of promissory notes. And what his family needed was not paper promises, but cash.

So it was that on February 11, 1930, after the necklace had been in New York three months, a small group of persons, including Townsend, the Archduke, a jewelry broker named Mary Mott Smith, and a jeweler, D. M. Michel, gathered in the office of Arthur Garfield Hays, attorney, to arrange the sale.

Michel telephoned the United States Customs Office and asked if there was any objection to his separating the stones from the setting, since the necklace had been admitted duty free as an antique.



Baroness Anna Eisenmenger, with Assistant District Attorney Hastings and the famous necklace.

He was told there was none.

The jeweler was willing to pay $60,000 for the diamonds. Being a business man instead of a historian, he had little use for the ancient setting. The Archduke was to get that.

The sale was completed for $60,000. Of this sum $20,000 went to the Archduke for his "commission." Mary Mott Smith got $2500 for introducing Townsend to the jeweler. Eventually the Archduchess received $7200. Who got the other $30,300? The authorities wanted to ask Townsend and his wife about that, but they could not be found. It is said they went to Palm Beach, to Vancouver, British Columbia, and to India.

Some time before the sale of the jewels to Michel, Maria Therese grew suspicious of the lack of news from her salesman. So the Archduchess, who had regained some of her lost wealth, made over her power of attorney to her dear friend, Baroness Anna Eisenmenger of Vienna. The Baroness was sent to America to recover the jewels from Townsend, and to dispose of them in her own way.

The Baroness discovered that the necklace had been sold and that the Townsends were missing. Straightway she hastened to District Attorney T. C. T. Crain. The mystery of the Napoleonic necklace was known to the world on last March 1.

The first person subpenaed was the personable Archduke Leopold. He admitted readily that he had played a part in the disposition of the jewelry. He said he put his witnessing signature on the sale papers on his "own authority." He made a gentleman's agreement with the jeweler that he (the Archduke) should get the setting after the jewels were removed. And he accepted $20,000 of the proceeds—but had to return $2000 to Townsend, he later asserted.

"I don't see the necessity for all this excitement; my aunt will get her money," he said in an aggrieved tone. "Why should I not have been compensated? It was perfectly honorable, strictly a business transaction. When Mr. Michel told me was going to separate the stones from the setting, because he did not consider the setting worth more than $50, we made a gentleman's agreement by which he was to return the setting to me, so that I could send it back to the Archduchess, who prizes it."

The Archduke admitted, too, that he and the Archduchess did not get along.

"I don't like my aunt," he said. "I don't dislike her. It's just nothing. The difference between us is that she has money and I have none. I haven't seen the Archduchess since 1919, when she was walking through the streets with a bag of potatoes on her back. That was a bad year."

BUT Michel never did get the famous jewels separated from their historic setting, because the busy Baroness got an injunction restraining the jeweler from disposing of the necklace. The historic bit of jewelry has now been returned to the Archduchess, who is said to have reimbursed Michel to the extent of $50,000.

On April 2 the grand jury of New York County indicted the Archduke and Mr. and Mrs. Townsend. Grand larceny and other charges were made. On April 25 Archduke Leopold was arrested. Tears streamed down his thin face. He was finger printed and photographed by the police as a common criminal would be.

He was booked as Leopold Hapsburg, 33 years old; no nationality. He pleaded not guilty before Judge George L. Donnellan. Then he stood in silence, his leather coat hanging from his arm, while his lawyer, Ferdinand Pecora, talked for him. His case was set for trial. A $7500 bond was arranged quickly and the Archduke was free for the time being.

"My conscience is clear," he said again and again, pulling at his mustache.

Questioned about the Townsends, he could tell little about them, except that the "Princess"—Mrs. Townsend, according to one report, was an Italian noblewoman—had planned to write a book about his family and then changed her mind.

"She wanted to write scandal, and the Hapsburg are a respectable family," he said.

The trial was delayed and the Archduke fretted. His brother, Archduke Ranier, died and there was property for him to settle back home. A movement for the restoration of the monarchy was gaining strength. There was talk that his youthful cousin, Otto, might become King of Hungary after he reached his majority on last November 20.

LEOPOLD yearned to hurry back to Austria. The permit by which he was in the United States would expire August 23, anyway.

But the Archduchess refused to sign any statements exonerating her nephew. The Archduke had to cool his heels on the sidewalks of New York when summer came along.

Leopold decided at last to have his bail bond withdrawn and go to jail, hoping thus to hasten the date of his trial. He entered the Tombs on July 11. His going-to-jail suit was dark gray tweed. His necktie was blue. He looked rather festive than otherwise.

"Oh, I am reconciled to my situation," laughed the Archduke when reporters called to see him the next morning. "I had a good night and I enjoyed my breakfast of bread and butter and coffee." He said he might write a book some time on his experience in a cell, with a Negro holdup man on one side of him and a pickpocket on the other.

But if the Archduke was reconciled to his situation, there were certain of his friends who were not. Among these was the wealthy

LOS ANGELES, California.

WHEN Clara Bow recently fired her secretary-companion, Daisy Devoe, to the accompaniment of charges and counter-charges, the red-haired movie star found herself on the front page again, blinking in the spotlight of undesirable publicity. And again she asked plaintively, as she has many times before, "Why don't they let me alone?"

The poor little "It" girl thinks she is being picked on. It seems to her that she is "It," the butt, the victim, the holder of the sack, instead of having "It." She can't seem to keep out of the news. She considers herself the world's most unsuccessful headline dodger.

Grubbing along on some $200,000 a year, with two houses, a couple of automobiles, about 200 dresses and a fan mail of some 25,000 letters a month, she often dreams of getting away from it all, she says. She confided to a friend not long ago that she would like to hitch-hike across the country without being recognized as Clara Bow; would like to wander incognito in meadows, and, while lying lazily in the grass, anonymously watch fleecy clouds. "I envy the girls who can make one of those hitch-hiking trips without bursting into print," she sighed—but neglected to say whether she had ever heard of one who had tried it.

Miss Bow makes no public appearances any more. She attends no theaters or parties, her friends say. She rides to and from the studio in a closed car. She employs no press agent. But she keeps right on breaking into print.

"Every time I turn around I unwittingly get into trouble," she moans. "Why, if I go shopping I have to put a wig over my red hair and wear goggles. Or else I have to go to a store after closing hours and be let in and the doors locked; it not, a crowd gathers and stares.

Only once in recent months has she appeared undisguised on the street. That was in Long Beach, where Lyman Scott, 16 years old, was operating a confectionery stand. The youth wrote her that he had sunk all his money in the business, and asked her to visit his roadside stand and sell some of his goods for a little while when she came to Long Beach to take pictures. Clara accepted, and the lad saw to it that a crowd was on hand when she arrived. She sold the confections as fast as she could hand them out. "It was a lot of fun," the actress said afterward.

One of the maddening things about the publicity that comes to Clara Bow is that sometimes she is headlined when she hasn't done a thing. Just the other day newsboys were running along the streets in Los Angeles yelling: "Scarface Al Capone visits Clara Bow on the set! Read all about the 'It' girl and the Chicago gangster!"

The story began: "While the police of Los Angeles were busy denying reports that Al 'Scarface' Capone was anywhere within visiting distance of this city, the noted Chicago gang chief was at the Paramount Studios visiting Clara Bow and watching her film scenes in her latest picture. This somewhat startling and interesting information was confirmed today at Paramount. Almost everybody in the place knew Capone was there. He came in company with bodyguards and enjoyed the sociable atmosphere of studio life. . . . He displayed great interest in the vivacious acting of the titian-haired 'It' girl."

THE enterprising manager of a news photograph service telephoned the studio, "Get a picture of the two together."

Later editions of the paper retracted the story, saying the reporter had been misinformed. Paramount executives said the gang leader could not have obtained admission to the studio. Miss Bow said she had never heard of Capone.

Then there was the visit to Hollywood last March of Andrew J. (Bossy) Gillis, who has received a bit of publicity himself as the so-called bad boy Mayor of Newburyport, Massachusetts. He was quoted as saying to a reporter:

"Listen, fella, I'm gonna do this town right, see? Clara Bow, Aimee McPherson and Rheba Crawford are going to get a chance to meet me and shake the hand that used to crank gas station pumps before I 'arrived.'

"You take this Bow girl. She's got plenty on the ball. Marry her? Sure, if I had plenty of dough. What a team—Clara and Andrew Joseph, the 'It' girl and the 'It' man."

The film player's name in the headlines again. And the girl hadn't done a thing.

For a long time she kept clippings of newspaper yarns such as the Capone legend. She was going to make a book of them and call it, "Wild Stories I Have Met." But the clippings piled up so rapidly that keeping them was a nuisance and she gave up the idea.

Clara herself must admit, however, that there have been at times pretty good excuses for writing her up. Last summer, for instance, the operator of a gambling resort at Lake Tahoe tried to collect $13,900 from her as a gambling debt. The actress admitted she lost money at the place, which is in Nevada, but denied she rightfully owed the amount claimed. She said she, Rex Bell, a cowboy actor, and Miss Devoe had dinner one night with Will Rogers at a hotel at Lake Tahoe and that she afterwards played black jack in the gambling room of the hotel.

"They gave me 50-cent pieces to play with," she explained, "and I signed some checks in blank, telling the dealer to fill in the amount of the 50-cent pieces he had given me. There were four checks. It now seems they claim these 50-cent pieces represented what they call $100 chips and that they put in the checks to amount to that."

When the checks were presented to her bank, Miss Bow instructed her bank not to honor them.

Daisy Devoe, Clara Bow's erstwhile secretary and bosom friend, photographed with her attorney.

IT HAD been reported that the actress had been introduced at the gambling place by Will Rogers. The rope-twirling humorist denied this, although confirming the statement that the actress' party had dined with him and some had gambled a bit. "Introducing Clara Bow to anybody," he said, "is like introducing Hoover to the Senate. Clara wasn't gambling much while I was there. I saw her going around making a few bets, but she didn't appear to be betting much. I don't like this idea of my riding to fame on the skirts of Clara Bow."

Clara was aggrieved at the eruptions of type that followed her dismissal of her secretary, Miss Devoe. "Anybody else could fire a secretary and nothing be said about it," she complained. "When I fire mine the news is broadcast to the world."

Apparently she failed to take into account the indications that something out of the ordinary was behind the dismissal. Miss Devoe had been the screen star's friend and companion, as well as employe, for about three years. The actress had taken her out of the hair-dressing department of the Paramount studios and into her home. The blonde Daisy had become the red-haired Clara's inseparable companion; wherever Clara went, Daisy also went—or Clara didn't go. The breaking up of such a friendship, for which the only explanation given by the actress was that her reason was "a good one, but personal," was bound to provoke curiosity and comment.

The developments in the case have been such as to keep public interest stimulated. District Attorney Fitts of Los Angeles said Miss Devoe had confessed to the theft of money and property from her employer. Miss Devoe's attorney denied she had made a confession and the ex-secretary declared she would welcome a grand jury investigation. Miss Devoe filed suit against Miss Bow, Rex Bell, the District Attorney and three of his investigators for recovery of jewelry and other articles valued at $2200. A short time later Miss Devoe was indicted on charges of grand larceny from Miss Bow, the indictment alleging that she had issued unauthorized checks totaling $16,000. She gave $1000 bond and pleaded not guilty.

And all of this was duly told in the news.

IT DISTURBS Clara to have to pay such a price for fame—with collections so frequent. It seems unfair to her that she should have to deny, as she did last June, when visiting Dallas, Texas, that she was there to settle an alienation suit. She adds to the list of grievances: "Twice we have seen prowlers around my house and called the police. Out came reports of 'suspected kidnaping attempt.' I got down on my hands and knees in Yosemite to drink water from a stream and fell in. I scratched my head on a stone and the news was sent out that I had split my scalp. While flat on my back in a hospital following an operation for appendicitis someone sent out a dispatch that I had attempted suicide."

So it goes. And the world, Clara fears, thinks she is just a little jazz baby, petulant, spoiled, always on the go, sensation mad, a disturbing influence.

She insists she isn't that way at all. She says she reads and reads, and studies and works hard, and hardly goes any place. She makes the point that she has had to stick pretty closely to business to progress from $50 a week in 1922 to around $4000 now. And she confesses—this may be a shock to those who consider her the personification of feminine allurement—that she is anemic; takes iron for her blood and all that sort of thing.

Discovers a Germ-Killing Parasite, Too Small for a Microscope

Far-Reaching Results in the Fight on Death-Dealing Bacterial Diseases Expected From Recent Discoveries by Dr. Felix d'Herelle, Professor of Bacteriology at Yale.

By ARTHUR STRAWN

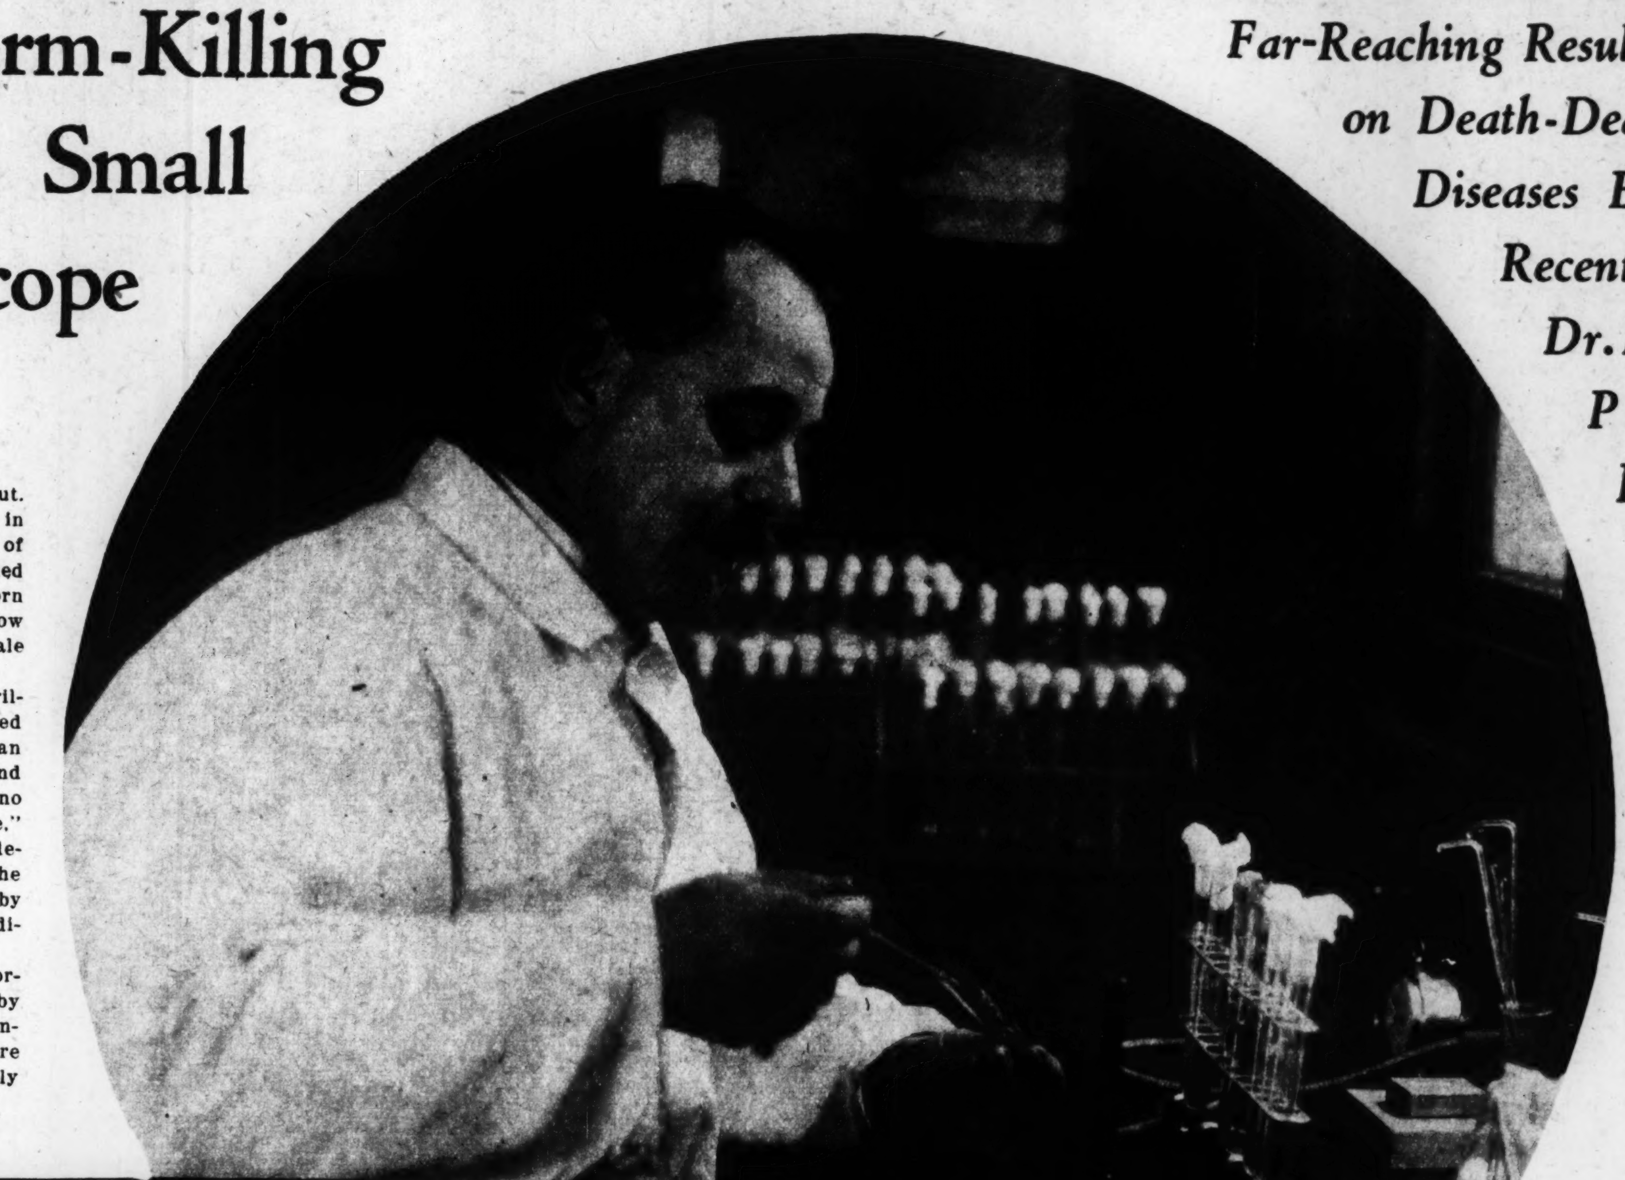
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

NEW HAVEN, Connecticut.

TO THAT valiant company of heroes in man's struggle against the forces of disease and death must now be added the name of Dr. Felix d'Herelle, born in Canada, educated in France and now Professor of Bacteriology at the Yale University School of Medicine.

For it is Dr. d'Herelle whose brilliant laboratory explorations have led to the discovery of the existence of an infinitely small parasite that feeds on deadly bacteria and destroys them. This parasite, which is so small that no microscope can reveal it, he named the "bacteriophage," i. e., devourer of bacteria. And in a recent report delivered before the New York Academy of Medicine he revealed the amazingly successful results obtained by using this germ eater in curing bacterial diseases ordinarily fatal.

In Brazil 10,000 cases of bacillary dysentery, which ordinarily has a high mortality rate, were treated by D'Herelle's method. That is, the patients were either injected with solutions containing bacteriophage or were given such solutions to drink. Of the 10,000 cases, only two died.



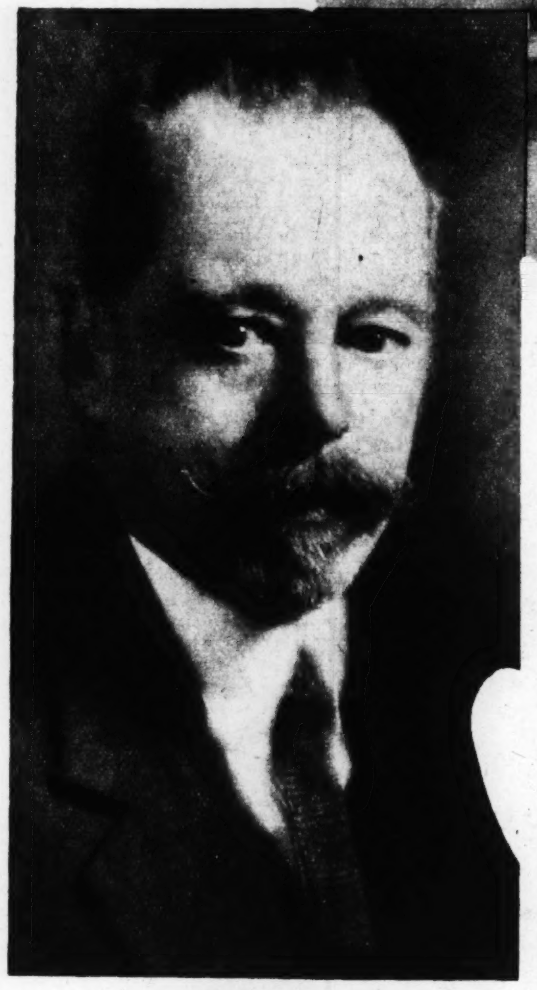
Dr. d'Herelle. in his laboratory.

In Senegal early this year Dr. Couvy had 26 patients suffering from pneumonia-septicemia who had not responded to the ordinary serum. They were in a moribund condition, in the very last stages of life, when they were injected with bacteriophage. Favorable reactions were immediately observed, and only nine of the 26 failed to recover.

Success in using the bacteriophage in fighting the deadly Asiatic cholera was even more strikingly demonstrated. The mortality rate for this disease is ordinarily between 57 and 85 per cent. Dr. Asheshov used the bacteriophage in treating 150 cholera cases in the hospital at Patna, India, and only four of the patients died.

In Egypt Dr. d'Herelle himself treated four cases of bubonic plague, regarded as almost certainly deadly, and all four patients recovered after being injected with bacteriophage solutions.

This is far from exhausting the list of cases in which bacteriophage has wrought cures. How widespread its effectiveness is in fighting disease is not yet ascertained, for the discovery of the germ eater is comparatively recent, its habits and nature are not yet completely and exactly understood, nor has there been time yet to test its powers over a wide range of diseases. But in a number of deadly disease in which it has been tested, notably bacillary dysentery, Asiatic cholera and bubonic plague, the bacteriophage has clearly established its value as a specific cure, and there is more than mere enthusiasm to justify Dr. d'Herelle's assertion that "the use of bacteriophage is the specific treatment par excellence and will attain wider and wider application."



Dr. Felix d'Herelle.

THE manner in which Dr. d'Herelle first came to suspect the existence of the germ eater, the way in which he finally tracked it down, captured it, so to speak, and then actually trained it to destroy particular disease germs, forms one of the most fascinating chapters in the great saga of modern science.

In 1908 D'Herelle was director of the Government Bacteriological Laboratory at Merida, Mexico. He was interested in finding some way of eliminating the locust pests that periodically afflicted the rural communities. He obtained some dead locusts, studied their intestines under the microscope and discovered that the insects' death had been due to a certain bacillus. Quite logically, he reasoned that if the bacillus caused a disease fatal to locusts, a good way to get rid of locusts would be to spread the bacillus. His first experiment in this direction was immediately successful. He cultivated some of the bacilli artificially, sprinkled them on grass which was fed to a number of healthy locusts, and a few days later the locusts were dead. This bacillus was found to be harmless to man or grazing cattle. In fact, in 1912 when Argentina was threatened with an exceptionally severe plague, the Government sent for D'Herelle, who was then in Paris. D'Herelle went to Argentina, prepared gallons of liquid containing the bacillus, loaded the containers on mules and went into the heart of the Province of Riorja, where the pests were thickest. He sprayed the liquid on every swarm he could find. The locusts then communicated the disease to others and in a few weeks the plague was eliminated.

Now this work with the locust, while highly interesting in itself, is significant to humans because it incidentally put D'Herelle on the trail of the bacteriophage. In the course of these experiments he had to cultivate the baccili artificially in the laboratory. For some reason that he could not understand he noticed that the artificially cultivated bacilli quickly lost their virulence. He also noticed that in many cases where he was raising colonies of the bacillus on gelatine, for some inexplicable reason there would be clear patches on the gelatine free of the germs.

Now D'Herelle was not the first man to discover the latter phenomenon. Many research workers had from time to time discovered that their cultures of germs had for some reason failed to develop, that occasionally gelatine that had been implanted with germs had actually cleared and become entirely sterile.

There was no apparent reason for the failure of the germs to develop, but the research workers usually assumed that they had made some technical error or been careless, and they let it go at that.

One scientist, however, named Twort, was interested enough in the phenomenon to make mention of it, although he didn't know it's cause or nature. However, as a result of his interest in that business of the mysteriously clearing germ cultures, science has rewarded him by naming the phenomenon the Twort-d'Herelle phenomenon.

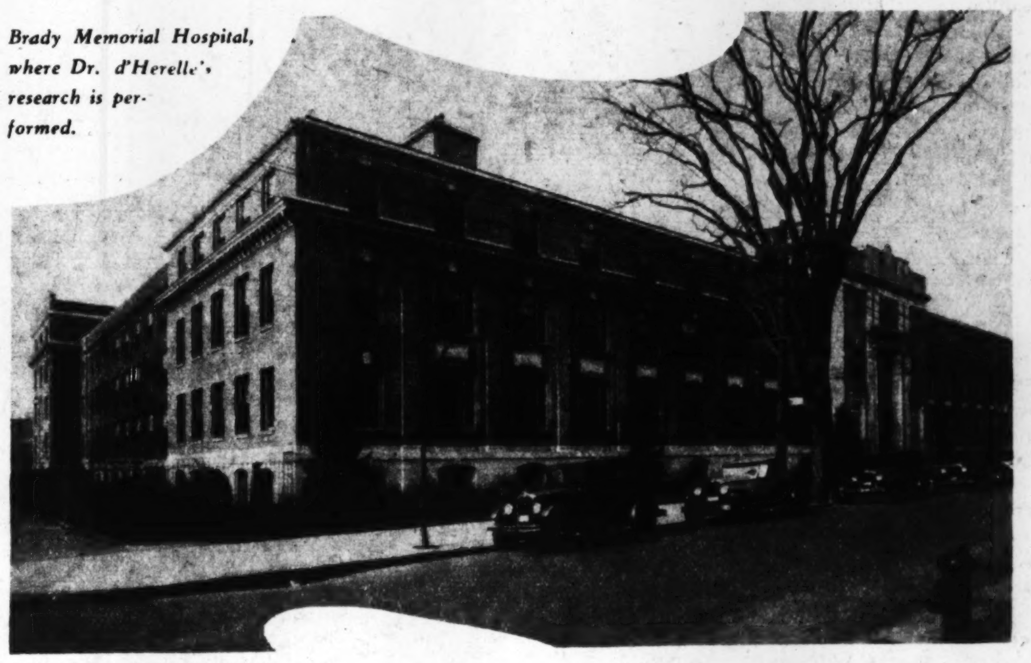
D'Herelle, however, wasn't merely satisfied with observing the phenomenon. He conducted his experiments meticulously and therefore saw no reason why some of his germ cultures should prove sterile while other cultures of the same germ actually increased in virulence. At this point D'Herelle remembered the research work that had been done by two other scientists in hog cholera. These scientists showed that the bacterium which had always been associated with hog cholera wasn't really the cause of the disease. They proved that the disease was caused by an invisible virus, too small to be seen under any microscope and too small to be caught by any filter, even the filters that would catch bacteria. (Such a virus is called a "filterable virus.") They proved that while the bacterium probably had something to do with the development of the deadly virus, it was the filterable virus itself that did the damage.

It occurred to D'Herelle that maybe a parallel condition existed in the case of the locusts, that perhaps it was not the bacillus itself that did the damage but that it only somehow contributed to the development of a filterable virus that produced the disease. Instead of inoculating locusts with the bacillus, he made filtrates of diseased locusts. That is, he crushed up a diseased locust, made a solution of that and then poured that solution through a filter that would catch the bacillus. If a filterable virus caused the disease that virus would have seeped through the filter into the filtrate. Thus, to determine if it was a filterable virus that caused the disease, D'Herelle inoculated healthy locusts with this filtrate.

THE results were very inconsistent. In most cases the disease wasn't reproduced. But Dr. d'Herelle noticed one puzzling thing: In the cases where disease had followed these injections he had always been able to find the bacillus itself in the dead insect, although the bacillus had not been injected! (As a matter of fact, D'Herelle later learned that there were certain forms of that locust bacillus that could pass a filter, but he didn't know it then.) Since the bacillus was sometimes found in healthy locusts, he then assumed that the disease was caused by the simultaneous presence of the bacillus and the filterable virus. He then began experiments involving simultaneous inoculation with both the filtrate and the bacillus. These experiments were interrupted by the war.

When the war broke out Dr. d'Herelle was chief of laboratory at the Pasteur Institute in Paris. In 1915 a dysentery epidemic broke out in a cavalry division stationed near Paris. From 7 in the morning until 12 at night he was actively engaged in preparing vaccine for the soldiers, yet it was during this very period that this amazing man carried out the experiments that led directly to his discovery.

He decided that instead of working on material obtained from the intestines of locusts he would work on material from human intestines, thinking that he might encounter the same phenomena in human diseases. So he began to make culture of the dysentery bacilli and filtrates from the dysentery patients. His plan was to mix the filtrate with the pure germs and to inoculate guinea pigs and rabbits, hoping thereby to reproduce the disease in them.



Brady Memorial Hospital, where Dr. d'Herelle's research is performed.

One day he mixed a quantity of a filtrate, obtained originally from a dysentery convalescent, with a culture of dysentery bacilli. He then placed the mixture in a heating apparatus, hoping thereby to speed development. To his astonishment next day he found the mixture perfectly clear, that is, containing no dysentery bacilli!

And then it was, by the sort of divine intuition that characterizes the work of genius everywhere, that D'Herelle's mind hit upon the explanation: That filtrate did contain a filterable virus, all right, but it wasn't the virus that caused the disease in man; it was a virus that caused a disease in the bacilli and destroyed them!

He carried on other experiments, brilliant in their simplicity. He took another drop of similarly obtained filtrate and placed it in another culture of dystentery bacilli. In a short time this mixture was perfectly clear and the bacilli had disappeared. Then he took a drop of this clear liquid and placed it in another culture of dysentery bacilli and soon this culture was perfectly clear. He continued this series indefinitely. Each time, a drop of the preceding mixture promptly killed the bacteria in the next culture. Not only that, but after a thousand such passages he found that proportionately less and less of the preceding mixture would do the trick. From all this, and other experiments, he concluded that he had found an ultra-microscopic living entity, a parasite that reproduced itself at the expense of bacteria.

As D'Herelle himself states it: "From these diverse experiments it seems highly probable that each corpuscle (which D'Herelle named 'bacteriophage') unites with a bacterium and reproduces at its expense; the bacterium then becomes dissolved, liberating the young corpuscles, which proceed to attack other uninvaded bacteria, and the same process continues until all susceptible bacteria have disappeared."

"OBSERVATION under the microscope confirms these conclusions," continues D'Herelle. "One may see the bacteria swell, some of them assuming a spherical form. Suddenly, a process of bursting, lasting but a fraction of a second, occurs and where one formerly saw the swollen but definitely delimited bacterium there appears only a slight floccule without definite contour."

In other words, the bactriophage gets into a bacterium, multiplies there and destroys the bacterium, much in the same way that a bacterium gets inside a man, multiplies there and finally destroys him.

To discuss the various problems (some of them highly controversial and technical) that have developed from D'Herelle's discovery is manifestly impossible here. Some scientists hold that the bacteriophage is not a parasite that attacks the bacterium, but a chemical secreted by the bacterium itself. Others have other theories, but this phase of the matter is, for most practical purposes, academic, since practically all agree that this bacteriophage, whatever its nature or mechanism may be, does under certain circumstances destroy disease-causing bacteria.

D'Herelle states that actually bacteriophage are what determine whether or not one recovers from bacterial disease; that the bacteriophage are widespread in nature and are to be found in soil, water and the particles of dust in the air; that bacteriophage can be classified into numerous strains, that some of them are destructive only to certain races of bacteria, while other bacteriophage are destructive to several kinds of bacteria. Bacteriophage of the same strain will vary in virulence, some being weak, others strong.

THE problem is further complicated by the fact that bacteria, under certain circumstances, develop an immunity to bacteriophage, just as animals sometimes do to bacteria. The strength of the bacteriophage can be increased under artificial cultivation, and the bacteriophage can sometimes be used as a preventive, as was done with cholera in certain sections of India. There certain wells furnishing drinking water were dosed with the bacteriophage, and into that district the cholera epidemic did not penetrate, while in the adjacent sections, where the wells remained untreated, the epidemic took its normal course.

In brief, the study of bacteriophage is in its earliest infancy, and its fullest benefits to man will not be realized until scientists have been able to classify all the strains to learn just what bacterium each bacteriophage is virulent for. Then it must be determined just what degree of virulence a given strain has for a given bacterium. When this is done, and it will take many years of work (assuming that it can be done completely), then doctors can have at their disposal the perfect specifics for death-dealing bacterial diseases.

The discoverer of this epoch-making phenomenon known as bacteriophagy was born in Montreal, Canada, 57 years ago. He was 7 years old when his father, a lawyer, died and his mother took him to live with relatives in Paris. From earliest youth his great hero was Pasteur, so that he naturally chose bacteriology as a career. He was graduated from the Sorbonne, served as Government bacteriologist in Guatemala and Mexico, and from 1914 to 1921 was laboratory chief at the Pasteur Institute. The two following years he held the same post at the University of Leyden, in Holland, where he received an honorary degree in medicine. He was also awarded the Leeuwenhoek Medal by the Amsterdam Academy of Science. For five years following 1923 he was director of the bacteriological service of the International Sanitation Council of Egypt. He has also done research work in a number of Asiatic countries.

Dr. George H. Smith, professor of immunology at the Yale University School of Medicine, became greatly interested in D'Herelle's work from the date of the Frenchman's first publication on bacteriophage in 1917. Dr. Smith translated that work and others, corresponding with D'Herelle and

THE "wickedest man in the world" has still another black mark against his name. It was a London newspaper that conferred on Aleister Crowley this unenviable distinction and in his latest exploit his detractors profess to see just another tribute to his so-called villainy. Crowley—author, mystic, world traveler and explorer—recently became involved in a strange incident at Lisbon, Portugal, according to reports which have just reached London. He was stopping there, it is said, with a young girl, reported to have been a Californian, a student in a Berlin art school. The two had a row so violent that reverberations of it reached the police.

The girl left in a huff for Germany, but not before Crowley had perpetrated what was apparently another of his strange jokes. On the seashore, about 20 miles from Lisbon, where the water rages so fiercely between two great rocks that the place has been called "Boca do Infierno" —the mouth of hell—was found a note that said in English: "I cannot live without you. The other 'Boca do Infierno' will get me—it will not be as hot as yours." The note was signed "Hisos," accompanied by a cryptograph. It was weighted down with a cigarette case, singularly ornamented, similar to the one that Crowley was known to have carried.

All indications pointed to suicide, and for a time the European press took this view. But the Lisbon police were laughing, for they knew that Crowley, safe and sound, had left Portugal on a regular passport for Spain.

Ironically enough, this comes at a time when a definite move had taken shape in England for an honest appraisal of Crowley's life and writings. Some time ago a book appeared in his defense called "The Legend of Aleister Crowley," written by P. R. Stephensen. This in itself, in the definition of the man biting the dog, was news. For probably no one in this century has been subject to so persistent and so virulent an attack as Crowley. Every possible variety of derogation has been slung at him in long campaigns in the more sensational press.

HE HAS been accused of every crime in the catalogue, from cannibalism to high treason. The principal papers to attack him, the Sunday Express of London and John Bull, have not hesitated to impute to him every unnatural and perverted vice, all the sinister and unmentionable sins. They have pictured him as a fiend incarnate, practicing the black mass and other orgiastic rituals. They have strongly hinted that he plotted the murder of a friend in order to place the man's wife in his power. There has been absolutely no limit to which they have not gone.

And Crowley never replied in any way whatsoever. Stephensen, in his defense, says that Crowley always felt the futility of any action against these powerful publications, maintaining that their legal staffs were so strong and their resources so ample that it would be almost useless to bring suit for libel. Furthermore, he was quite philosophic about it, believing that in the end these campaigns of villification would defeat themselves by their very exaggeration. And this was in part true, although mothers in England still use the name of Aleister Crowley to make their children behave.

It did become slightly absurd with the cannibalism story. That one was told in John Bull. Crowley is supposed to have been on a climbing expedition in the Himalayas. He started out with two native porters and came back without them. Asked what had happened to his guides on his return some weeks later, he is said to have replied that, running short of supplies, he killed them and ate them, finding his way back alone.

Stephensen, a young London journalist, has been deeply stirred by what he feels to be the rank unfairness of the attack on Crowley. He is a great admirer of Crowley's writings, is convinced that he has great genius, and that his work will live a long time after his villifiers have been forgotten. He quotes numerous excerpts from the various press attacks and remarks: "There has never been anything like it in literary history —probably because there has never been anything in literary history like modern sensational journalism. How would the Sunday Express have 'exposed' Byron? In what terms would they have described 'Don Juan,' and with what phrase would they have gloated over his amours? What would have been the results if the private life of Shelley and Keats had been dragged into a Sunday newspaper specializing in moral indignation and invective?"

Below — Letter found on the edge of an abyss near Lisbon and supposed to have been written by Crowley.

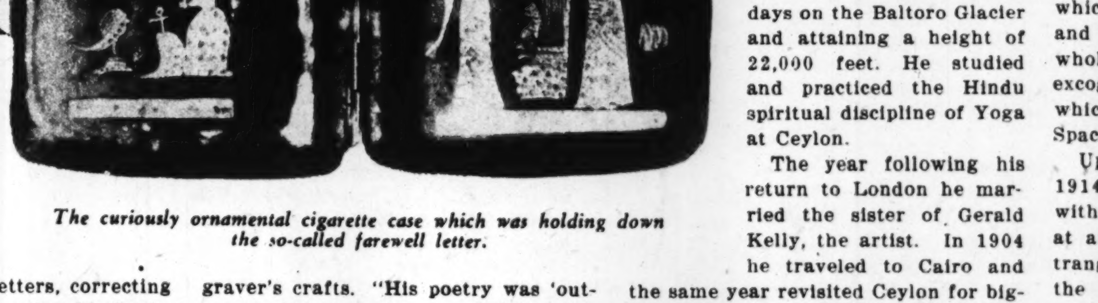
THE author of "The Legend of Aleister Crowley" cites several amusing incidents to indicate how complete is the belief in Crowley's wickedness.

"The publishers of his autobiography, now in the press, have had some fun," he writes. "Weird customers have walked into their offices, uttering cryptic warnings and have vanished, leaving no traces of identity. One of them said: 'Always cross your fingers when you speak to Aleister Crowley.' His own fingers were crossed all the time he was in the office. He said: 'That man is superhuman; he can read thoughts; he knows what we are thinking now.' Questioned, the weird visitor would say no more, but merely withdrew, his fingers still crossed, moaning hollowly: 'Remember, remember!' like the ghost of Hamlet's father.

"Many other kind friends 'seriously warned' the publishers and meant well. In discussion, most of them were amazed to learn that Crowley was actually living in England, going about his business as a normal man of letters, correcting proofs and otherwise seeing his books through the press. They were under the impression vaguely, that he would be arrested if he set foot on these shores! Informed that Crowley has never been charged with any criminal offense in all his adventurous life, some replied: 'Ah, that shows how clever he is!' The legend persists."

"I am far from exonerating Crowley himself," Stephensen adds. "A quite extraordinary simplicity in his nature has led him systematically to invite hostility from almost every quarter, as I shall show. He has held nothing 'sacred' merely because it appeared sacred. Piece by piece he has alienated that vague mass of dogma called Public Opinion, and outraged it. He has attacked, with his devastating humor, precisely those people who have no sense of humor in their doctrines."

Crowley was born in 1875 of a family of religious fanatics, members of the repressive Puritan sect, the Plymouth Brethren. His mother usually designated him by the mystic name of "The Beast 666," which always has perversely pleased Crowley. As a boy and in adolescence his chief hobbies were poetry, chemistry, mathematics and chess, and the sport he liked best was rock climbing, at which he early attained great skill. He was sent down to Cambridge at 20, the possessor of a fortune of $200,000, which he had inherited on the death of his parents. In 1898, his third year in the university, he published five volumes of verse, "Aceldama," "White Stains," "The Tale of Archais," 'Songs of the Spirit" and "Jephthah." Within 10 years he was to publish more than 30 volumes, most of them privately, and all of them beautiful examples of the printer's and engraver's crafts. "His poetry was 'outrageous' in the manner of Swinburne, Baudelaire and the Yellow Book. One of his earliest works was a poetic reply to Kraft-Ebing."



The curiously ornamental cigarette case which was holding down the so-called farewell letter.

He sent his books to the press for review. For a time he lived as "Count Svareff" in a flat in Chancery Lane in London which he fitted up as a magical temple. He bought a Scottish estate at Boleskine, Inverness, and appeared at the Cafe Royal in full paraphernalia of a Scottish chieftain, as the "Laird of Boleskine." The Crowley legend began to grow, feeding upon these sensations.

He climbed the soft chalk of Beachy Head, to the complete astonishment of the natives, no less than of experienced climbers. He began making climbing records in Cumberland, in Wales and on the Alps. "A sinister interpretation was placed even upon these feats of agility and daring," Stephensen writes. "Aleister Crowley was climing unclimbable places. Obviously by supernatural aid. Inevitably he came to loggerheads with respectability as personified in the Alpine Club, and began exposing its members as incompetents and even as untruthful braggarts. Another hostile group! But merely in passing."

Crowley took an active part in the controversy over Epstein's monument to Oscar Wilde in Paris. When the police refused to permit it to be unveiled, Crowley unveiled it by a stratagem "in the interests of art." The legend grew.

"ONE would say," Stephensen observes, "that he was asking for notoriety and he got it. I can think of a simpler explanation—merely in his poetic exhuberance, in the fact that he really thought an artistic purpose would be served by shocking the suburbs, and in the fact that he really did not care what people thought of him, because he had enough money to be indifferent to any hostile opinion of criticism."

"From time to time," Stephensen says, "he 'mysteriously' disappeared; to reappear eventually in his old haunts, looking years younger, refreshed in body and mind, even more sardonic, witty, vituperative and 'wicked.'"

He traveled to many of the strange and far places of the earth in these periods of absence from London. From 1900 to 1902 he made a trip around the world, stopping for a day, a week or many months, as the mood and desire impelled him, in New York, Mexico, San Francisco, Honolulu, Japan, China and Ceylon. This trip included six months in the Himalayas with the Chogo Ri expedition of 1902, spending 65 days on the Baltoro Glacier and attaining a height of 22,000 feet. He studied and practiced the Hindu spiritual discipline of Yoga at Ceylon.

The year following his return to London he married the sister of Gerald Kelly, the artist. In 1904 he traveled to Cairo and the same year revisited Ceylon for big-game shooting. In 1905 he went again to the Himalayas on the famous expedition that attempted to scale the Kangchenjunga peak and attained a height of approximately 23,000 feet. In 1906 he went down the Irrawaddy River to Rangoon and later made a walking trip in China with his wife and small child. A part of the following year he spent with certain Arab tribes of Morocco, accompanied by the Earl of Tankerville.

And all the time that he was off in the far corners of the earth his books were appearing. Stephensen says that no one knows their exact number, probably not even the author. His Collected Works appeared from 1905 to 1907, one thick India-paper volume each year.

Returning to London for a comparatively long stay, he gave a public exhibition of the Rites of Eleusis. Earlier he had written an essay which "is a passionate statement of the necessity for revitalizing religion," according to Stephensen. While the ceremonies of Eleusis were held in a public hall, admission was by card, signed personally by Crowley, and only 200 were allowed in. According to published reports in reputable journals at the time, it consisted of music, dancing by robed figures, some incantations, the use of incense and lighting effects. There was nothing shocking or orgiastic about the performance, according to reporters who were admitted to the ceremony.

Certain newspapers took it up in a mild sort of way, but with no personal venom displayed against Crowley. From 1908 to 1914 Crowley published a magazine, that appeared twice a year, called The Equinox. It dealt with occult matters. He wrote the entire issues himself. After he published what were supposed to be the secrets of the Rosicrucians an effort was made to suppress the magazine by injunction, but The Equinox appeared on scheduled date, Crowley winning the court fight.

AT THIS time, too, appeared a tribute to Crowley in the form of a book called "Crowleyanity," by Captain J. F. C. Fuller of the Oxfordshire Light Infantry, and now at the War Office. Amongst other thunderous praises, Captain Fuller had this to say:

"It has taken 100,000,000 years to produce Aleister Crowley. The world has indeed labored and has at last brought forth a man . . Crowley has twisted a subtle cord, on which he has suspended the universe, and swinging it round has sent the whole fickle world conception of these excogitating spiders into those realms which lie behind Time and beyond Space."

Up until the outbreak of the war in 1914, Crowley still had some standing with the public, Stephensen says. Or at any rate he had not violently estranged every element. Shortly after the outbreak of the war—Crowley says he tried to enlist for service but was rejected because of a chronic illness—he went to America. In New York he got in with George Sylvester Viereck, who was then editing a paper of strong pro-German tendencies. Crowley announced himself as a pro-German. He proceeded to write violent articles for this paper containing extravagant praise of the Kaiser and Hindenburg, so extravagant that they appear, as he now claims, to have been burlesques, done with the intention of so exaggerating the German cause in America that it would appear ridiculous. All the time, Crowley maintains, he was in league with the British intelligence service. Whether this was true or not, certainly no one in England believed it and high treason was added to the list of the "bad man's" other

The Journey Across the Ice Begins

Hauling Their Heavy Sledges, They Start on the Dubious Search for Land.

This is the fourth installment of the official story of Andree and his associates, Strindberg and Fraenkel, who perished in the first attempt to reach the North Pole by air.

A Narrative Reconstructed From the Diaries of S. A. Andree and Nils Strindberg by Professor Hans W. Ahlman, Professor of Geography, University of Stockholm.

WORN out and famished, Andree and his companions landed on the ice floe just before 7:30 o'clock on the morning of July 14, 1897. A checking of the place-determinations made at the landing place shows that it was situated in 82:56 N. Lat. and 29:52 E. Long. Gr. In spite of fatigue and hunger the three men were unable to allow themselves any rest. Seven hours' hard work had to be done before they could refresh themselves.

As already mentioned, the landing was carried out so successfully that no part of the equipment in the car seems to have been damaged. Even the remaining carrier pigeons were saved.

What Andree, Strindberg and Fraenkel now had to do was to make the first preparations for the phase of their expedition that now awaited them. Their first camping place on the floating ice had to be arranged.

From what it is now possible to deduce, there was on the first day a division of labor in making notes and minutes.

Andree describes in his diary the general course of the expedition; Strindberg, the physicist, keeps the logbook in which all the astronomical observations are entered; Fraenkel keeps the meteorological journal.

At the close of his log-book Strindberg also enters the packing lists, the stock taking account and the arrangements made for the meals. In his memorandum-almanac, so rich in information respecting the balloon journey, he also makes brief marginal notes on certain days.

FINALLY, during the first days of the wandering across the ice, he writes to his fiancee in shorthand, a couple of letters entered in his second log-book telling of what had passed.

It is from all these notes, but first and foremost from Andree's diary, that the following chapters on the journey across the ice have been compiled.

In his diary Andree has noted down after each day's wandering, in short sentences, sometimes in but few words, the events and observations considered most important.

Sometimes he seems to have also made some notes during the dinner rest or when the expedition stopped for any long time during its journey onward across the drifting ice.

There is no chronological succession in the notes made on each special day. Scientific observations, remarks concerning the happenings on the journey, the character of the ice, the arrangements made for the food, remarks about bears and birds, etc., occur next to each other in this grand document in which the fortunes of the expedition and Andree's manly figure stand forth in living light.

A valuable support in the attempt to give a connected and chronologically successive account of the expedition based on the diary, has been obtained in part from Fraenkel's meteorological journal, in which he noted his observations with date and hour after the party had risen for the day and after they had pitched camp. Also from Strindberg's "repas pendant le voyage" (meals during the journey), entered by him at the end of his logbook No. 2.

In this book there is given the hour of the different meals during the journey, but these notes ambrace only the period from August 4 to 15.

Strindberg's extremely valuable stenographic entries are only four in number and conclude with an introductory description of the events of July 26.

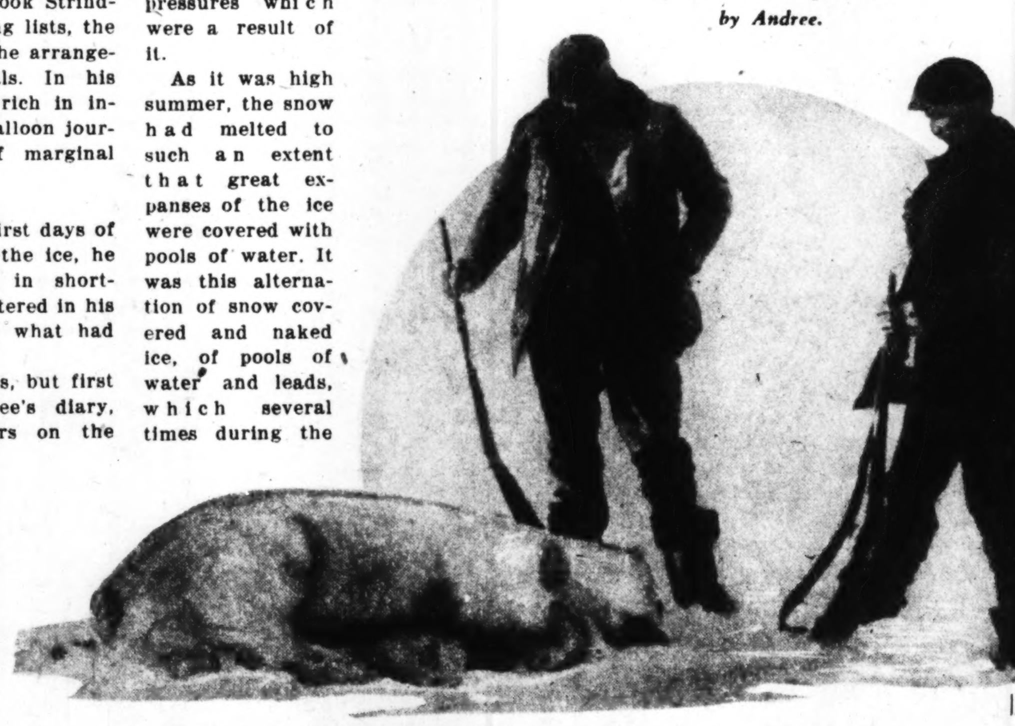
No notes give us any detailed information as to what happened on July 14 after the landing. In his diary Andree has left pages 21-23 and 25-26 blank, probably to fill them with a description of this later when he had more time. But such a moment was never granted him, for it is certain that every succeeding day was sufficiently filled with painful labor.

The camp on the ice floe. The balloon car is on the left, while between it and the tent is the canvas boat.

THE balloon Eagle descended on a sea filled with drifting ice. The three men were now so far north, and had penetrated so far among this drift ice that floes of different sizes and shapes formed connected fields of considerable extent.

Leads, or channels, varying in length and breadth, traversed the ice in different directions. It was also filled with walls of ice hummocks, some long and high, some short and low, formed by the drifting, and the pressures which were a result of it.

As it was high summer, the snow had melted to such an extent that great expanses of the ice were covered with pools of water. It was this alternation of snow covered and naked ice, of pools of water and leads, which several times during the course of the balloon journey had led the polar travelers to believe that they had open water beneath them. There were, however, no very great stretches of such water, but here and there extended large and level surfaces of ice.



Fraenkel and Strindberg examining a polar bear brought down by Andree.

The three men were surrounded by this chaos of ice, ice moving and drifting, pressing and screwing, sometimes breaking asunder into large leads, sometimes assembling into far-stretching masses. For hundreds of miles in each direction spread this scene. Such drift ice, which is neither ice nor water but a mixture of both, is one of the most fearful expanses a man can ever traverse.

On July 14, the day when they landed, the three men at length sought rest between 2 and 3 p. m. The next day, July 15, they rose about 11.

Arctic weather prevails. The sky is entirely covered with clouds and a fine drizzle is falling; the air is fairly clear, however, the temperature remains at about freezing point and there is a calm or, perhaps, there is a faint northwest wind blowing.

An astronomical place-determination is taken as accurately as circumstances allow. As mentioned above, this determination, corrected, is 82:56 N. Lat. and 29:52 E. Long. Gr.

According to the charts Andree had with him (which were found on White Island, last August), there lay at a distance of 192 miles from them, in a south-southwest direction, Northeast Land, belonging to the large Spitzbergen group of islands.

IN A southeasterly direction, at a distance of 210 miles, was Franz Josef Land, where Fritjof Nansen spent the winter of 1895-96 with his companion, Johansen, and from which he returned to Norway as the world-renowned leader of the Fram Expedition.

On the English chart there was given "Gillis Land," which was nothing other than the Giles Land (White Island) named after the Dutchman Giles and which had been placed by the discoverer in an approximately correct position. The actual Giles Land, the now well known White Island, was given as White Iceland.

No human being had hitherto visited the expanse lying between the Eagle's landing place and the groups of islands just mentioned. Andree could, consequently, very well imagine the possibility of sighting some unknown land. Often we find him on the lookout for such land.

The most important resolution made during the entire expedition had now to be taken—one of decisive importance for the three men.

They had to determine whether they should remain where they were, and drift with the ice, or begin a journey across it. In the latter case they had also to determine toward which land they should go. After the unwritten pages in his diary Andree, on July 15, enters respecting this fateful deliberation merely the words, "determined to start from the point where we were."

Nothing is mentioned as to where they thought of directing their steps, but from the succeeding remarks in Andree's diary it is possible to deduce that they had fixed on Franz Josef Land, and Strindberg in his shorthand notes for July 22 says that they are starting for Cape Flora in the archipelago in question.

The reason for this disastrous determination was, probably, first and foremost, that at the point mentioned there was a large depot for the expedition. In addition, Franz Josef Land, in consequence of Nansen's wintering there, was known by Andree and his men to be a place where it was possible for human beings to support the cold and darkness of the Polar winter.

Finally, the island group offered much of scientific interest, of geographical, geological and other natural physical conditions. This latter fact was, most certainly, of no small weight when the expedition determined to direct its steps to Cape Flora. They did not know that their attempt to reach this goal would be prevented by an invincible ocean current.

Andree and his companions having made their decision, preparations were commenced for the sledge-journey.

We know from a preceding chapter that, remembering the possibility of

THE LETTERS STRINDBERG WROTE, WHILE ON THE ICE, TO HIS FIANCEE.

On the inside cover of his diary-notebook, Nils Strindberg wrote in shorthand several letters to his fiancee in Sweden, evidently hoping that in some way they might reach her. When the following notes were written in July, 1897, he, Andree and Fraenkel were just starting on their long, terrible ice journey from the spot on the floe where their balloon had landed. These Strindberg notes were among the other writings found last August with the bodies of the explorers on White Island, where they perished.

"The 22 July.

"It is nearly 7 o'clock in the evening and we have just packed out sledges ready and intend to start from our landing place. Yes, now we are starting (?) o'clock G. M. T. We shall see how we shall manage to come to Cape Flora; the sledges are heavy to pull. Yes, now we are going.

"At the last camping place 22|7 12 o'clock midnight (before the 23).

"Well, now your Nils knows what it is to walk on the Polar ice. We had a little mishap at the start. When we were crossing from our ice floe with the first sledge it went crooked and fell in. It was with difficulty we succeeded in getting it up.

"I climbed down up to the knees and held fast the sledge so that it should not sink. Andree and Fraenkel crossed over to the other ice floe and then suddenly we managed to get the sledge up.

"I expect that my sack which was on the sledge is wet inside. And it is there that I have all your letters and your portrait. Yes, they will be my dearest treasure during the Winter. Well, my dear, what will you be thinking in the Winter? That is my only anxiety.

"Well, after we had got the sledge up again we piloted ourselves across some floes with channels of water between. The way we did it was by making the ice floes move quickly so that they came near each other. This was slow work with the large floes of course.

"At last we came on to a large field of ice across which we wandered with our sledges two or three kilometers. Each is loaded with about 160 kg. (362 pounds), so that they are very heavy and during the last hour all three of us helped with one sledge at a time.

"Now we have encamped on a picturesque bit of ice and have pitched our tent. In the tent we have our sleeping sack in which all three of us are now lying side by side. It is a squeeze but the fellowship is good. There is much I should write about, but I must sleep. Good night."

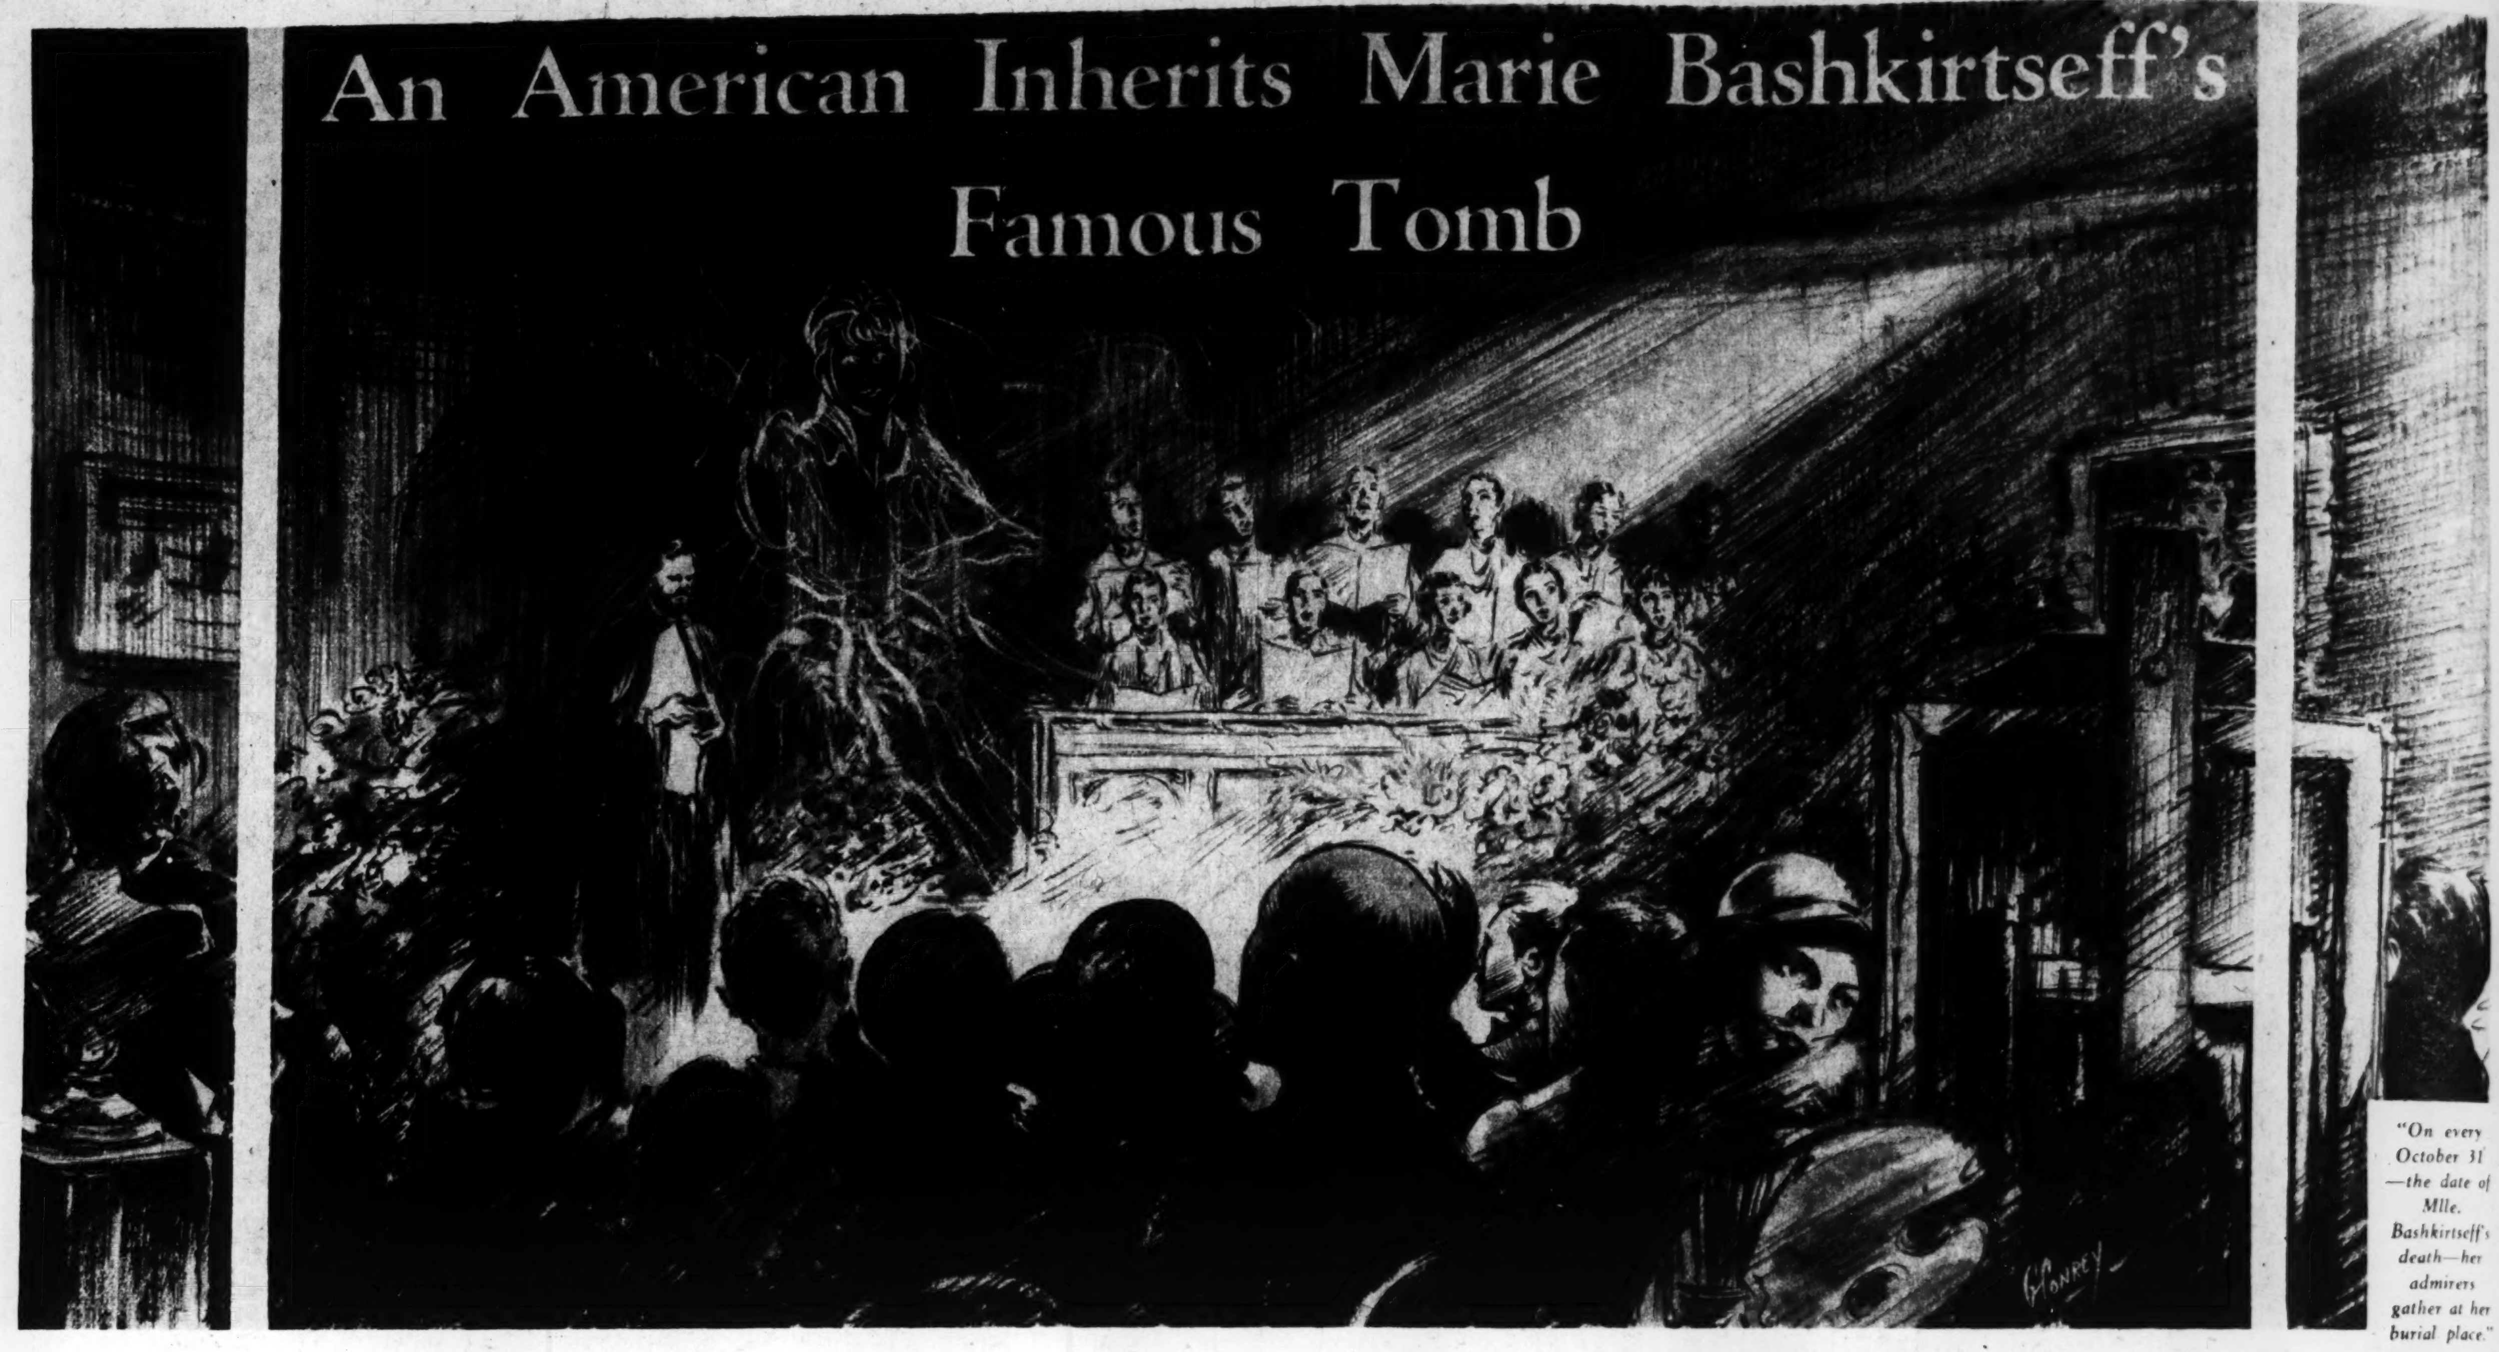
"Start 2:15 o'clock.

"Difficult leads in the ice. Andree and I of different opinions respecting the crossing of the channel. Scanty dinner. After the midday meal we covered some km. (one or two). Night camp by a large hummock (of ice 13 feet high). I made soup with peas, rusks, soup tablets and Rosseau meat powder."

An American Inherits Marie Bashkirtseff's Famous Tomb



"On every October 31—the date of Mlle. Bashkirtseff's death—her admirers gather at her burial place."

The Self-Dictated Memorial of the Celebrated "Journal's" Author, Fallen Into Neglect by the Impoverishment of Her Family, Goes to a Posthumous Admirer.

By R. S. FENDRICK

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

PARIS.

AN ODD chain of circumstances has made a young American the owner of one of the strangest of the many strange sights of Paris. It is the elaborate, egoistic tomb of Marie Bashkirtseff, brilliant Russian painter who died here 46 years ago at the age of 24.

Livingston Phelps, who served on the staff of the American Ambassador to Russia in 1917 and 1918, has come into possession of the tomb through inheritance. It was left to him by a niece of the artist, a woman whom he had rescued from poverty and who, knowing his deep interest in the painter's life and work, felt that by putting the memorial in his possession she would insure it against neglect.

Marie Bashkirtseff was a romantic and tragic figure. Sculptor, musician and writer as well as painter, she had a passionate interest in life, particularly her own life. For 12 years before her death she recorded her joys and griefs, hopes, loves, vanities, envies and disappointments in her "Journal," which is still widely read today for its rarely human and moving qualities.

Her tomb came into being through the request she expressed in her will. "I wish a chapel to be built for me in the neighborhood of the Champs Elysees," she directed. "It must be large enough to contain a gathering of 40 persons. A painting must be made of me and placed in this chapel. I also wish a fine organ so that once a year, on the anniversary of my death, sad and beautiful pieces of music by the great composers may be played there. Around the chapel there must be a garden, with a statue of me made by Monsieur de Saint-Marceaux . . . "

The Bashkirtseff family, then wealthy, carried out the young woman's request. In the little Passy Cemetery, near the Champs Elysees which Marie loved, a large plot of ground was purchased, just inside the entrance.

There they erected a large Byzantine cupola surmounted by a cross with two branches. Inside, a roomy chapel was provided, in one corner of which the painter's atelier containing a partly finished picture entitled "The Holy Women Before the Tomb of Christ," palettes and brushes, paint tubes and smocks, was reproduced. In another corner was placed a painting of Marie as a young girl, and a second portrait made after her death. A double stairway leads down to a crypt where there is a simple marble slab with the artist's name carved on it.

On every October 31—the date of Marie's death—since the chapel was built, admirers of her work have gathered at her burial place to hear a Russian priest say prayers and a Russian choir sing laments.

One night several years ago, as Phelps sat in his bachelor flat in the French capital reading the "Journal" of the young Russian painter, he fell to wondering how her tomb was being cared for. The next morning he visited the place, and was shocked to find it had been sadly neglected. A marble bust of the artist was missing, a heavy iron chandelier had fallen to the floor and the iron gates were badly rusted.

The cemetery guardian explained:

"The Bashkirtseff family nearly all perished in the revolution. Marie's mother, who wanted to be buried here, died in poverty in Nice in 1919, and is buried down there under a wooden marker. The tomb belongs now to Marie's niece, the last survivor of the family. This lady, who is middle aged, is not only penniless but very ill. She lives in a single room in a cheap suburb of Paris and to buy food and medicines for herself she has commenced to sell objects from the chapel. She recently sold Marie's bust to the Imperial Museum at Tokio, and she is now negotiating with other museums. I understand that she even intends to sell the tomb, which means that it will be torn down and the ground sold to another family."

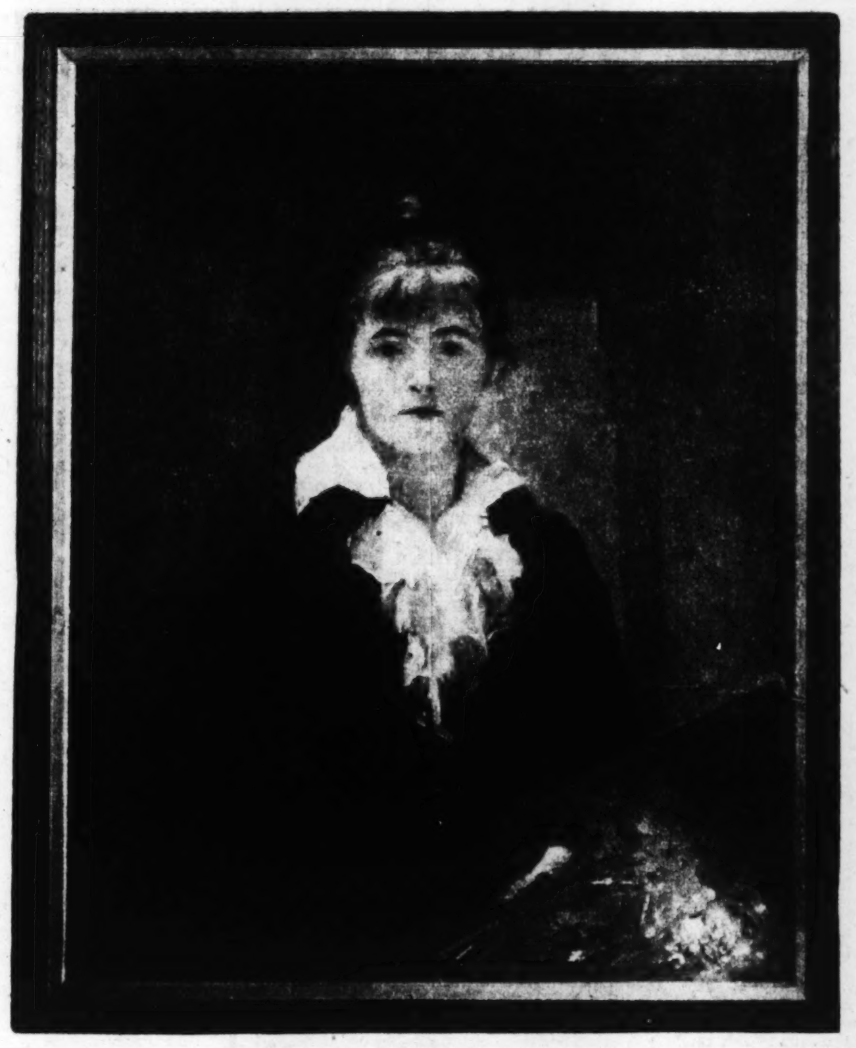
Deeply moved, Phelps hurried to visit Marie's niece in the suburb of Levallois. The invalid, once wealthy, declared in a burst of sobbing that she had been driven to sell Marie's bust by sheer starvation, and that she actually had planned to sell the tomb itself.

The young American immediately provided the woman with an ample pension for all her needs, and received authority from her to make some repairs to the chapel.

THIS aunt, probably the last of the Bashkirtseffs, died recently and Phelps was astounded when he received notification that she had formally bequeathed him the tomb, with the responsibility of keeping it in proper condition. As he is unmarried, and this strange trust is for eternity, he hopes to organize eventually a society of friends of Marie Bashkirtseff that will take over the obligation, although he will provide part of the funds necessary. The tomb is now being completely done over and all broken iron and stone work is being replaced. It is hoped to bring about the return of the bust from the Tokio museum in the near future.

Phelps' first act, on coming into possession of the tomb, was to have the body of Marie's mother brought from Nice and placed beside her daughter.

For 46 years there had been an open vault beside the one where Marie was laid away. Madame Bashkirtseff had arranged it for herself. Day after day, year after year she went there to pray, and to gaze into the grave she hoped would receive her. When past 80, she found herself ruined and her family swept away by the Russian upheaval.



A self-portrait of Marie Bashkirtseff.

Her only possession was the marble pile that had cost thousands of dollars. Alone and forsaken, Madame Bashkirtseff died on the Riviera, and the friends of this woman who had held one of the most fashionable salons in Paris could not raise sufficient funds to have the body sent there to be laid beside the daughter.

By a curious coincidence the very day the body of Madame Bashkirtseff was brought to Paris the Times of London printed one of the Gladstone papers that threw a new light on Marie Bashkirtseff's last moments.

The famous British statesman was a great admirer of the Russiah girl and, knowing this, his friends in Paris had hunted up many new details about her life. In one letter, dated more than 40 years ago, and never before published, Miss Dorothy Tennant, afterwards Lady Stanley, wrote to Mr. Gladstone as follows:

Mlle. Bashkirtseff.

"I am delighted to be able to tell you something of Mdlle. B. I was not personally acquainted with her, but I happen to have known two of her most intimate friends, the late Bastien-Lepage—and her cousin, Prince Karageorgeovitch, frequently alluded to in the Journal as Bojidav. . . .

"Mdlle. B's ruling passion was self. It did not take the form of self-indulgence nor even self-esteem, but an extraordinary interest in herself.

"It induced her to keep that most remarkable journal. It made her study music and take up singing, it spurred her on to paint, it made her do and say extraordinary things. Prince Karageorgeovitch, who had a sincere affection for her, told me that the prospect of her approaching death interested her, that there was something effective, she thought, in dying young. A fortnight before her death she had a violent quarrel with her mother; the excitement hastened her end. She shut herself up and refused on any account to see her mother. Prince K. told me that a week before she died she wrote him a very extraordinary letter. She said that feeling her end was approaching, and knowing how little affection her mother had for her, she was quite sure that she would be buried in a cheap way, and that probably her mother, out of economy, would have her dressed in some old white ball dress! She therefore desired her dear Bojidav, as soon as he heard of her death, to hasten to a very fashionable dressmaker on the Rue de la Paix and order to be made for her a white dress of the finest cambric, with so many tucks and such and such trimmings. He was then to see that this dress was put on her, that she might rest in it in her coffin. Prince K. told me that he faithfully carried out all her instructions, and that the mother appeared quite indifferent. . . ."

Marie Bashkirtseff was small, her figure was exquisite, her face, without being beautiful, was very attractive.

Writing of her in "Moussia, or the Life and Death of Marie Bashkirtseff," Alberic Cahuet said:

"Living, she was the most living of the alive. Dead, she has accomplished what is most difficult for those who have gone; she has survived. Why is she read just as much as ever? Why does her Slav soul dominate so imperiously this corner of French soil that she has made her own? Why does this girl who has passed away seem more durable than many of our living immortals?

"WE MUST study our own souls to understand Marie Bashkirtseff, for this luminous virgin symbolizes the two dramas of humanity—life and death. She incarnates thought, delight, love, pride violence, defeat, triumph, construction and destruction, the very warp and woof of us.

"And when I am told that she was not a saint, I reply that I prefer her as she was, for she resembles us more closely."

Marie Bashkirtseff, that ambitious, sensitive, brilliant, artistic Russian girl, has become something of a cult. Her "Journal," written almost daily from the age of 12 until she died at the age of 24, is still one of the best sellers, in spite of its two volumes.

Publishers are bringing out beautiful new editions of the "Journal." Admirers pass by her tomb daily to pray and leave flowers. It is said that 100,000 women and girls in Europe alone have little altars in their homes dedicated to her. A street has been named after Marie Bashkirtseff at Nice, where she often lived, and the portrait she painted of herself hangs in a museum there.

In the preface to her tragic "Journal" the young artist exclaims:

"If I am going to die like this, stricken by a sudden attack, I will not know perhaps that I am in danger. It will be hidden from me, and after my death they will search through my drawers and find my Journal. My family will destroy it after having read it, and soon nothing will remain of me, nothing, nothing, nothing! This has always shocked me. To live, to have so much ambition, to suffer, to weep, to struggle, and then at the end to be forgotten, forgotten, as though I had never lived! It is always interesting, the life of a woman, day by day, without any posing, as if no one in the world was supposed to read it, and yet written to be read." . . .

THE last few pages of her "Journal" are particularly dramatic. After various innocent idylls the Russian girl had fallen in love with Jules Bastien-Lepage, a brilliant young painter, but both were literally on their deathbeds. Marie Bashkirtseff had been given up for several years by the best lung specialists, although she did not realize that her end was so near, and the painter was dying of a stomach affliction.

Her own record of certain of the last days of her life follows:

Friday, August 22, 1884.—It's finished. He is condemned. Is it possible? I cannot grasp yet the full sense of this abominable news. It is a new sentiment for me: to see a man condemned to death.

Tuesday, August 26.—All the confused thoughts fluttering through my mind are now grouped around this black point. It is the first time such a thing has happened in my life—a man—a great artist—and, besides, you understand——

Condemned to death! And for days and days in advance I must contemplate his approaching death. It is shocking. I have already pulled my head down between my shoulders and am waiting for the blow.

Saturday, August 30.—September arrived, and the bad weather is not far off. The least chill can throw me in bed for two months, at least. It's the moment to believe in God and pray. The end of all my miseries; so many aspirations, desires, projects, simply to die at 24, at the threshold of life!

Wednesday, September 2.—I am making a drawing for the Figaro, but with interruptions of one hour and rests between. Such an atrocious fever. I have never been so ill, but I do not tell my family. I go out and still work.

Saturday, September 13.—Bastien-Lepage loves me, esteems me. He said yesterday that I was wrong to torment myself, that I must consider myself very happy, for not another woman with such brief training has had such a great artistic success.

Thursday, September 18.—Bastien-Lepage wishes to nurse me; he wants

NEW YORK.

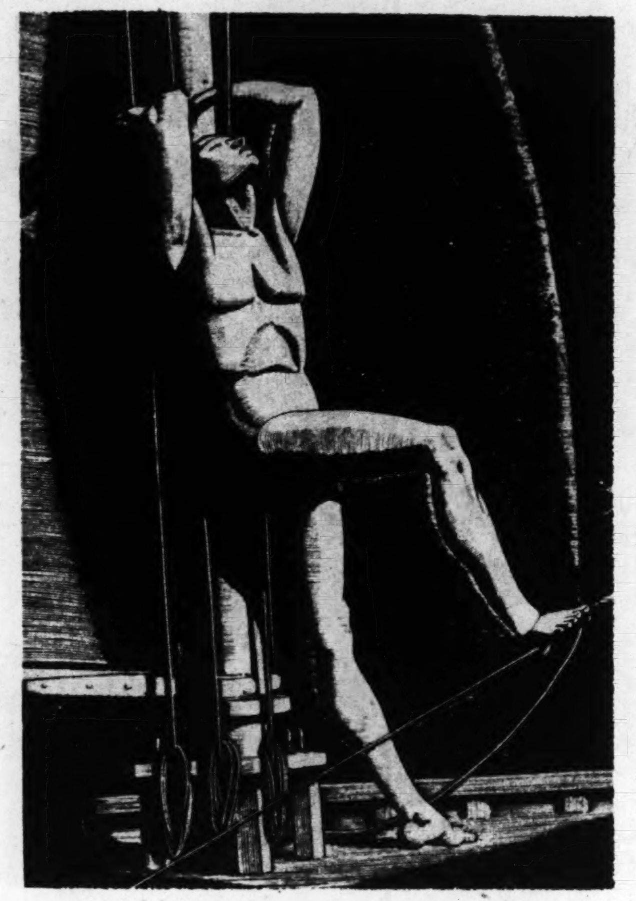
LAST December, Rockwell Kent returned from Greenland to his home in Ausable Forks, New York, with a fine group of paintings and sketches, and the tornado of fresh energy which he seems to gather from wrecks, wilderness and life and death adventures in uninhabited regions. He found his neighbors unhappy but helpless because the Delaware & Hudson Railroad had abandoned their branch line from Plattsburg to Ausable Forks, thus cutting off some 10,000 inhabitants from the outside world. It was the sort of situation which cripples dozens of small business men and farmers, brings increasing loneliness, and depresses the life of a community; it drives home so effectively the impotence of the citizen pitted against the corporation. Nearly every man in Ausable Forks was furiously indignant but exceeding this indignation was a conviction that it was not within the power or fortune of one man to buck a great railroad.

Not so Rockwell Kent. He decided that this was injustice, and, almost gloatingly, set out to do something about it. For a year he and his lawyer, Philip Lowry, have been waging a legal fight against the Delaware & Hudson, a fight which has included big-gun pamphlets, bold manifestos, eloquent appeals to the newspapers, to Commissioner Lunn, to Gov. Roosevelt. Under his bald head, Kent's eyes glitter like a very small, very delighted boy's as he tells about it. He has now won a legal victory over the railroad and the branch is to be resurrected. More than that, he has established, through this test case, a precedent that no railroad in this State may abandon passenger service without the consent of the Public Service Commission.



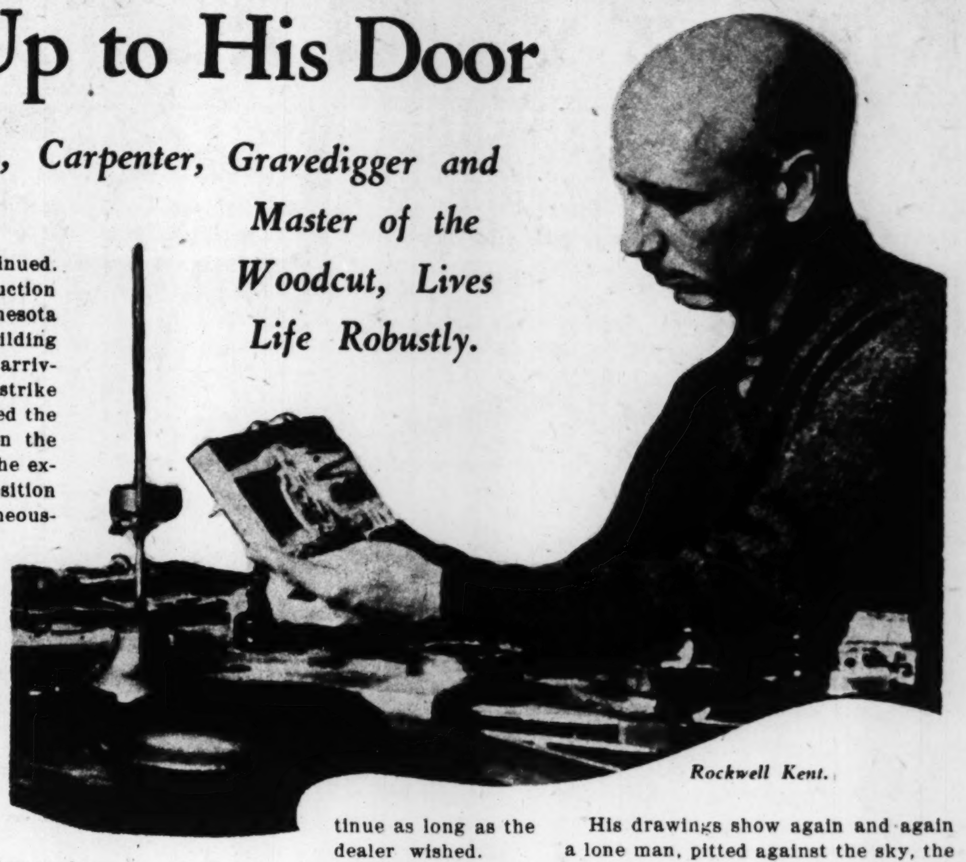
"Night Watch," a woodcut by Rockwell Kent.

Kent has made his living as a lobster fisherman, a gravedigger, a carpenter, but never as a commercial artist. He has taken work offered him by magazines and advertising companies, but never at the sacrifice of what he would call his fun—and another might term his pride—in his work. He tells that much of his life is unprintable, but he has had two wives and five children.

His explorations are almost as famous as his lawsuits, and these are nearly as popular as his woodcuts and paintings. He has sailed around Cape Horn in a 26-foot sailboat, painting as he sailed. He has discovered the only pass among the fiercely scened mountains at the western end of Terra del Fuego. He has been wrecked off the coast of Greenland, after sailing through the gales of Davis Strait in a tiny yacht and after being wrecked he has spent a season painting the stark Arctic landscape, which stirs him more profoundly than the tropics.

He had been at Monhegan Island just after he got out of college, and between lobster fishing and gravedigging he had found the spot eminently paintable. So, at the age of 26, with a wife and a child and another child on the way, he started an art school there. Socialists and even anarchists were invited to lecture between life and still life classes, because, Kent affirmed, the growth of a man is essential to his growth as an artist. After one summer the school was discontinued.

A New York construction company sent him to Minnesota to boss an important building job. Very soon after his arrival the workmen went on strike in which Kent, having joined the union in order to work on the job, joined. He laughs as he explains what a peculiar position it put him in to be simultaneously the representative of the bosses and the leader of the strike. But he accepted both sets of duties with his usual buoyancy, and the strike was won and the job completed in excellent time and due order.



Rockwell Kent.

When he was nearly 30, Kent decided that he couldn't be an odd-job man any longer. He wanted to give his whole time and energy to painting, drawing and living. In a pinch he can make a crusade even of himself.

Examining the globe carefully, he decided Newfoundland was the best possible scene for his serious career. The country was the bare, big-boned sort which attracted him. And he felt that Newfoundland was a place where a canny man could maintain a family cheaply. In fact, after much figuring, he decided he, his wife and three children, could get along comfortably, and even opulently there on $50 a month. He went to a dealer, who had actually sold one or two of his canvases in the past, and made him a proposition. If the dealer would pay him $50 a month, he would give him all his work, every line and every stroke, and this contract was to continue as long as the dealer wished.

The dealer consented, and then at the last minute backed out. Kent swallowed his pride and appealed to his mother, who consented to finance him, and to Newfoundland the family went.

IT WAS 1916, the war was on, and Newfoundland is a possession of Great Britain. The natives suspected this passion of an able-bodied man to transfer their trees and mountains to paper and canvas. They decided he was making maps and diagrams for the enemy. Then, one day, Kent remarked in the village postoffice that he disapproved of British imperialism. He still has several crates holding the correspondence which resulted, and which he labels the case of the British Empire versus Kent. He was "persuaded" to leave Newfoundland.

His drawings show again and again a lone man, pitted against the sky, the wind, a storm, the universe. His life is a series of exploits in this mood.

He has won success, both in his tumultuous adventures, and in that greater adventure of his work. He is now 48 and for the last five years, he says, almost deploringly, he has made an easy living by painting and drawing alone. His exhibitions are now not only artistic events, the paintings sell. They are reproduced in American and foreign art magazines. His books and woodcut illustrations have become so popular that the Literary Guild has chosen his "N by E." for its December book, and the Book of the Month Club, "Moby Dick," illustrated by him, for the same month. Rockwell Kent has lost the logic of crusading, even in a pinch, for himself. But he is going to Greenland again next spring.

The Lost Expedition—As Seen From the Inside

such a journey, Andree had taken with him in the Eagle a complete equipment, embracing among other things three sledges, a canvas boat, a tent, a sleeping bag, arms and ammunition and provisions for about six months, etc.

Equipment (including the "scraper") and 440 pounds of the provisions had been thrown overboard during the balloon journey. But the main part of the equipment, weighing together many hundredweight, still remained uninjured in the car which stood there on the ice.

THE week which followed the landing—from July 14 to 21—is spent preparing for the journey over the ice by putting in order the sledges and the boat.

These days, when the three men did not seem to entertain any doubt of a favorable termination to their plan, were, in spite of all the work, calm and filled with a sense of security.

After the exertions of the balloon journey, July 15 and 16 seemed to Strindberg really to be agreeable days. Neither is the party alone on the drift ice. An auk flew past them to the south-southwest; they saw a fulmar and, as early as on July 15, a bear. A fulmar thought nothing of driving away and pursuing one of the pigeons.

On July 16 weather prevails similar to that of the day before, but the fog seems to be denser and the southwesterly wind somewhat stronger. The ice begins its pressings. In the evening there falls the first snow but not in great flakes. The night before July 17 the snow fall continues.

July 17 is passed in the same way. The next day the air is clear and visibility becomes greater. All the pigeons had flown away in the morning.

The three men look out for land but none is seen in any direction. On the other hand, they observe seals and a fulmar.

July 19 begins with the same weather. Andree notices how the nettings of the balloon on the ice have sunk into the 29-inch layer of snow which covers the surface.

Nothing but a great auk is seen to the east of the camp. But the day is to be marked by a great event. At 6 o'clock Andree shoots his first bear. It had come from the northeast. The welcome booty was cut up and the offal thrown into a lead or into a pool of melted snow on the ice. Within half an hour two fulmars make their appearance to enjoy the remains. A great auk, too, swam about in the water near the camp but became afraid and flew off to the north northwest.

On July 20 the weather seems to have been clear and the wind has swung round to the southwest, but the temperature still remains about freezing point. In the sunshine the expedition gets some of its things dry after the fog, drizzle and snow of the previous days.

The next day, July 21, preparations for the ice journey are so far advanced that the sledges can be packed. The canvas boat is tested in the sea with excellent results.

"Nisse" Strindberg now begins his duties as the cook of the party, an occupation fully as responsible as the one he had formerly carried out as astronomer. He fries some pieces of the bear's meat very cleverly over the "Primus" stove.

"Do you want to wash yourself, Nisse?" he is asked.

"Wash myself? No, I washed myself the day before yesterday. What is left is that kind of dirt which sticks on by itself," he replies.

During the week the landing floe, according to Strindberg's observations, (which have now been checked), up to midnight between July 19 and 20 was driven with the current not less than 18 miles in a south-southwesterly direction and, from the time mentioned until the afternoon of July 21, about 4.8 miles to the southeast.

Then begins July 22. There is fog again; a faint south-southwesterly wind is blowing and the temperature keeps between 33 and 32.9 F.

A last hand is put to the packing and about 7 o'clock in the evening the sledges stand ready and the three men are prepared to start.

Then they begin their march. Yes, now they are off! Strindberg wonders if they shall succeed in reaching Cape Flora, for the sledges are very heavy.

Clara Bow's Latest Tumble Into the Spotlight

movies. Her father, Robert Bow, lives in an apartment near by. She has a walled-in cottage at Malibu Beach, which is her retreat.

On the beach at Malibu Clara spent many happy hours with Harry Richman, night club entertainer and actor, to whom she was engaged a year or so ago.

"Harry understood me," the screen star says, "better than most anyone I've ever known." She smiles as she recalls some of the incidents of their affair. "He used to send me lots of presents. Guess what they were. Canned goods! One day he'd send me a case of corn and the next day a case of tomatoes or green peas or something like that. Just like the head of a household providing food for his family. Then one day he sent me an enormous polar bear rug, too big to put in my bedroom. It must have cost him thousands of dollars. I still have it, covering most of the floor in the living room. Of course, he gave me other expensive things, too, as well as phonograph records of all his songs, so I could hear his voice when he was away. Harry is a good boy."

DESPITE her huge income, the admiration of a large section of the movie-going public—she got 32,000 fan letters in one month last year—and the vivacity she displays, Miss Bow declares she is one of the unhappiest young women in the world. She is troubled with insomnia, and sometimes late at night calls for one of her cars and drives for hours, until weariness sends her home. She is lonely, she says—so lonely that she once made the rounds of orphan asylums with the idea of adopting a baby, as some of the other motion picture people had done. She wanted a boy about 2 years old, with blue eyes, black hair and an impudent nose. But when she learned of all the legal steps that had to be taken she abandoned the plan. She tries to be content with her dolls; she has one large one which she holds as she goes to sleep.

On July 29 Clara had a birthday—her twenty-third anniversary, she disclosed. She also had a birthday party, and that, she said, was her first birthday party. She received inexpensive gifts from electricians, carpenters, script girls and other minor studio employes, as well as more costly things from executives and directors. The present she liked best of all was a small water color painting done by a college youth and inscribed to her. "It's just the idea that he did it for me," she said. She framed it and hung it in her bedroom.

Since her attainment of stardom and a big-time salary Miss Bow has helped some of her relatives, particularly her father and "Cousin Bill." The latter has obtained parts in several pictures through her influence, but has failed to make much of an impression on directors.

The Archduchess' Necklace

Mrs. A. G. Coburn of New York, who drove to the Tombs daily to ask if there was anything she could do for him and to see that he had good food.

A group of well-dressed persons, including Mrs. Coburn, was with the Archduke in court. He appeared rather bored with the legal proceedings. After a deliberation of five hours the jury found him not guilty. The Archduke then said that his acquittal spoke well for the administration of justice in the United States.

Other charges against him were dismissed the next week. The Archduke said he might come back to America some day and go into business.

my cough to be healed in a month.

He buttons my jacket and becomes fussy if I am not well covered. After his mother and sisters had put him in bed, they sat down on the left side as usual, but I went to the right side, and he turned his back to the others and began to talk sweetly to me about art.

Wednesday, October 1.—So sad and disgusted. What is the use of writing? Bastien-Lepage gets worse and worse. I cannot work; my painting will not be finished. He is going and he suffers so much. When one is beside him one finds herself breaking loose from the earth. He floats above us. We see people sometimes, they speak to us, but we are not on earth any more. It is a tranquil indifference, a sort of dream. I go there only by custom; it is only his shadow, and I am half a shadow myself. He does not particularly feel my presence. I have not the gift to light his eyes. He is happy to see me, but that is all. He is finished. They will bury me in 1885.

Thursday, October 16.—I have terrible fevers. I am not able to go out, but this poor Bastien-Lepage goes out. He came here, installed himself in a big chair and stretched out his legs on the cushions. I am dressed in a lot of white lace.

"Oh! If I could only paint," he said.

"And me?"

"But our painting is finished!"

Here the "Journal" ends. Marie Bashkirtseff died on the last day of October. Bastien-Lepage followed her several weeks later.

finally, in 1928, induced him to continue his work at Yale as professor of bacteriology.

Thus between the hours of 9 and 7 you will find Dr. d'Herelle in his laboratory on the third floor of the New Haven Hospital, affiliated with the medical school. He speaks with a marked French accent. He is animated, excitable and enthusiastic.

His writings, like those of Pasteur, do not deal with his critics lightly. When he thinks he is right no fiat from reverend authority will budge him. He demands experimental proof. At the same time his more recent writings have frankly acknowledged earlier mistakes. He has none of the European professor's snobbishness or insistence on formality. He is happy to explain his theories to anyone in whom he detects an intelligent interest, even the lowliest laboratory assistant. He has few personal eccentricities such as characterized other great microbe hunters like Metchnikoff* and Ehrlich. He married at 21 and has two grown daughters who live in Paris. Mrs. d'Herelle, consequently, divides her time between Paris and New Haven.

There is no pseudo modesty about the man. He frankly states his belief that further research growing out of his discovery of the bacteriophage will "cause within the biological sciences a revolution comparable to that which the discovery of the electron caused in the physical sciences."

They Called Him the "Wickedest Man in the World"

crimes and vices. But at any rate he was allowed to return peaceably to England in 1919.

He did not stay long. He went to Cefalu in Sicily and there in a house fittingly decorated he practiced religious rites similar to those of Eleusis. England took no cognizance of her "worst man," who went contentedly on cooking little cakes of honey and goat's blood over ancient braziers, while his small band of followers looked worshipfully on. It was not until Crowley published a novel called "The Diary of a Drug Fiend" that the sensational papers came to a realization of what a monster this was. James Douglas, editor of the Sunday Express, led the attack, arriving immediately at the conclusion that this was an autobiographical narrative. Once it had started there was no limit. They accused him of being a white-slaver, of luring wealthy but aging women to Cefalu and there duping and cheating them. They even cited specific instances—a poor little governess from America, and others. Everything he had ever done they dredged up and re-interpreted.

An incident happened that drove them on ten times harder than before. A young man just out of Oxford, Raoul Loveday, became interested in Crowley's experiments in the occult and finally went with his wife, Betty May, to Cefalu. There he died, according to the most recent account given by Betty May in her autobiography, of enteric fever brought on from drinking impure water while on a hiking trip. But when the young wife first returned to England she gave out interviews which, reproduced by the Express, conveyed more than an intimation that Crowley had murdered Loveday. One headline said: "New Sinister Relations of Aleister Crowley. 'Varsity Lad's Death. Enticed to 'Abbey.' Dreadful Ordeal of a Young Wife. Crowley's Plans."

But when the sensational sheet John Bull took up the cry, even this was far exceeded. That paper published a series of articles under the following headlines: "The King of Depravity," "The Wickedest Man in the World," "A Cannibal at Large," "A Man We'd Like to Hang," "A Human Beast Returns."

As a result of this campaign, Crowley was forced to leave Italy. He went to Paris but was permitted to remain there for only a short time. Rumors of religious rites in his Paris apartment were taken up by the sensational press in England and the French police requested him to move on. Back in England he was very unhappy, his money gone, his health poor.

But still he was able to travel. In the past two years people have seen him often in Paris. He talked of suicide and one acquaintance reports seeing him walk deliberately into the path of a speeding motor car which missed him only because of the skill of the driver. He may turn up next in Ceylon or Mexico or even in England where mothers still use his name to quiet unruly children—and, incidentally, where many of the leading literary reviews have given him good notices.

FIE!! M. MAETERLINCK

Consider the Ant and Be Wise Thereafter.

"THE ant," says M. Maurice Maeterlinck, "is incontestably one of the noblest, most courageous, most charitable, most devoted, most generous and most altruistic creatures on earth."

Maybe so—and with all due respect to M. Maeterlinck we doubt it—but even if the ant were all those things we still wouldn't like it.

Our aversion to the ant is deep rooted and incurable. It is the result of many bitter and disillusioning experiences. M. Maeterlinck knows a lot about the ant, but we still beg to differ.

If someone should ever call on us to state what we think of the ant, we have our answer ready. We plan to reply, in no uncertain tone of voice, that we think it the most offensive, irritating, spiteful, malicious, obnoxious, annoying, plaguifying, odious, abominable, disagreeable, pestiferous, rude, ill-favored and all-round unlikeable insect with which we have ever had the misfortune to have any dealings.

In case that doesn't make it clear just how we stand on the ant, we shall add that we think it repulsive.

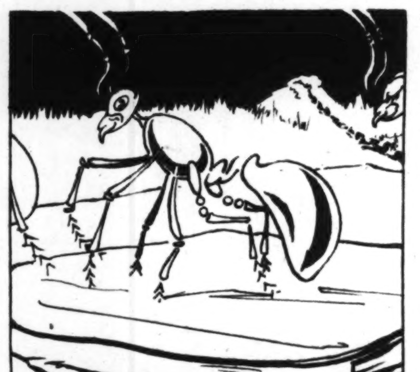
What does a smart man like M. Maeterlinck see in the ant? When there are so many nicer insects around, insects that have some degree of manners, why does he waste his time poring over some old anthill with a magnifying glass?

Even if he took up the gnat in a serious way, it would be more understandable. But the ant! Fie, Dr. Maeterlinck!

Of course he is a Belgian and probably studies Belgian ants. They may possibly have some endearing traits not possessed by the American ant, but we doubt it. An ant is an ant, and away with it, say we.

Even with all its petty meannesses we might have some semblance of respect for the ant if it were not, in the bargain, so ineffably dumb. It can't take a hint. Even a fly, after you chase it around a room and swat at it twenty or thirty times with a folded newspaper, finally gets the idea into its so-called brain that it has worn out its welcome so far as you are concerned. But you never can persuade an ant that it hasn't got the firmest kind of grip on your affections and that your keenest desire isn't always to have it by you.

If you chase an ant off a sandwich at a picnic it shows up a few seconds later in the lettuce and tomato salad, or, prettier still, in the marmalade. If you flick it out of the marmalade, stamp on it with your utmost vigor and then watch with ill-concealed glee what seem to be its death throes, it still will almost inevitably reappear some moments later, apparently in the bloom of antish health. It will probably reappear on your neck, leaving a trail of marmalade as it wends its busy little way up and down behind your collar. The ant just simply won't take no for an answer.



Why can't it be like the bee? Or the spider? We sometimes differ with the manner in which the bee goes about its work, but we do respect it.

At least we know where we stand with the bee, and the bee, on its part, knows where we sit. When the bee accomplishes its mission in life by stinging us it departs immediately, leaving us alone with our sorrow. This is an admirable respect for privacy that is not shared by the ant. The bee makes no attempt to add insult to injury by remaining around the premises to annoy us with hypocritical pretenses that it is still our friend and wants to see more of us. And when in the fortunes of war you bag a bee or a wasp, they die quietly and decently and don't bob up an hour later in the ice cream.

Take the spider. The spider is to be admired, in our opinion, for two reasons. It minds its own business (I am not speaking of the tarantula, mind you) and it eats ants. Not that we hold with the spider in its selection of a diet. In the course of a long, picnic-scarred existence in this vale of tears, we have also eaten ants.

The ant is undoubtedly the most adept of all the insects at getting in between the two layers of a sandwich.

IF WE had ever known we were consuming an ant as part of our picnic nourishment we'd have immediately taken steps to remedy that situation. Not that we aren't always delighted to see an ant depart this life for whatever the ant's hell (they have no heaven), and if violence attends the demise it is especially pleasing. But we personally prefer to keep our digestive tracts free of ants. As a victual, the ant leaves practically everything to be desired.

That is why we maintain our special kennel of trained, ant-eating spiders. Whenever we journey to parts liable to be infested with ants the stable of spiders goes with us. At the seashore, for instance, our pet spiders form a phalanx about us as we sit on the beach, and woe betide any snooping ant that gets within a yard of them.

We may add a first class anteater to the stable later.

POLLY'S POSSIBILITIES

Sulphurous Parrots on the Plane of Big Business.

IT WAS August, 1931, in Montreal, where the National Association of Dog, Cat, Canary, Parrot, Goldfish and Bunny Dealers was holding its forty-second annual convention. The attendance broke all records and included some of America's biggest dog and cat men.

After the preliminaries were over the meeting got down to business with an educational session.

"Gentlemen," said President L. R. Engendorfer, "this, the forty-second annual convention of the N. A. D. C. C. P. G. & B. D., is destined to be one of the most important in our history. Since we met in Quebec a year ago there has been a new and tremendous development. I refer, of course, to the vogue for swearing parrots.

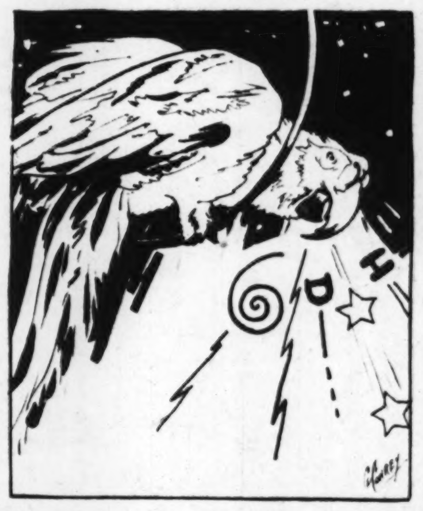
"As this trend has just about revolutionized our industry and we are all anxious to discuss it, I am going to lose no time in calling on our first speaker. He is Mr. Herbert R. Tatwinkle of New Orleans. Mr. Tatwinkle is an expert on parrot merchandising and I know of no man better qualified than he to handle this very vital subject. It is my extreme pleasure and privilege to present Mr. Tatwinkle."

"Mr. President and gentlemen," said Mr. Tatwinkle, when the applause had subsided. "Parrots are selling like wildfire. By parrots I don't mean the polite, drawing room type, the 'Polly wants a cracker' variety, but the uncouth, vituperative grade.

"You all know what lent this great impetus to the parrot game. Some time ago the St. Louis zoo advertised a swearing parrot for sale, got about 600 offers for it and eventually sold it to a man in New York for $140. After that, the whole country became parrot-minded. Pet men everywhere were snowed under with orders for tough parrots from clubs, lodges, fraternities, fire engine stations, lonely ranchers, cavalry troopers, bond salesmen, forest rangers, and, gentlemen, many other institutions and individuals.

"Gentlemen, my parrot business in the last six months was five times what it was in the same period of 1930, and I fully believe that the last quarter of the year will usher in the greatest parrot demand in history. Naturally, the big problem facing me and every other man in the industry is how to maintain an adequate stock.

"When this fad first appeared, I realized it would reach gigantic proportions. I acted. The first thing I did was to hold a close-out sale of bunnies, canaries, lovebirds and goldfish. This sale soon emptied a large part of my store and I used the vacated space in trebling my parrot department.



"But where to get the parrots? Well, I sent my buyers down to the wharf to meet the incoming tramp steamers. They collared sailors that got off of these steamers and in this way rounded up 25 parrots that could cuss like taxi drivers in a traffic jam. We locked up these high-powered parrots with 150 ordinary parrots. The inevitable happened. The seafaring birds taught the others how to express themselves forcibly and I soon had my business going like clockwork.

"After a parrot has learned how to cuss proficiently we take it out of the schoolroom and put it in the store with a price tag on it. Prices vary according to the extent of the vocabulary and the bird's inclination to use it. Frequent repeaters bring comparatively low prices. On the other hand, I have several choice parrots that know a wild sea chanty of 15 verses, no two alike, and they run into heavy dough."

"I would like to ask a question," said a delegate at the far end of the hall. "What happens when a parrot refuses to swear after it's delivered?"

"I'm glad you brought that up," said Mr. Tatwinkle. "Now and then we get complaints about this. In most cases it is simply that the bird hasn't had time to get accustomed to its surroundings. People expect to be greeted right away with 'As for you, you big bum, you can do so-and-such,' or something of the sort. We urge our customers to be patient and give the parrot at least a two weeks' trial. If the trial brings no results we permit them to exchange their merchandise."

"What do you do with returned parrots?"

"WE PUT them back in the schoolroom for further seasoning," said Mr. Tatwinkle. "It's also our custom to keep our trade-ins there."

"Trade-ins?'

"Certainly, trade-ins. Certainly, gentlemen; trade-ins are trade-ins. We give our customers a liberal trade-in allowance on their old parrots."

"Would you consider taking somebody's pet and teaching it how to use unpollymentary language?"

"Yes, we're working on that proposition now," said Mr. Tatwinkle. "We plan to educate soft-tongued parrots and give their owners rental parrots during the process. After a pet has received its degree we would return it and take back our rental. We haven't started this department yet, but expect to have it in operation very shortly and I will be able to tell you more about it at our convention next year in Toronto."

THE NEVER-ENDING SEARCH OF EGYPT'S ANCIENT RUINS

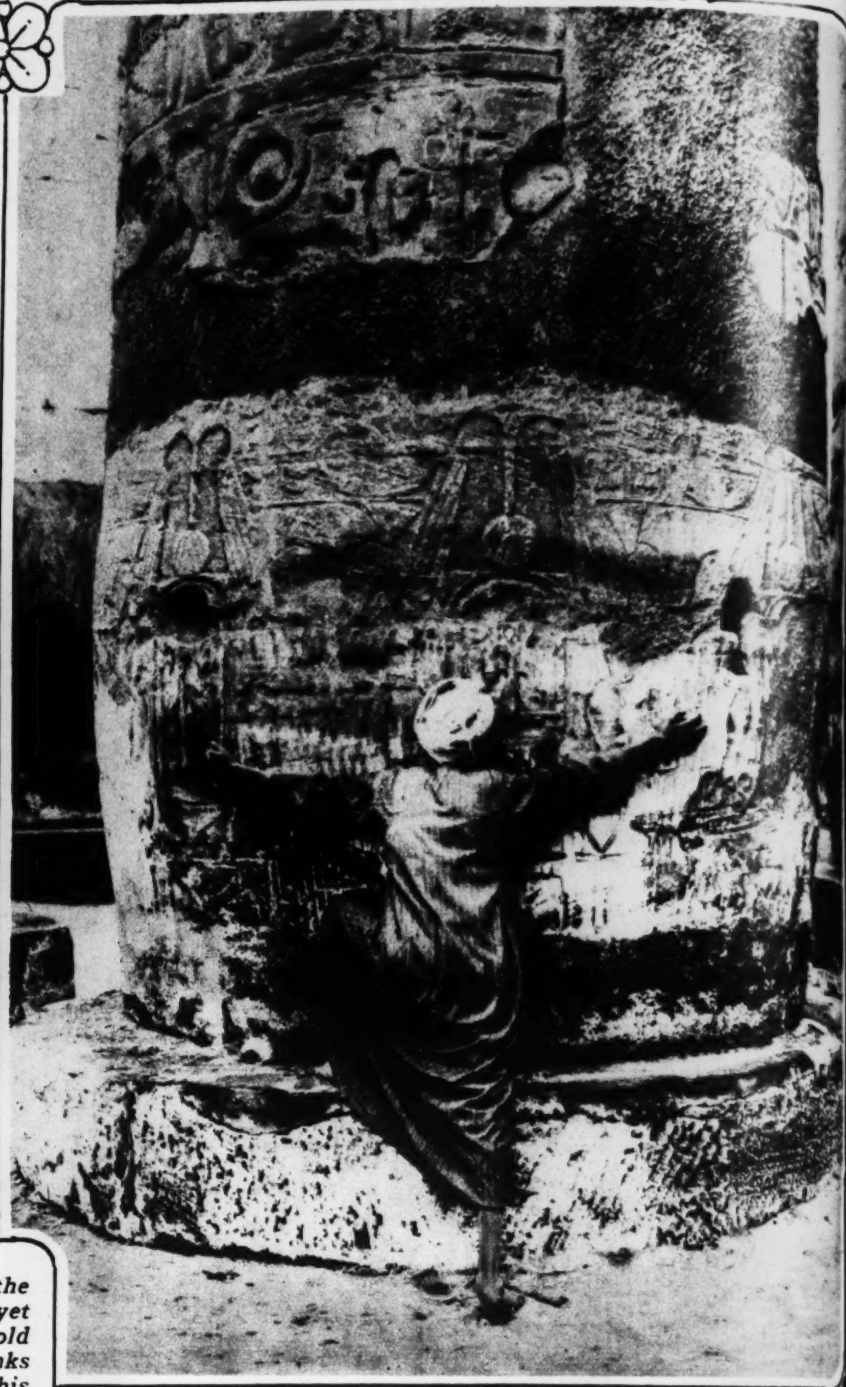
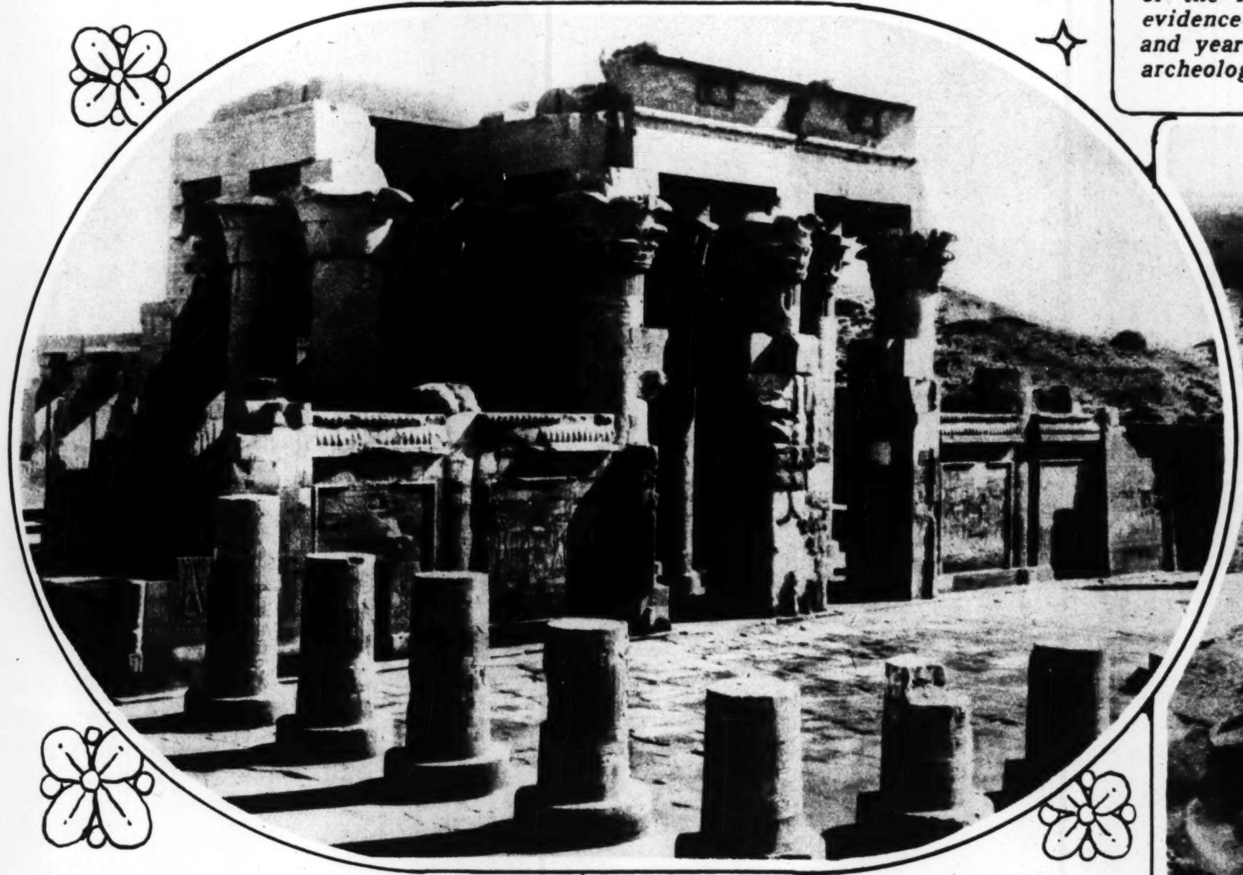
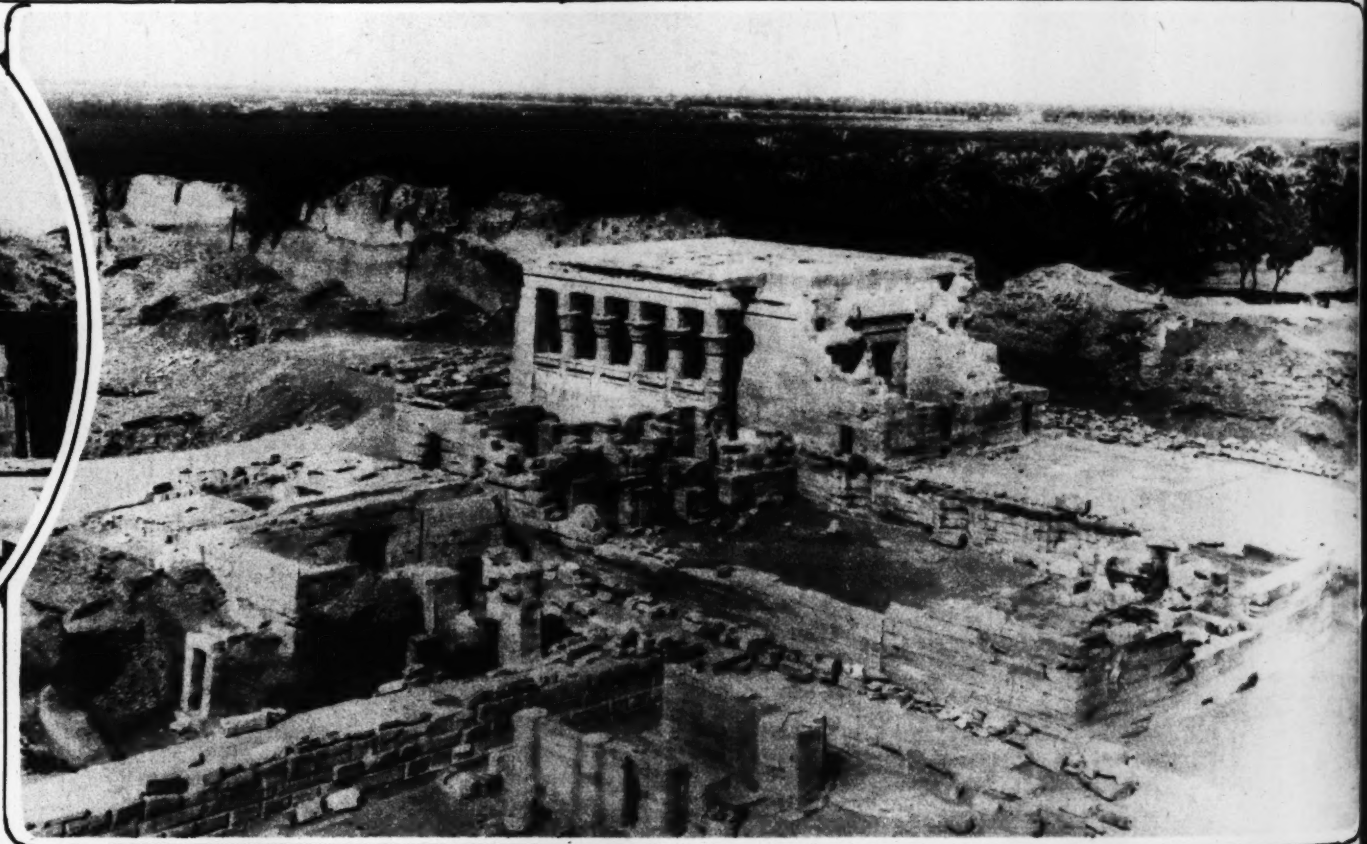
A series of photographs, taken recently by the Associated Press, showing those crumbling, yet impressive records in granite of the very old civilization which once held sway on the banks of the Nile. The work of uncovering this evidence goes steadily on, month after month, and year after year, under the supervision of archeologists.



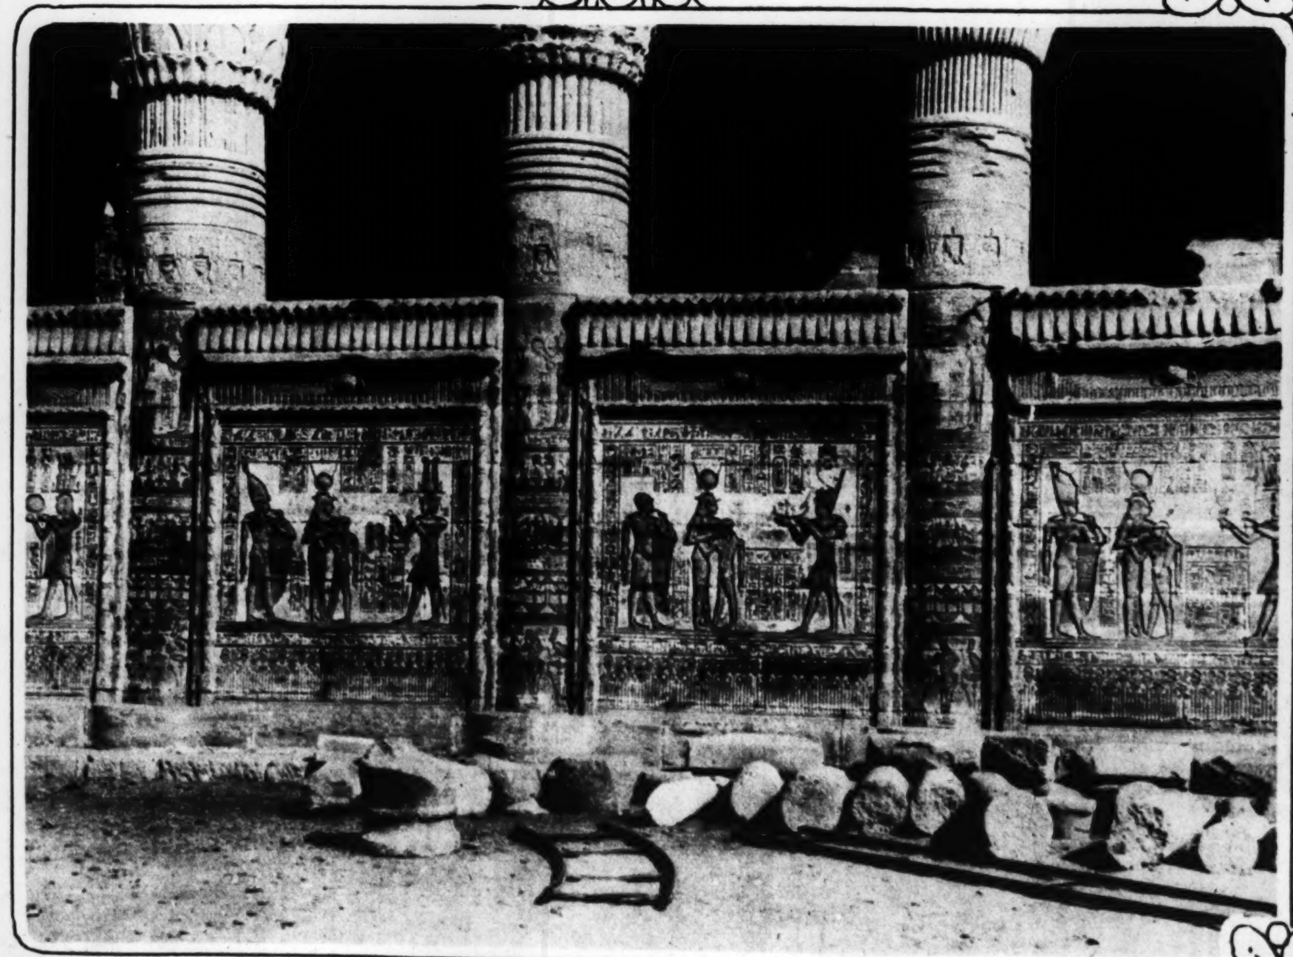
A column in the Temple of Karnak. Considering the old Egyptians had no powerful engines, such as man uses today, it was no mean task for them to raise such huge shafts of stone.



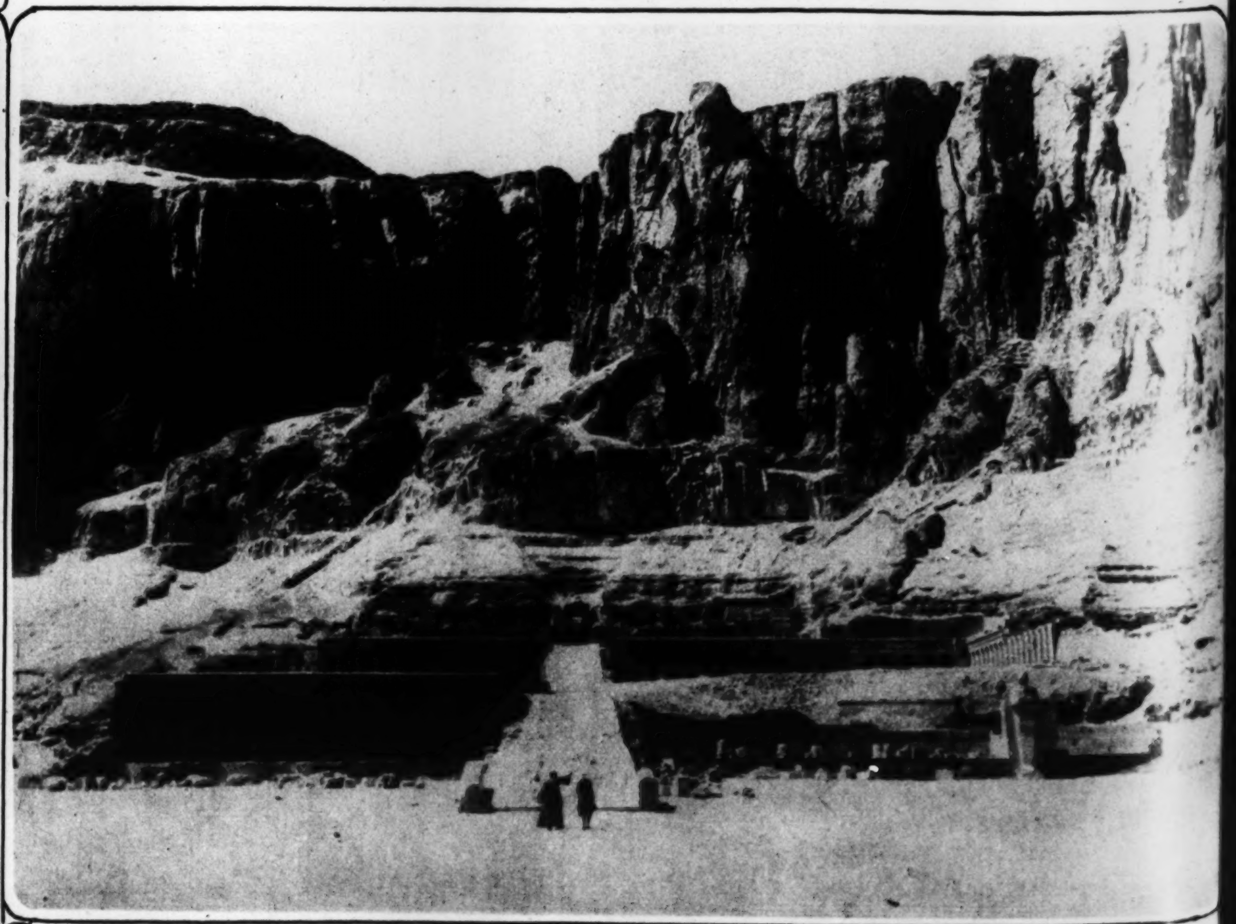
The great court of the Temple at Thebes. It was in use by rulers of 30 centuries ago.



Some of the restored ruins in Luxor. Beyond is the plain in the valley of the Nile.



Exquisite reliefs on the House of Creation at Luxor. The early Egyptians knew nothing of perspective in drawing.



Slowly, but with the greatest of care, archeologists are clearing away the rubbish and sand covering some of the finest examples of early Egyptian architecture. Here is the Temple of Der-El-Bahari, containing the tomb of a queen, slowly emerging into the light.

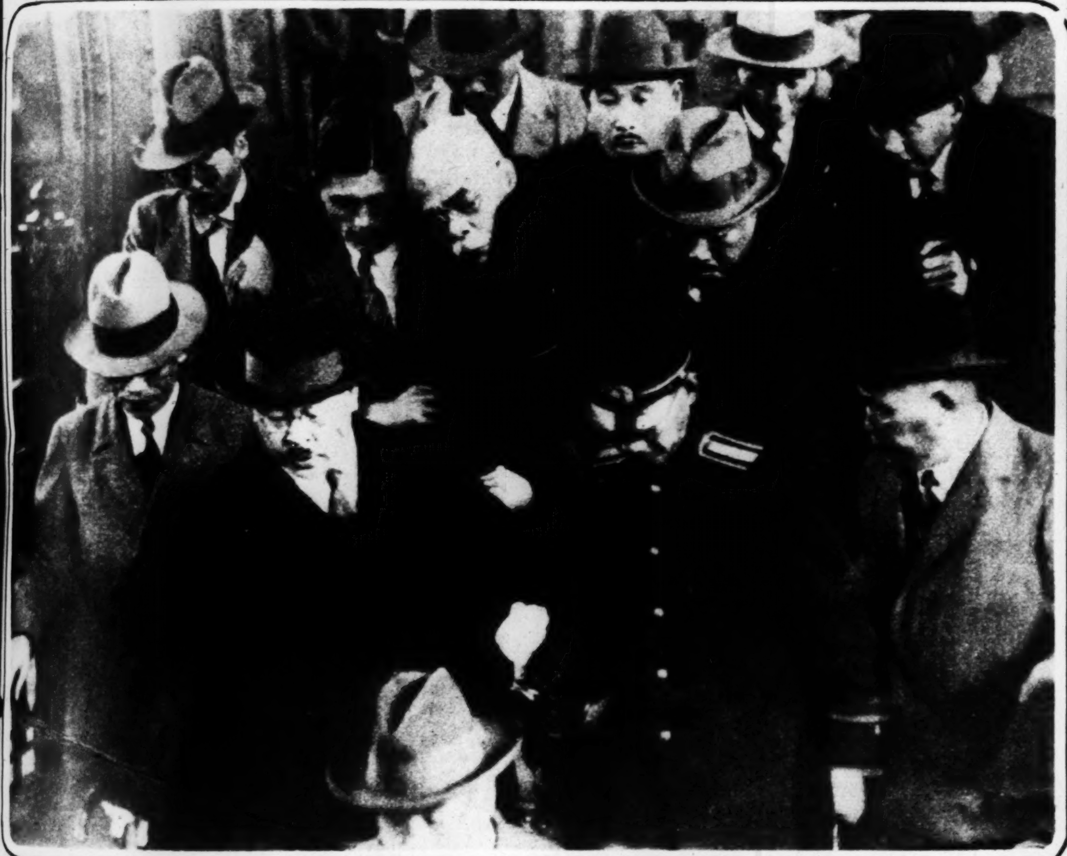
"SPEAKING OF PROHIBITION"—A painting by Charles Dana Gibson put on exhibition at the New York Academy of Design this winter. The artist's idea, apparently, is that there is none.



PREMIER STRICKEN BY FANATIC'S BULLET—Snapshot of Hamaguchi just after being hit by bullet from revolver fired by a 25-year-old member of reactionary society in Japan. The aged statesman has recovered.

Brown felt and velvet beret with trimmings of artificial feathers resembling astrakhan.

This comic appears every day in one of the TWO comic pages of the daily Post-Dispatch

AH, BACK AT LAST, EH? MY WORD, I WAITED AND WAITED. YOU SAID YOU'D BE BACK IN ONE MINUTE, AND— LISTEN, ARE YOU GOING AWAY AGAIN?
FOR A MOMENT. WATCH THOSE BUNDLES. YOU HAVE SIXTEEN. DON'T LOSE ANY.
THE IDEA OF HANDING ME THREE MORE BUNDLES AND THEN — OH, OH, I DROPPED ONE.
OOSH!
'AT'S WHAT I SAID. WHAT'S THE IDEA OF YOU BUSTING A BIG TAXPAYER IN THE EYE WITH THAT BUNDLE?
LISTEN, WE'VE BOTH GOT AN ARMFUL OF TROUBLE. WHY ASK FOR MORE? AND—DON'T GET TOUGH WITH ME!
LET GO OF MY HAIR. AND LET ME GET CLOSER TO YOU. FIGHT LIKE A MAN. OR—LISTEN, USE THE SKULL. YOU'RE JUST A LITTLE MAN WITH BIG IDEAS. IF I LET GO OF YOUR HAIR WILL YOU PICK UP YOUR BUNDLES AND BE ON YOUR WAY?
HEY! STOP! COME BACK! HEY! I THINK I PICKED UP A FEW OF YOUR BUNDLES BY MISTAKE. HEY!
HE BUMPED INTO ME, OFFICER, AND THEN WHEN I SORT OF SLIPPED AND LOOKED LIKE I WAS GONNA SOCK HIM HE BUSTED ME.
LISTEN OFFICER, WE CAN SETTLE THIS BETWEEN US IF YOU'LL JUST LOOK THE OTHER WAY FOR ONE—
PICK UP YOUR BUNDLES. BOTH OF YOU. AND BEHAVE, OR ELSE—
SUCH CRUST! AND I KNOW I GOT FOUR OR FIVE OF HIS BUNDLES IN THE EXCITEMENT TOO. I SHOULD HAVE.... LET ME THINK..? ABOUT TWENTY. I'VE GOT TWENTY SIX.
WELL IT'S EASY ENOUGH TO GET RID OF THE ODD ONES. I CAN LOSE 'EM THE SAME WAY I GOT 'EM. HERE COMES A BABY WITH A LOT OF BUNDLES NOW.
OOPS!
BEG YOUR PARDON. SO SORRY. BUT ACCIDENTS WILL HAPPEN.
PERFECTLY O. K. KID. NO HARM DONE. WELL LET'S GRAB OUR BUNDLES.
LISTEN FRIEND, I'M POSITIVE YOU'RE GIVING ME AWAY MORE THAN MY SHARE OF THESE BUNDLES. PLEASE DON'T—TAKE JUST ONE MORE. I KNOW IT'S YOURS. NO, DON'T PUSH IT TOWARDS ME. IT'S YOURS POSITIVELY.
MY WORD. NOW I'VE GOT TWENTY NINE. I'M AT LEAST TWO OR THREE OVER. WELL I'LL GET RID OF THEM. HERE COMES ANOTHER... OH, OH!
HERE SHE IS!
THE IDEA! HOW MANY BUNDLES DID I SAY YOU SHOULD HAVE? I KNOW POSITIVELY THAT IT WASN'T AS MANY AS YOU HAVE. AND THEY LOOK DIFFERENT. BIGGER. AND—
LISTEN JO, DON'T WORRY ABOUT THE BUNDLES. HAVE YOU ANY MORE SHOPPING TO DO? I CAN WAIT. GO AHEAD. I'LL WAIT. RIGHT HERE.

THE NEXT EVENT WILL BE FANCY FIGURE CUTTING IN ICE! CECIL SMART IS THE FIRST PERFORMER!

THAT AIN'T A FAIR HOLE! ONLY CHAMPION GOLFERS CAN DRIVE A GOLF BALL ACROSS THAT RAVINE ONTO THE FOURTH GREEN! I'VE GOT ONE GOLF BALL LEFT SO I'M GONNA USE DISCRETION!
I AIN'T KIDDING MYSELF! THE ONLY WAY I CAN GET A GOLF BALL OVER THAT RAVINE IS TO CARRY IT! I'LL DROP THE PILL AND PUTT IT INTO THE CUP AND TELL JEFF I MADE IT IN TWO!
